"My lord's caprices," Ferrari wrote, "have kept us perpetually on the move. He is becoming incurably restless. I suspect he is uneasy in his mind. Painful recollections, I should say—I find him constantly reading old letters, when her ladyship is not present. We were to have stopped at Genoa, but he hurried us on. The same thing at Florence. Here, at Rome, my lady insists on resting. Her brother has met us at this place. There has been a quarrel already, the lady's maid tells me, between my lord and the baron. The latter wanted to borrow money of the former. His lordship refused in language which offended Baron Rivar. My lady pacified them and made them shake hands."

The third and last letter was from Venice.

"More of my lord's economy! Instead of staying at the hotel we have hired a damp, moldy, rambling old palace. My lady insists on having the best suite of rooms wherever we go—and the palace comes cheaper for a two months' term. My lord tried to get it for longer; he says the quiet of Venice is good for his nerves. But a foreign speculator has secured the palace and is going to turn it into a hotel. The baron is still with us, and there have been more disagreements about money matters. I don't like the baron—and I don't find the attractions of my lady grow on me. She was much nicer before the baron joined us. My lord is a punctual paymaster; it's a matter of honor with him; he hates parting with his money, but he does it because he has given his word. I receive my salary regularly at the end of each month—not a franc extra, though I have done many things which are not part of a courier's proper work. Fancy the baron trying to borrow money of me! He is an inveterate gambler. I didn't believe it when my lady's maid first told me so—but I have seen enough since to satisfy me that she was right. I have seen other things besides, which—well! which don't increase my respect for my lady and the baron. The maid says she means to give warning to leave. She is a respectable British female, and doesn't take things quite so easily as I do. It is a dull life here. No going into company—no company at home—not a creature sees my lord—not even the consul or the banker. When he goes out he goes alone, and generally toward nightfall. Indoors he shuts himself up in his own room with his books, and sees as little of his wife and the baron as possible. I fancy things are coming to a crisis here. If my lord's suspicions are once awakened the consequences will be terrible. Under certain provocations the noble Montbarry is a man who would stick at nothing. However, the pay is good—and I can't afford to talk of leaving the place, like my lady's maid."

Agnes handed back the letters—so suggestive of the penalty paid already for his own infatuation by the man who had deserted her—with feelings of shame and distress, which made her no fit counselor for the helpless woman who depended on her advice.

"The one thing I can suggest," she said, after first speaking some kind words of comfort and hope, "is that we should consult a person of greater experience than ours. Suppose I write and ask my lawyer (who is also my friend and trustee) to come and advise us to-morrow after his business hours?"

Emily eagerly and gratefully accepted the suggestion. An hour was arranged for the meeting on the next day; the correspondence was left under the care of Agnes, and the courier's wife took her leave.

Weary and heart sick, Agnes lay down on the sofa, to rest and compose herself. The careful nurse brought in the reviving cup of tea. Her quaint gossip about herself and her occupations while Agnes had been away, acted as a relief to her mistress' overburdened mind. They were still talking quietly, when they were startled by a loud knock at the house door. Hurried footsteps ascended the stairs. The door of the sitting room was thrown open violently; the courier's wife rushed in like a madwoman.

"He's dead! they've murdered him!" Those wild words were all she could say. She dropped on her knees at the foot of the sofa—held out her hand, with something clasped in it—and fell back in a swoon.

The nurse, signing to Agnes to open the windows, took the necessary measures to restore the fainting woman. "What's this?" she exclaimed. "Here's a letter in her hand. See what it is, miss."

The open envelope was addressed (evidently in a feigned handwriting) to "Mrs. Ferrari," the postmark was "Venice." The contents of the envelope were a sheet of foreign note paper, and a folded inclosure.

On the note paper, only one line was written. It was again in a feigned handwriting, and it contained these words:

"To console you for the loss of your husband."

Agnes opened the inclosure next.

It was a Bank of England note for a thousand pounds.

CHAPTER VI.

The next day the friend and legal adviser of Agnes Lockwood, Mr. Troy, called on her by appointment in the evening.

Mrs. Ferrari—still persisting in the conviction of her husband's death—had sufficiently recovered to be present at the consultation. Assisted by Agnes, she told the lawyer the little that was known relating to Ferrari's disappearance, and then produced the correspondence connected with that event. Mr. Troy read (first) the three letters addressed by Ferrari to his wife; (secondly) the letter written by Ferrari's courier friend, describing his visit to the palace and his interview with Lady Montbarry; and (thirdly) the one line of anonymous writing which had accompanied the extraordinary gift of a thousand pounds to Ferrari's wife.

Well known, at a later period, as the lawyer who acted for Lady Lydiard, in the case of theft, generally described as the case of "My Lady's Money," Mr. Troy was not only a man of learning and experience in his profession—he was also a man who had seen something of society at home and abroad. He possessed a keen eye for character, a quaint humor, and a kindly nature, which had not been deteriorated even by a lawyer's professional experience of mankind. With all these personal advantages, it is a question, nevertheless, whether he was the fittest adviser whom Agnes could have chosen under the circumstances. Little Mrs. Ferrari, with many domestic merits, was an essentially commonplace woman. Mr. Troy was the last person living who was likely to attract her sympathies—he was the exact opposite of a commonplace man.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

Another Railway Project.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Mail writes:—"Notice is given of application for a charter to construct and operate a line of railway commencing at or near Port Hope, thence through the counties of Ontario, York, Simcoe and Dufferin to a point near the town of Durham, Grey County, with power to extend to Lake Huron at or near Kincardine and Southampton."

A Through Line.

Mr. C. J. Bailey, the well known engineer, is at present engaged, the Port Hope Times says, in surveying a line from Parry Sound District towards Lindsay, the object being to connect with the Midland division of the Grand Trunk at the most favorable point. The line will form the Grand Trunk through route via Sault St. Marie, in connection with the Northern Pacific Railway to the Pacific ocean.

Evening Entertainment.

The regular weekly meeting of the Young People's Association in connection with the George Street Methodist Church was held on Monday evening, Mr. Bean, President, in the chair. A programme was presented. The first piece was a piano solo by Miss Wrighton, which was much appreciated. Miss Dame gave a vocal solo and a recitation by Miss Fife followed. The chairman announced the event of the evening—ten minutes intermission for a social chat. The second part of the programme was made up of a song by Mr. Wilfred Daly, a recitation by Mr. Scott and a piano solo by Miss Gussie Daly. There was a large attendance at the meeting, and all seemed to have spent a pleasant evening.

Obituary.

David McFadden, a young man 25 years of age, died of consumption at the residence of his father, Mr. Martin McFadden, on Monday. Four months ago he contracted a cold in New York which settled upon his lungs and developed in the desease which caused his death. The deceased was a printer. He learned his trade in the REVIEW office and after serving five years went to the United States. He was prominent among the craft wherever he went. Among the positions of trust he occupied was the Presidency of the Rochester branch of the International Typographical Union. The funeral will take place at half past nine o'clock to-morrow morning and proceed to the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

Dropped Dead.

The Port Hope Times says:—"On Sunday evening William Mitchell, while at the house of Mrs. Green, Walton street, where he was in the habit of dropping in to chat, died in a chair. He was an old man, seventy-two years of age, and had lived in Port Hope a great number of years. He had no relatives and an almost unfurnished room in Riordan's block was his lonely home. He procured a precarious subsistence by grinding scissors, sharpening razors and mending china and glassware. He had often said that he hoped when death came to him it would come suddenly. He had no one to care for him, and should he get so feeble as not to be able to attend to his wants, he would, he said, go home to England; for this last journey to the land of his nativity the poor old man out of his meagre earnings had scraped a sufficiency But his hopes were realized and death came to him suddenly. The cause is supposed to have been heart disease, and the debility of old age and insufficient care. His remains will receive proper burial by citizens of the town. He has one son living in Peter-

The New Post Office.

Post-Master Rogers expects to move into his new house, on the corner of Hunter and Water streets, by the middle of December. The contractor for the erection of the building has finished his work and the only thing now required is the heating aparatus. Messrs. McAndrew and Noble have the contract for the hot water fittings and as the boilers are now on the premises the work of placing the pipe in position will be done without delay. There will be some change in the mode of doing business when the new office is occupied. No postage stamps will be sold by the postmaster. The contract for selling stamps will be awarded to an outside person, a special office for whom has been fitted up near the main entrance. The box accommodation has been increased considerably, there being two hundred and fifty more in the new post office than in the old. The locks are made in Montreal and those with the boxes are very handsome. The newspaper men have not been forgotten. Drawers have been provided for them which will hold about a cart load of mail matter. People need not take serious notice of this fact and write long letters to the editor, however. One device has been forgotten in providing accommodation for the newspapers. There has been absolutely no precaution taken for keeping out spring poetry from the newspaper boxes. With this exception everything is as neat and handy as it could be. Post Master Rogers says that to prevent a lot of inconvenience he intends to assign the people boxes of the same number as they now hold in the old office. This will be better for both the people and the clerks Mr. John Irwin, the caretaker, has entered upon his duties.

Progressing Towards Completion.

Work on the Hall, Innes & Co. block is being pushed forward and the palatial house made ready for occupation. The outside work is completed, except the placing in position of the large plate glass, which is now being done. The inside glass of the large show windows is in, as is also the plate glass in the second storey front. The heating apparatus is being put in and painters and paper hangers are at work. Shelving is up in the carpet show room and in the main store. The elevated cash desk in the centre of the store, which will be the centre of cash railways with six stations, is finished with curved stairs leading up to the desk. An office in the rear of the store for the head of the firm has been finished, and beside it is one fitted up for the cutter. The elevator which runs from the basement to the top of the premises, is in position and will be running this week. The millinery and mantle show room in the second story are being papered, and the walls of the customers' parlor, lunch room and wash room are already decorated, as is the large room for oil cloths and reserve carpets. The stairs to the third storey are completed, and the storeroom on the third flat for laces and other goods is almost ready, as well as the work rooms. A large sign, of raised gilt letters, adorns the top of the building. Even in the chaotic state in which the premises now are they show that Messrs. Hall, Innes & Co. will have an excellent place of business, large, comfortable, convenient and magnificent. The large windows and side lights, making the whole front of glass, will afford plenty of light on the first flat, while on the second story there are large plate glass lights and in the third large ornamental windows. The firm expect to open out in these premises on the 10th of next month. The part of the block occupied by Mr. Robinson as the Metropolitan Grocery is undergoing transformation, as the workman are making many changes and improvements that will add to the convenience of the store.

THE GRAND JUNCTION SUIT.

Further Particulars as to the Cablegram Received in Toronto.

The following paragraph appears in to-day's Mail:—"The Peterborough papers claim that in the item which appeared in the Mail of Saturday about the decision given by the Privy Council in the case of the Grand Junction Railway v. the county of Peterborough, 'judgment reversed' should read 'judgment reserved.' A member of the firm of Blake, Lash, Cassels & Holman, solicitors for Mr. E. O. Bickford, was seen in reference to the case, and he showed a cablegram which justified the statements already made. The two main points in the case were that the by-law granting the bonus was not valid, and that the corporation or Grand Junction Railway Company was not good or legally constituted by charter. In giving a decision on these points the Privy Council held that the by-law was valid and that the corporation was good. The cablegram read, 'By-law valid; corporation good; final judgment reserved.' Any further judgment that can be given therefore will only affect the question of costs." This puts a different face on the matter. If the Privy Council have decided these two points in favour of the plaintiff the county's chances are not worth much.

Lakefield Lumber Company.

Letters patent under the great seal of the Province of Ontario have been issued incorporating the Lakefield Lumber and Manufacturing Company with a capital stock of $300,000. The first directors are Messers. Roland C. Strickland, Percy W. Strickland, C. J. Blomfield, W. H. Casement and F. B. Barlee, all of Lakefield. The objects of the company are to acquire the mills, limits and business of Messrs. R. & G. Strickland, to carry on the business heretofore carried on by them, and to more thoroughly develop the Lakefield water power. The chief place of business will be at Lakefield.

Local Brevities.

—Quietness prevailed at the Police headquarters this morning.

—Outside work having been finished at Hall, Innes & Co.'s block the sidewalk has been replaced. The convenience will be appreciated by pedestrians.

—A meeting to organize a snow shoe club will be held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Thursday evening. The President of the Association will occupy the chair and the Secretary will read a paper on snow shoeing.

—There is a rumor abroad that a prominent town barrister contemplates doing something serious. His action is likely to add one to Peterborough's population and cause a certain lady to change her name.

—The body of Mrs. McGuire, wife of Mr. Thos. McGuire, who died at Bracebridge on Saturday, was brought to town on the noon Grand Trunk train to-day. Mr. McGuire had removed from Peterborough to Bracebridge last spring. The funeral will be held to-morrow.

—"Taking Down the Awning" is a comedy, in two acts, now on the boards before many a shop in town. Act I introduced the great step-ladder scene, with revolving assistants. Act II—Grand finale, including daring flight of operator and collapse of awning and fixtures.

The Canadian Manufacturer complains of vagueness in a notice in the REVIEW of a change in the proprietorship of a Norwood industry. The Manufacturer has not been as observant as usual, for the names of the new firm and the place they came from were given in this paper.

Dwellers Under the Wharves.

"The river gangs are mostly broken up now, still you would be surprised to know how many wharf rats there are at present on the water front of New York." So said Capt. Smith, of the police boat Patrol.

From the captain it was learned that no less than hundreds of men and boys live or rather lodge under the rough planks of wharves. Some of them are pirates in a small way and own boats of their own. Others are knights of the tomato can order, and crawl under some favorite plank to rest their weary bodies and court sweet sleep beside the swashing river.

"They are a kind of amphibious animal," said the captain, "and if they only were as fond of the external application of water as they are of living near it, it might pass for human. As it is, some of the most dangerous men in New York are wharf rats."—New York Star.

A Herd of Buffaloes.

It is stated that C. J. Jones, of Garden City, Kan., has been hunting over eastern New Mexico and western Texas for buffaloes, and has succeeded in capturing thirty calves and one cow. These will be placed with the rest of his herd, making forty in all, and the largest now in the United States. They will be run on Mr. Jones' ranch, near Garden City. Mr. Jones believes that by crossing the buffalo with certain breeds of cattle, a new and more hardy variety of stock will be the result. His efforts in this direction will be watched with interest by stockmen from all sides.—Chicago Times.

Practice for Quick Shots.

The season for revolver practice has opened with new and novel features in revolver shooting. One of them is the Wimbledon target. This target was used in the recent revolver matches of the National Rifle association of Great Britain to test the quickness as well as the accuracy of the marksmen. It is formed into a rough outline of the human figure and is exposed to view only five seconds at a time. The chest is the bull's eye, while minor points are obtained by hitting the head and limbs. —New York Times.

For Rickets, Marasmus, and all Wasting Disorders of Children

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is unequaled. The rapidity with which children gain flesh and strength upon it is very wonderful. "I have used Scott's Emulsion in cases of Rickets and Marasmus of long standing. In every case the improvement was marked."—J. M. MAIN, M.D., New York. Put up in 50c and $1 size.

A TRAVELLING ISLAND.

It Slides Across the River from Missouri to Illinois.

A Springfield, Ill., special to the Chicago Tribune, Nov. 12, says:—The arguments were concluded before Judge Gresham to-day in the suit of ex-State Treasurer Rutz against Benjamin Seeger and the city of St. Louis. The court allowed three weeks for the filing of additional printed arguments and took the case under advisement. The points involved are novel and interesting. Arsenal Island formerly lay west of the main channel of the Mississippi river just in front of the centre of the city of St. Louis and belonged to that city. It contains about 300 acres. The city gave Seeger a nominal lease to the island and put him in possession to take charge of it. Gradually the island moved away from its original anchorage, slid down the river, crossing the channel in its progress, and halted on the Illinois side just off land in St. Clair County owned by Edmund Rutz. It assumed this position about 1876. Then in its work of river improvement, the Government built a dike from the head of the island to the Illinois shore and by natural deposits the remaining space between the island and the original western line of Rutz's farm has been entirely filled up so that the water's edge is now not at Rutz's original western boundary, but at the west side of what was once Arsenal Island. In 1884 Rutz brought suit in the St. Clair County Circuit Court to eject Seeger from possession, claiming all accretion on this shore frontage and riparian ownership to the centre of the river. The corporation of the city of St. Louis appeared in court at Belleville, was made a defendant in the suit as the actual owner, and had the case transferred to the Federal Court in this city. The defence is that the island has merely impinged upon Rutz's farm, is not a natural accretion, and is entitled to move on again if the Government will take its dike away; that it rests there as a deposit upon the bottom, and that Rutz never had any ownership in the bottom of the stream, but owned only to the water's edge as it stood before the island migrated from Missouri to Illinois. The books present no case like this, and its decision will be an original contribution to American jurisprudence.

A GOOD TONIC.

DR. R. WILLIAMS, Le Roy, N. Y., says: "It is a good general tonic and worthy of trial."

HALIBURTON.

HIGH TAXES.—The collector is going around. Our taxes this year are 5½ cents on the dollar! How's that for high?

HORSE RACE.—The trotting race between Mr. J. Anderson's pony Indian Bob and Mr. Conway's mare Kate, quarter mile, best 2 in 3 heats, for $100 aside, was a walk-over for Indian Bob, Mr. Conway declining to trot his mare The stakes were, according to agreement, handed over to the driver of Indian Bob.

SPORT.—The village hunters have had good sport of late. There has been a large number of deer close to the village, driven probably from their old haunts by the forest fires of the summer. During the last few days no less than seven deer have been killed within a mile of our village postoffice. That's the sort of postoffice our's is.

FOOT RACE.—The foot race between H. Walling, of this village, and George Barry, of Fenelon Falls, for $50 a side, came off on the 10th inst. It was a very easy victory for the Haliburton man, who beat his opponent by some 100 yards. The course was rather sloppy on account of a heavy snow storm falling during the night. The day was extremely stormy. There was a large number of spectators from all parts; many ladies being present notwithstanding the severe weather. Quite a large amount of money changed hands.—Independent.

A THREE HOURS' SESSION.

THE COMMISSIONERS AT WASHINGTON BEGIN THEIR LABORS.

Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Tupper Are Receiving Much Social Attention in the American Capital—The Canadian Club's Invitation.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 22.—The Fisheries Commission held its first formal session at 2 o'clock to-day, at which it is supposed protocols or briefs would doubtless be exchanged and the plan of campaign on either side exposed to view. The conference lasted until after 5 o'clock, which is an indication that no time is to be wasted by the negotiators. The smallest amount of interest is manifested by the general public, although all free born American citizens are supposed to be absorbed in politics whenever an opportunity presents itself. When fishery matters are mentioned by those outside of the officials directly interested it is to pass an opinion on such side issues as Commercial Union or the purchase of the maritime portion of Canada. The latter fad seems the more popular of the two, and the question "What do you think of Atkinson's solution?" is the first one that is put when Canadian affairs are mentioned. Atkinson and Butterworth have each attained a certain notoriety by their suggestion, but there is a nervous sentiment in American circles that John Bull will never consent to such humiliation of national prestige as either solution would necessarily entail.

The fears expressed with regard to Mr. Chamberlain's reception are wholly dissipated, and both he and Sir Charles Tupper are receiving all that social attention which is so characteristic of Washington society. A large number of senators and representatives are already here, and preparations for the opening of Congress are rapidly maturing. The pulse of popular opinion has been accelerated by the elections already held, and the coming session is expected to be a stormy one in which the issues of the approaching campaign will be fully ventilated.

The sub-committee of the Senate Finance Committee have to-day been considering the vexed question of undervaluation of imports. During the past season they have been taking testimony at all the leading ports of entry which has confirmed formerly existing suspicions of huge frauds by undervaluation and bogus invoices. The present mode is to have such matters adjusted by boards of merchants at each port, but this scheme is now in disrepute and there is every likelihood that the Canadian plan will be substituted, a permanent plan arranged and a permanent board of Government appraisers appointed. Whatever conclusions are arrived at will probably be taken up at once by the Senate and attached to any tariff bill which may be brought before the House, or if no such bill is introduced it will be brought as an independent measure.

The Canadian Club's Invitation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Sir Chas. Tupper and Hon. J. S. D. Thompson have written from Washington to the Canadian Club accepting an invitation to the banquet which is to be tendered Mr. Chamberlain and the other commissioners in New York at a date in December to be fixed upon.

The First Sitting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The first formal conference between the English commissioners and the American negotiators upon the fisheries question was held to-day in the diplomatic reception room at the Department of State. The session opened promptly at 2 o'clock, all of the negotiators being present with the two secretaries, Messrs. Moore and Bergne, and was extended till late in the afternoon.

The conference was a long and full one, lasting until 5.10, when an adjournment was had until Monday next.

THEY WANT FACTS ONLY.

Preliminary Meeting of the Labor Commission in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.

A preliminary meeting of the Labor Commission was held last night in Shaftesbury Hall. These members were present; Judge Armstrong of Sorel, chairman; J. A. Clark of Carlton, N.B.; John Armstrong, S. R. Heakes, of Toronto; Jules Helbronner of Montreal, and A. T. S. Freed of Hamilton.

The object of the meeting, the chairman stated, was to arrange for receiving evidence from the representatives of labor organizations and other classes. Under its authority the Commission could compel the attendance of witnesses, but the Commission preferred to have one or two representatives selected by the labor organizations to present the evidence they desired to have laid before them.

Mr. J. E. Pell of the St. George's Society asked if the Commission's scope of inquiry included immigration matters. If so, it would be as well to have it so understood, so that charitable organizations could be heard.

The chairman replied that the Commission had ample powers to inquire into such matters. Meetings will be held in the evenings, so as to enable workingmen to attend without loss of time.

Mr. John Armstrong suggested that the afternoon sessions be devoted to examining employers as far as possible.

The chairman stated the Commission would facilitate witnesses by fixing the time for their appearance.

Mr. Freed said the Commission would have to examine a number of witnesses, and there was a large amount of work to be done. If it was done well it would take a long time. The Commission's duty was to collect evidence to be laid before the Government, which would guide it in framing legislation if it was deemed necessary. The Commission had decided that the private opinions of its members must be kept in the background. Every one who could give any facts bearing upon the relations of capital and labor would be accorded a hearing. Facts were wanted and not opinions or theories. Evidence as to wages, the purchasing power of wages, child labor, the coercion of employes by their employers and kindred subjects was what they wanted.

It was decided to meet this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the same hall. At 4.30 the representatives of the Anti-Poverty Society will be heard.

THE HALDIMAND RECOUNT.

The Examination of the Ballots Will Occupy Two or Three Days.

CAYUGA, Nov. 22.—The Haldimand recount commenced here this morning before Judge Upper. Messrs. Coyne and Goodman appeared for Mr. Colter, and Messrs. Ermatinger and Snider for Dr. Montague. The ballots in Cayuga, Caledonia, North Cayuga, Rainham and Seneca were examined and objections taken to a large number, but no decision was given on any of them. The recount will last for two or three days.

Small Bids for Harvey & McQuesten's Mills.

HESPELER, Nov. 22.—The extensive woolen and cotton mills here recently owned by Messrs. Harvey & McQuesten were offered for sale by public auction to-day by the Bank of Montreal, but owing to the highest bid falling short of the reserve price the sale was withdrawn.

THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN UNION.

Important Resolutions Adopted at the Nashville Convention.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 12.—The National Women's Christian Temperance Union yesterday adopted resolutions protesting against the immoral exhibitions of the faces and forms of women as trade marks and advertisements as a degradation to womanhood; against obscenity as exhibited in cigarette boxes; against the demoralizing reports of prize fights, etc., in the public prints, and earnestly appealing to young women to refrain from wearing decollete dress as immodest and fraught with dangerous and immoral influences.

It was resolved that the Prohibition party be asked to declare itself in favor of the Bible in the public schools and of enforcing the Sabbath laws.

A resolution was passed deprecating the cruel slaughter of birds to ornament the headdresses of ladies and pledging those present not to buy head-dresses so ornamented.

The convention will meet next fall in San Francisco or New York.

OPPOSED TO COMMERCIAL UNION.

Sir Hector Langevin and Hon. Mr. Chapleau Speak Right Out.

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—Sir Hector Langevin was presented with addresses by the Junior Conservative Club and French Conservative Association here to-night on the occasion of his visit and also of his recovery from his recent illness.

Sir Hector, in replying, spoke strongly against Commercial Union, which, he said, would destroy the prosperity which the National Policy had given us. He referred to the presence of Hon. Mr. Chapleau as giving the lie to the absurd reports circulated about him and that gentleman.

Hon. J. A. Chapleau agreed with Sir Hector Langevin on Commercial Union. At all events the people of the Province of Quebec would never consent to the disintegration of the Dominion. He then proceeded to attack the Interprovincial Conference. Their Commercial Union resolutions, he said, showed they had not the confidence of the Dominion. The proposal with regard to the Senate was absurd, and their ideas about provincial subsidies would never be agreed upon by the provinces after mature thought.

J. J. Curran, M.P., also spoke.

ANNETT HELD FOR MURDER.

Blackwell, the Missouri Farmer He Kicked, Dies of His Injuries.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Robert Blackwell, the old Missouri farmer who was so severely kicked a few days ago by Robert Annett, died this afternoon, at 4 o'clock. Annett is held for murder. The prisoner says that the young men of the neighborhood were in the habit of twitting him about trifling matters. If a man wasn't always ready to fight on the slightest provocation he would never hear the end of it. When Blackwell commenced to run on him he had to fight or they would have "roasted" him in the neighborhood for cowardice. He had no intention of hurting Blackwell when he assaulted him. The boy is only 19 years of age and large for his age.

THE LOSS OF THE SCHOLTEN.

Divers Have Not Yet Been Able to Explore the Wreck.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—An improvised light ship has been placed over the sunken steamer W. A. Scholten. The sea is so rough that divers have not been able to explore the wreck. The main mast projects twenty feet above the water at high tide. The wreck lies in twelve fathoms of water. The hull will probably be blown up. The survivors of the disaster have passed a resolution expressing gratitude to the people of Dover for the kindness shown them.

The Sufferer at San Remo.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Prince Henry, the second son of the German Crown Prince, will remain at San Remo all winter with his father. The general health of the Crown Prince is good.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The North German Gazette, referring to the birthday of the Crown Princess, says: The whole fatherland looks with pride and admiration upon the illustrious lady who self-sacrificingly stands with unselfish devotion by the side of her consort at so grave and sad a time. What fills and stirs her soul on this festive day rises to heaven as a fervent prayer from all hearts that the Crown Prince be given strength to overcome his illness.

Horribly Mangled.

WINDSOR, Nov. 22.—Samuel Burns, about 20 years old, whose widowed mother lives in London, came to Windsor last evening with the intention of seeking work at his trade, cigar making. The Great Western train does not stop at the old depot, but Burns attempted to get off there and while doing so slipped and fell under the wheels, both legs being mangled in a horrible manner. The unfortunate youth was carried to the new depot and attended by Dr. Coventry until an ambulance arrived and took him across the river to the Harper Hospital. Both legs have to be amputated and his recovery is doubtful.

Mrs. Langtry Wins the Suit.

DETROIT, Nov. 22.—In the suit against Mrs. Lily Langtry in Wayne Circuit Court for a breach of contract several months ago, judgment was obtained owing to the non-appearance of the fair defendant. Yesterday Judge Look decided that where attachment proceedings are brought against a non-resident, and, although service be had, no property is attached, in pursuance of the suit so brought the court acquires no jurisdiction whatever. The judgment heretofore entered, therefore, is vacated.

The Meeting of the Czar and Bismarck.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—It is not considered in political circles at St. Petersburg that the interview between the Czar and Bismarck will lead to a modification of the policy of either Russia or Germany. It is believed, though, that it may contribute to the maintenance and strengthening of the friendship between the two empires, provided both respect mutual political independence and are desirous to maintain peace.

He Sympathized With the Anarchists.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 22.—At an excited meeting of the First Unitarian Society to-night an attempt was made to oust the pastor, Rev. J. C. Kimball, because of his open avowal of sympathy with the Chicago Anarchists in a recent sermon. The attempt was a failure. A resolution asking the pastor to resign was defeated by a majority of 11 in a total vote of 87. The women of the congregation supported Mr. Kimball in a body.

Mr. Gladstone Apologizes.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to Col. Dopping apologizing for inaccurate statements he had made concerning him, in reference to the occurrences at Gweedore Island. He says he did not mean to impute to Col. Dopping the use of a loaded rifle. Col. Dopping is satisfied with the apology and has withdrawn his action against Mr. Gladstone.

Decorations for Goderich Men.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Secretary of the Treasury has awarded a gold life-saving medal to Capt. William Babb and a silver one to each of his crew of six men, all of Goderich, Ont., for services rendered in saving the crew of the American schooner A. C. Maxwell, Dec. 9, 1885.

GREVY STILL HESITATES.

THE OPINION IS, HOWEVER, THAT HIS RESIGNATION IS INEVITABLE.

None of the Statesmen to Whom He has Applied will Undertake to Form a Ministry—The Boulanger Songs Revived on the Boulevard.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—M. Brisson had a conference with President Grevy to-day and told him that the crisis in relation to the Presidency appeared to be without a remedy. The President asked why. M. Brisson replied that it would be painful to explain. The reason was universally apparent. He reminded M. Grevy that at an independent meeting on Sunday he had maintained that nobody was entitled to demand that the President should resign. He was still of the same opinion. The President alone, added Brisson, was entitled to raise the question.

Singing the Boulanger Song.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The Times' London special says: "Paris is beginning to show disquieting signs of excitement. Last night the Boulanger song, which has been in abeyance for months, suddenly took a new lease of life on the boulevards and streets, which were fuller than they have been for a long time. There are many versions of M. Clemenceau's talk to President Grevy yesterday, but most of them agree that he told the President plainly that no stable Ministry of any sort was possible so long as he remained in the Elysee. To have to summon Clemenceau must in itself have been a bitter pill to President Grevy, who, during all the vicissitudes of the last eight years, has had comfort from the fact that at least he has never been compelled to consult with Clemenceau.

Resignation Regarded as Inevitable.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—M. Leroyer to-day conferred with M. Grevy and advised him to resign. The refusal of every leading politician to form a ministry is regarded as making the resignation of M. Grevy inevitable.

M. Grevy is reported to have consulted M. Leroyer as to the feeling in the Senate and to have asked him whether, in his opinion, it would be possible to govern in the interim with that body alone. M. Leroyer is said to have replied that the Republicans in the Senate would not conflict with the Chamber of Deputies.

The moderate senators are furious with M. Grevy for offering carte blanche to M. Clemenceau, even in conjunction with Gen. Boulanger. They insist that he ought to have retired rather than make such an offer.

Grevy, after his interview with M. Leroyer, consulted M. Deves, M. Foucher de Careil and others, but all his efforts to secure the formation of a ministry proved futile.

THE SITUATION IN IRELAND.

A Report That Mr. Parnell Has Been Deposed From the Leadership.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Times, referring to the interview with Mr. Parnell yesterday, says that his statements have confirmed its suspicion that he is really not the leader, but only an old parliamentary hand retained by the leaders of the Irish National party to do the work they are unable to do themselves, namely, to manage the work of the party in the House of Commons.

Mr. Healy on Dignity.

DUBLIN, Nov. 22.—At the meeting of the National League to-day, Mr. Harrington stated that the members of local branches instead of being intimidated by the Government's proclamation, had largely increased their subscriptions since the proclamations were issued.

Timothy Healy, referring to the comments upon the Irish members of Parliament who were compelled to evade the police, denied that they are placed in an undignified position. He would not give a straw for dignity under the circumstances.

They Will Confer With Archbishop Croke.

DUBLIN, Nov. 22.—Messrs. Fitzgerald and Davitt and Father Scanlan have arrived at Thurles. They will have a conference with Archbishop Croke to-morrow.

Starving Creatures in Search of Food.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Two thousand creatures on the Lake of Lewis, supplied with fifteen tons of meal, have commenced a campaign to extermine the deer in the forests. They allege that 6000 creatures are starving who ought to be living on the land now given up to deer, and they declare that in adopting their present course they are actuated by sheer necessity.

Disturbers of the Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Mr. Burns, the Socialist leader, and Mr. P. Graham, M.P., who were arrested on Sunday, Nov. 13, for participation in the disturbances near Trafalgar square, were arraigned to-day. Several policemen testified that the prisoners violently attacked the police. The case was adjourned.

Cabinet Meeting at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The cabinet met today. The President's message to Congress and the fisheries negotiations were the principal topics of discussion.

A despatch from Chicago says an unknown two-masted schooner is sunk in forty feet of water one mile and a half abreast of Kenosha and it is feared that the crew were lost.

A passenger train on the LaCrosse division of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway collided with a freight yesterday near Milwaukee, wrecking an engine and six cars.

It is believed that a concession for an interoceanic railway from the City of Mexico to Acapulco has been transferred to a syndicate of German bankers. The enterprise will require the expenditure of $10,000,000.

AFFAIRS AT THE CAPITAL.

Seed Sent by Farmers Will be Tested Gratis at the Experimental Farm.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—The Central Farm authorities have arranged for testing gratis samples of cereals or any agricultural seed sent in by the farmers of the Dominion. Prof. Saunders has just returned here from a visit to Wisconsin and Northern Michigan, bringing with him a collection of valuable seeds. He ordered for transportation to Ottawa and the Northwest and the Maritime Provinces 100,000 young trees, selected from the largest forest tree nurseries, which will arrive early next spring. Prof. Saunders is hopeful of the result of the planting in the Northwest, and says nine years ago the State of Iowa was a treeless expense, but on his recent visit he was surprised to find many excellent young forests.

The sub-collector of customs of Calgary, N.W.T., has made a seizure of a quantity of harness imported from the United States and entered under valuation. The case is under the consideration of the Department of Customs.

Mr. Jackson of Qu'Appelle says the Qu'Appelle Valley and Wood Mountain Railway is now on a good financial basis, and the work of grading is being carried on vigorously. The land grant has been settled, and all the capital required for the early completion of the work has been subscribed.

A valuable silver watch has been presented by the Government to Mr. Duncan, coxswain of the steam yacht Mohican, Glasgow, in recognition of his humane and gallant exertions in rescuing the crew of the Lilian, of St. John, N.B., on Aug. 23. Fifteen dollars was donated to each of the crew of the rescuing boat. A similar watch has been given to Mr. O'Brien for saving the life of a man in the harbor of Quebec. A valuable binocular glass has been forwarded to Wm. Brown, first officer of the steamer Morgan City, New York, in acknowledgment of his humane exertion in the rescue of the shipwrecked crew of the brig Arthur of Charlottetown, P.E.I., on July 29, 1887, and $10 to each of the crew of the rescuing boat.

Mr. D. H. MacDowall of Prince Albert is in the city.

A VICTIM OF RABIES.

Hydrophobia Seizes a New York Man Five Months After Being Bitten by a Cur.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Bruno Mueller, head of the painting firm of Mueller & Co., is suffering from hydrophobia. In June last Mueller and his 10-year-old son were in a saloon in the neighborhood of his residence. The boy began playing with a small cur that had strayed into the place. The dog bit the lad in the hand and while attempting to rescue his son from the animal's attack the father was also bitten. Six weeks later the boy died, and his physicians had no hesitancy in pronouncing the case one of well defined hydrophobia. Last Saturday the father was stricken down with the same disease and is to-day suffering untold agony. Four prominent physicians are in attendance and friends of Mueller are constantly with him to care for him in his spasms. Mr. Mueller realizes his condition and during lucid intervals is disposing of his property.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887.

WILL NOT PROPOSE IT.

COMMERCIAL Unionists endeavored to persuade themselves and the people that the United States would propose that scheme as a settlement of the fisheries dispute. The New York Times thinks differently. Referring to Mr. Chamberlain's statements that the British Commissioners would not propose that plan of settlement, the Times says that "it is not at all likely that the American Commissioners will broach that subject, for that is not what the negotiations are for." If the United States does not make the proposal, the subject will not be discussed, for Canada is not likely to offer to give her fisheries to the United States for the privilege of being allowed to do herself further injury.

Divisions are arising among Commercial Unionists in Canada. Mr. Edgar will not down, and the snubs his first letter brought upon him have not prevented him from writing another. He favors free trade with the United States, but he says:—

"It is useless to deny that there are both practical and sentimental difficulties in the way of establishing a uniform tariff for the two countries against the rest of the world, and of maintaining this uniformity during the life of a reciprocity treaty."

With the impracticability of the scheme acknowledged by its friends, and with the hope that the United States would propose Commercial Union at the fisheries Conference gone, the spirits of the advocates of the Union must be considerably depressed. But the sinking of their spirits will not cause alarm. Canada does not want Commercial Union, and if all hope of commercial or political annexation vanishes, those who favor these ideas may be able to recognize that we have a country capable of holding its own and that is making good progress.

GERMANY, if appearances and European correspondents are not misleading the people, is in a bad way and may soon find itself shaken by internal troubles. The Emperor is old and his hold on life is not a strong one. The Crown Prince is suffering from cancer in the throat, and this was considered bad enough. But a New York Tribune correspondent adds that Prince William, the next heir to the throne, is suffering from a disease that will produce insanity, probably ere long. Should the Emperor lay down the sceptre, and the Crown Prince and his son be removed by the diseases that threaten them, a four year old son of the latter would become Emperor. A regency would then be necessary, and the choice of a regent might cause trouble. Such is the dark picture of Germany's position drawn by correspondents.

FRANCE has another Cabinet crisis. The Rouvier Ministry has lived longer than was expected when it assumed office, but it has been defeated and has resigned. A Cabinet crisis is not a novelty in Paris, but it is complicated this time by the demands made for the resignation of President Grevy, whose son-in-law hastened the downfall of the Ministry by the scandals with which he was connected. The President's difficulty is in getting leading politicians to form a Ministry under him. Any of them would sooner be President than Premier.

TWENTY-FIVE of the principal cities and towns in Canada which make monthly returns of deaths to the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa show, the Canada Health Journal says, a record for October of 1,330 deaths, or 120 less than in September. The rate of mortality for the month in the twenty-five cities and towns was about 24 per 1,000 of population per annum. In the previous month the rate was 25 per 1,000. The total mortality in October in the twenty-five cities and towns receded to a considerably lower point than that of June and to about the same as that of May.

THE Conservative candidate in Victoria, N.S., Mr. John A McDonald, was on Monday elected by a majority of about 300 over the Independent candidate, Mr. Campbell. The record stands:—Bye-elections held, 11; Conservatives elected, 10; Reformers elected, 1; seats gained by Conservatives, 2.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"She looks very ill, poor thing!" In these words the lawyer opened the business of the evening, referring to Mrs. Ferrari as unceremoniously as if she had been out of the room.

"She has suffered a terrible shock," Agnes answered.

Mr. Troy turned to Mrs. Ferrari, and looked at her again, with the interest due to the victim of a shock. He drummed absently with his fingers on the table. At last he spoke to her:

"My good lady, you don't really believe that your husband is dead?"

Mrs. Ferrari put her handkerchief to her eyes. The word "dead" was ineffectual to express her feelings. "Murdered!" she said, sternly, behind her handkerchief.

"Why! And by whom?" Mr. Troy asked.

Mrs. Ferrari seemed to find some difficulty in answering. "You have read my husband's letter, sir," she began. "I believe he discovered"— She got as far as that, and there she stopped.

"What did he discover?"

There are limits to human patience—even the patience of a bereaved wife. This cool question irritated Mrs. Ferrari into expressing herself plainly at last.

"He discovered Lady Montbarry and the baron!" she answered, with a burst of hysterical vehemence. "The baron is no more that vile woman's brother than I am. The wickedness of those two wretches came to my poor, dear husband's knowledge. The lady's maid left her place on account of it. If Ferrari had gone away, too, he would have been alive at this moment. They have killed him. I say they have killed him, to prevent it from getting to Lord Montbarry's ears." So, in short, sharp sentences, and in louder and louder accents, Mrs. Ferrari stated her opinion of the case.

Still keeping his own view in reserve, Mr. Troy listened with an expression of satirical approval.

"Very strongly stated, Mrs. Ferrari," he said. "You build up your sentences well; you clinch your conclusions in a workmanlike manner. If you had been a man you would have made a good lawyer—you would have taken juries by the scruff of their necks. Complete the case, my good lady—complete the case. Tell us next who sent you this letter, inclosing the banknote. The 'two wretches' who murdered Mr. Ferrari would hardly put their hands in their pockets and send you £1,000. Who is it—eh? I see the postmark on the letter is 'Venice.' Have you any friend in that interesting city with a large heart, and a purse to correspond, who has been let into the secret and who wishes to console you anonymously?"

It was not easy to reply to this. Mrs. Ferrari began to feel the first inward approaches of something like hatred toward Mr. Troy. "I don't understand you, sir," she answered. "I don't think this is a joking matter."

Agnes interfered for the first time. She drew her chair a little [nearer to ner legal counselor and friend.

"What is the most probable explanation, in your opinion?" she asked.

"I shall offend Mrs. Ferrari if I tell you," Mr. Troy answered.

"No, sir, you won't!" cried Mrs. Ferrari, hating Mr. Troy undisguisedly by this time.

The lawyer leaned back in his chair. "Very well," he said, in his most good humored manner. "Let's have it out. Observe, madame, I don't dispute your view of the position of affairs at the palace in Venice. You have your husband's letters to justify you, and you have also the significant fact that Lady Montbarry's maid did really leave the house. We will say, then, that Lord Montbarry has presumably been made the victim of a foul wrong; that Mr. Ferrari was the first to find it out, and that the guilty persons had reasons to fear, not only that he would acquaint Lord Montbarry with his discovery, but that he would be a principal witness against them if the scandal was made public in a court of law. Now mark! admitting all this, I draw a totally different conclusion from the conclusion at which you have arrived. Here is your husband left in this miserable household of three, under very awkward circumstances for him. What does he do? But for the banknote and the written message sent to you with it, I should say that he had wisely withdrawn himself from association with disgraceful discovery and exposure by taking secretly to flight. The money modifies this view—unfavorably so far as Mr. Ferrari is concerned. I still believe he is keeping out of the way. But I now say he is paid for keeping out of the way—and that banknote there on the table is the price of his absence, paid by the guilty persons to his wife."

Mrs. Ferrari's watery gray eyes brightened suddenly; Mrs. Ferrari's dull, drab colored complexion became enlivened by a glow of brilliant red.

"It's false!" she cried. "It's a burning shame to speak of my husband in that way!"

"I told you I should offend you!" said Mr. Troy.

Agnes interposed once more—in the interest of peace. She took the offended wife's hand; she appealed to the lawyer to reconsider that side of his theory which reflected harshly on Ferrari. While he was still speaking the servant interrupted her by entering the room with a visiting card. It was the card of Henry Westwick; and there was an ominous request written on it in pencil. "I bring bad news. Let me see you for a minute down stairs." Agnes immediately left the room.

Alone with Mrs. Ferrari, Mr. Troy permitted his natural kindness of heart to show itself on the surface at last. He tried to make his peace with the courier's wife.

"You have every claim, my good soul, to resent a reflection cast upon your husband," he began. "I may even say that I respect you for speaking so warmly in his defense. At the same time remember that I am bound, in such a serious matter as this, to tell you what is really in my mind. I can have no intention of offending you, seeing that I am a total stranger to you and to Mr. Ferrari. A thousand pounds is a large sum of money, and a poor man may excusably be tempted by it to do nothing worse than to keep out of the way for awhile. My only interest, acting on your behalf, is to get at the truth. If you will give me time, I see no reason to despair of finding your husband yet."

Ferrari's wife listened, without being convinced; her narrow little mind, filled to its extreme capacity by her unfavorable opinion of Mr. Troy, had no room left for the process of correcting its first impression. "I am much obliged to you, sir," was all she said. Her eyes were more communicative—her eyes added, in their language, "You may say what you please; I will never forgive you to my dying day."

Mr. Troy gave it up. He composedly wheeled his chair round, put his hands in his pockets, and looked out of the window.

After an interval of silence, the drawing room door was opened.

Mr. Troy wheeled round again briskly to the table, expecting to see Agnes. To his surprise, there appeared, in her place, a perfect stranger to him—a gentleman in the prime of life, with a marked expression of pain and embarrassment on his handsome face. He looked at Mr. Troy, and bowed gravely.

"I am so unfortunate as to have brought news to Miss Agnes Lockwood which has greatly distressed her," he said. "She has retired to her room. I am requested to make her excuses, and to speak to you in her place."

TURKEYS TILL YOU CAN'T REST.

An Experienced Commission Merchant Gives a Reporter Some Turkey Lore.

"Turkeys until you can't rest."

"More than ordinarily so?"

"There always are plenty of turkeys," explained the commission merchant, "but I never saw the promise of such a large crop before. If you were to take a trip up through the center of this state, or out through New England, you would find the trees around every farm house full of them."

"Is there much profit in raising turkeys?"

"Lots of it. It costs the farmer next to nothing to raise them. They generally go off in the spring and make their nests in fence corners and out of the way places, where they hatch their young. From that time on they are no expense to speak of, as they usually take their broods into the woods when they can. If they are kept in the barnyard they do not cost any more than chickens to raise. When this is done the farmers generally shut up the old hen for a few weeks, until the youngsters get enough strength to keep up with her. They get most of their living out of the bugs and insects that they find, but come around at night for a handful of corn or wheat.

"About the middle of October the early turkeys are pretty well grown, and they are put through a fattening process for market. A good many different methods are employed. Some farmers give them all the corn they can eat three times a day. Others shut them up and feed cornmeal dough; when the turkey tires of eating the farmer stuffs the dough down his throat with a spoon until he is crammed full. Oil meal and sunflower seeds are also used for fattening and in some sections walnuts are fed in the same manner. The dose is increased until just before killing time, when two dozen nuts are fed each day. This is the Italian method, and the rich flavor of the nut makes the turkey taste like wild game. The western farmers send them here for Thanksgiving and Christmas by the carload. In California they have flocks of turkeys numbering thousands. They herd them like sheep. When the grain is harvested they let them foray in their immense wheat and barley fields, and the fattening does not cost anything. All of the early turkeys are sent to market in November, and the later ones are kept till holiday time. The early ones from the west come alive, and are killed here; but, after cold weather sets in, they are killed and plucked where they are raised."

"Where are the best turkeys raised?"

"In Connecticut, where many large varieties are raised. There is one odd thing about turkeys. The more one weighs the more it will bring a pound, and there will be no end of them this year."—New York Mail and Express.

A Lawyer's Good Luck.

A former Harrisburger who once held a state office, and is now a resident of Philadelphia, was a lawyer by profession, and, after leaving the service of the state, he settled in a county which was then greatly excited over the discovery of oil within its borders. Here he hung out his shingle and waited for clients. Sometimes they came, but often they didn't, and his funds grew lower and lower until at last it was a question of bread and butter for him and his family. Sitting in his office one day with his head between his hands, cursing his hard luck and wondering whether life was worth living, not a cent in his pocket and nothing to eat, he was disturbed by the entrance of an acquaintance, who asked him to draw up an agreement relating to the lease of some land and the sinking of an oil well.

"I'll do it if you pay me," said the lawyer.

"Now, see here," said the man, "you know I have no ready money, but if you draw up these papers I'll give you an interest in the well."

"I won't do it," said the lawyer, bluntly; "you have no money and are fast on the road to the poorhouse. No, I won't help you!"

"But you must," persisted the man; "you can do it. It won't cost you a cent, and you must do it. Go ahead now. If I lose it is nothing out of your pocket. Draw up these papers, you've nothing else to do."

Well, the lawyer, to get rid of the man, drew up the agreements, and took as his pay an interest in the oil well.

What happened?

The oil well was a gusher, and the thick, greasy fluid poured out over the derrick and made the poor devils who were putting down the well fairly howl with glee. The lawyer was on hand, just as excited as anybody else, and the very first chance he got he sold out for $17,000 cash. With his money in his hand he hastened home and told his wife his good fortune and they both rejoiced.

"And now, mother," said he to his wife, "let's get out of this."

And they lit out for Philadelphia.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

A Story About Beecher.

Abraham Lincoln once told a good story about Henry Ward Beecher, who, dressed in very common clothes, was studying human nature as exhibited in the highways and byways of New York. In the course of his philosophic peregrinations he went into a mock auction shop. He stood a while on entering, and reflected, doubtless, how any one could be so lost to all sense of truth and honesty as the auctioneer in question, endeavoring to palm off his worthless trash to the inexperienced in city ways as good and valuable, and finally the auctioneer called out: "Mr. Beecher, why don't you bid?" He was greatly astonished, as can be imagined, at finding himself known in this place, and, as he had supposed, in his purposely careless dress. He immediately left, and started for the residence of one of the members of the church in the neighborhood, and requested him, as an act of kindness, to go down and inquire of that person who had sold himself to Satan for the love of gain how it was he knew him in his disguise. The neighbor kindly consented, and on entering the "Peter Funk" shop he addressed the auctioneer:

"How is it that you know Henry Ward Beecher so well as to be able to recognize him in his disguise?"

"How do I know him! Why, I have been a prominent member of his congregation for the last five years, and lease the fifth pew from the front!"—Ben: Perley Poore's Letter.

The "Thirteen" Superstition.

The superstition that the number thirteen is unlucky received a severe blow in New York the other day when pilot boat No. 13 was launched on a Friday. The number thirteen was connected with the craft in every possible way. Her number is thirteen, thirteen members of the Thirteen club were present, she was launched at 4:13, there are thirteen letters in her name, she has thirteen berths, she was launched on the 13th day of the month, sea calendar, she is to have a crew of thirteen men.—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Old Virginia Law.

A relic of the ancient time was revived in Virginia recently, when counsel for a man about to be tried for murder asked that the indictment be quashed because the foreman of the grand jury that returned it was the owner of a grist mill. The old law forbade the possessor of a mill from serving on a jury.—Nashville American.

A Long Wait.

The Philadelphia North American says that "Insurance Agent Adams has been waiting for fifteen years for a letter which has just reached him." The sender must have inadvertently put one of the immediate delivery stamps on the letter; but it doesn't seem fifteen years since such stamps were introduced.—Norristown Herald.

Until your hair becomes dry, thin, and gray before giving the attention needed to preserve its beauty and vitality. Keep on your toilet-table a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor—the only dressing you require for the hair—and use a little, daily, to preserve the natural color and prevent baldness.

Thomas Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best hair-restorer in the world."

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delavan, Ill.; "but after using a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy."

A Great Slaughtering and Cutting of Prices in Dry Goods

—AT—

THOS. KELLY'S

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practice to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price a criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide, and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN'S GREAT STRIKE

An upheaval to take place in Peterboro', and the Dry Goods Trade to be shattered to pieces.

$20,000 (TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS) worth of New, Fresh, Seasonable Dry Goods stopped in transit to British Columbia, and bought by GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN, at FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR. EVERYTHING NEW AND FRESH from the Looms, they have never been unpacked from the cases, and yet they are to be sold at 50 cts. on the dollar.

Call Out the Dogs of War, Now

for GOUGH is going to take a hand in Dry Goods too, and as he bought them at 50 Cents onthe Dollar, something must give. Even though it be the imaginary Clothiers.

FROM MONDAY UNTIL SATURDAY THIS WEEK my store will be closed so as to enable us to unpack the Goods and prepare for the Great Sale We would advise the Ladies of Peterborough not to miss this opportunity as the bargains to be offered will be most startling. The Stock is comprised of

GENERAL DRY GOODS, including SILKS, SATINS, DRESS GOODS, FLANNELS, COTTONS, TICKING, PRINTS, BLANKETS, CORSETS, GLOVES, HOSIERY, &c., and all to be sold without reserve. The reader will bear in mind that at my Store, and I would advise one and all to call early and avoid the rush as we expect a crowded Store. Our Immense Stock of SUITS and OVERCOATS will be removed to the 2nd and 3rd flats, and in these Departments SWEEPING REDUCTIONS will also be made. We will sell you a good OVERCOAT for $2.50 worth $6.00 and Suits will be reduced in accordance. Never in the world has such a chance been offered to get beautiful new Dry Goods and Clothing, so Cheap, and henceforth every person who wants to save a dollar should go to the Wonder of the 19th Century, for the air will ring with the name of

This Gigantic Sale will commence 9 o'clock, A.M., sharp, on Saturday, Nov. 26th

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Piano Tuning.

Mr. Geo. Gumpricht is in town. Orders may be left at Mr. T. Menzies' or Messrs. Taylor & McDonald's store.

Took Furs With Her.

While M'lle Rhea was here she purchased a fine set of plucked otter furs at Mr. J. W. T. Fairweather's fur store. She left her order at nine o'clock in the morning and at ten at night the set complete was sent to her hotel.

Down Below.

The Magistrate held court down stairs at the Police station this morning. A lunatic who could not walk was brought before him and as it was impossible to get the man up the narrow stairs the magistrate held court in the constable's parlor. The man was proved to be mentally deranged and was committed.

Appeals.

The time for appealing against the Municipal Voters' list expires at twelve o'clock to-night. So far there are only four appeals in. Last year there were as many hundreds. Those who are not satisfied should put their appeals at the post office before twelve o'clock to-night, otherwise they will not be valid.

Sleighs.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee have ordered runners for the hose and hook and ladder carts from Messrs. Mein & Crocker, the cost to be $50. In order to get the sleighs in and out of the Fire Station easily, it is proposed to put down an iron track and have it well greased all the time. The runners will run on these tracks, it is expected, as easily as they will on snow.

Preferred to Live Alone.

Referring to the sudden death of Wm. Mitchell in Port Hope, the Guide of Tuesday says:—"He has a son, Mr. Jos. Mitchell of Peterborough, who came in yesterday, and attended to the burial of his father this afternoon. He repeatedly tried to induce his father to go and live with him, but he had so long lived alone he declined. The old gentleman had saved up quite a little sum of money. He had a daughter who lost her mind, and is now in the asylum, which weighed heavily on the old man's mind. No person had an unkind word to say of the deceased."

Diocesan Notes.

—Bishop Dowling has transferred Father McGuire, assistant priest at Lindsay to the pastorate of Bracebridge. Father Brettherton, of Bracebridge, will take Father McGuire's place at Lindsay.

—Bishop Dowling paid his first official visit to Campbellford on Friday. He was met at the station by Father Casey, parish priest, Father Davis, of Madoc, and several hundred people. Services were held in the church and on Sunday the Bishop preached morning and evening. A collection towards defraying the expenses of the Bishop's Palace, Peterborough, was taken up, amounting to about $400.

—His Lordship will visit Hastings on Friday. On Sunday he will preach in Hastings and on Sunday evening in Norwood.

... you can get the very best ... at KIDD'S.

The T. V. C. Commission.

It is understood that Judge Clarke has decided not to act on the Trent Valley Canal Commission, as he would not have time to attend to the duties of the position.

Somewhat Improved.

Mr. Andrew Wilson's condition is somewhat improved since Saturday. He has been maintaining the improvement to-day, but he is still not out of danger.

New Arrival.

At Elliott & Tierney's, just received a large lot of hand picked apples in barrels, consisting of Northern Spies, Greening, Ben Davis, Baldwin, 20oz Pippin, H Pippin, Bell Flower and Rainbo.

Church Parade.

The Sons of England, Lansdowne Lodge, will hold a church parade on Sunday, Dec. 11th. They will attend the George Street Methodist Church. The Rev. Prof. Wallace will preach the sermon.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons makes a much better recitation, and Gladstone delivers a far more eloquent political speech; but no one sells boots cheaper than KIDD the boot man.

Blank Books.

Business men are asked to bear in mind that the REVIEW bindery is turning out the very best description of work in all lines of account books and ledgers. All orders finished up with despatch. Customers can select their own papers from a large and well assorted stock, and have any special ruling desired. d108eod will be held at the residence of Mr. George Dunsford, Simcoe street, on the evening of Wednesday, the 30th inst., in aid of the Mission Fund of St. John's Church. A choice programme, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, readings and recitations, will be given. Admission 25 cents. All are cordially invited. Refreshments. 3d128

A Social

Flour and Feed.

Mr. Harry Denne, jr., will open out a flour and feed store in the Dunsford block, Water street, in a few days. He will carry an extensive stock of flour, feed, provisions and pressed hay. An express will be kept in readiness to carry goods to all parts of the town and Ashburnham. The REVIEW wishes Mr. Denne success and bespeaks for him a fair share of the trade to commence with.

The Taxes.

Mr. Cumming, Collector, has been doing a big business at his office during this week. As the 1st of December approaches the presence of taxpayers thickens around the town buildings. The collector would be pleased to have all of the taxes paid in before December 1st this year. It would be a saving of money to taxpayers and a saving of trouble to him. The extra 5 per cent. will be charged on all taxes not paid in before the 1st of the month.

Fine Samples.

There are some fine samples of grain grown in the North-West shown in the C.P.R. uptown office. They are parcelled up in a very neat way. Two wooden squares about a foot each way are divided off into sections a few inches in length and width, these sections being entirely separated from each other. The grain is placed in these and the whole covered with glass. The two squares are connected with hinges so that they can be closed up like a book. The wheat, flax, six and two rowed barley, timothy, black and white oats and peas are all fine, plum samples.

Personal.

Father Quirk, of Hastings, was in town to-day.

Mr J. Hampden Burnham is here from Toronto. He will be off to the booming Sault Ste Marie in a day or two.

The Rev. Father Conway has returned to town and will resume his parochial duties. He is restored to good health again.

The Rev. Mr. Logan, Fenelon Falls, is in town to-day.

Mr. Arthur Stevenson, son of Mayor Stevenson, was on Tuesday sworn in as a Solicitor at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. We congratulate Mr. Stevenson on his attaining the dignity of a member of the legal profession.

Grip's Comic Almanac.

Grip's almanac for 1888 is a budget of humor, and is a credit to the publishers. The six calendar pages, from designs by Mr. J. W. Bengough, are about the best specimens of caricature drawing that this clever artist has produced. The work of other artists has assisted Mr. Bengough in making up a number that is better even than the almanacs of former years.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons.

Mrs. Scott-Siddon appeared at Bradburn's Opera House on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association. The place was crowded from the orchestra to the back seats in the gallery. The programme commenced with a scene from "Much Ado About Nothing." The next number on the programme was Tennyson's "Lady Clare," but by request "Curfew" was given instead. "Father Phil's Collection," a well known humorous sketch, was particularly well done, so well that the audience held both its sides with laughter and bestowed applause amounting to an encore. The reciter soon changed the mood of the people when she appeared in "The Sleep Walking Scene" from Macbeth. All eyes were earnestly fixed upon her while she went through this most difficult piece of acting. After a short intermission the second part was commenced. It consisted of "The Creeds of the Bells," "The Child Wife," (David Copperfield) "Hubert and Arthur" (King John) and the "Courtship of King Henry," (Henry V). All were exquisitely presented. The performance was highly entertaining and pleasing throughout. Mrs. Scott-Siddons shows much competency as a reciter, expressing humour, emotion, pathos, with equal facility. Her visit her will not soon be forgotten.

THE CHANCES FAVORABLE.

Judgment not Recorded Against the County in G.J.R. Suit.

The uncertainty regarding the exact position of the suit between the Grand Junction Railway Company and Peterborough County, caused by the contradictory reports received in Peterborough and Toronto, led Mr. Stafford, of Mr. E. B. Edward's office to cable to Mr. Edwards, the County Solicitor, who is in England. Mr. Stafford sent the message on Tuesday, and this afternoon he received an answer contradicting the reports which have appeared in the Mail.

The Toronto paper stated that judgment had been given against the County, the only point reserved being the question of costs. Mr. Edwards' cablegram directly contradicts this. It is as follows:—

"LONDON, Nov. 22.

"Report untrue. Judgment reserved. Chances favorable. EDWARDS."

The despatch is emphatic and unmistakable, and leaves no room to doubt that the points reserved for decision are of such importance in the suit that the case depends upon the view the Privy Council will take of them. Mr. Edwards' assurance that the prospects for a decision affirming the judgments of the Canadian Courts are favorable will remove any impression that the case was already lost. The final judgment of the Court will be awaited with interest.

Local Brevities.

—There promises to be a lively session of the Police Court to-morrow morning.

—Canton Peterborough, No. 16, meets for drill this evening.

—A bicyclist went out for a run in the country a few days ago and the rain coming on was unable to force his machine through the mud. It was brought in on a load of hay this morning. Moral: Look at the probs before you go cycling.

—Belleville papers reach Peterborough quickly. Saturday's Intelligencer was received at this office yesterday and Saturday's Ontario to-day (Wednesday).

—Anna Eve Fay, the medium who was here last winter, has been exposed in Boston. This is not the first time.

—The Amateur Athletic Association gave Mrs. Scott-Siddons $200 and paid the Opera House rent. Still they will clear a handsome amount—about $100.

—Belleville expects to have electric light turned on to night. With waterworks and electric light, Belleville is becoming citified and it may follow Peterborough's example further and secure a park sometime.

Montreal Live Stock Markets.

The Gazette's market columns report that at Point St. Charles cattle yards Monday morning the offerings of choice cattle were light, for which there was little enquiry, but a better feeling prevailed and prices advanced ¼c. per lb. on inside figures, with a few small sales made at 3½c. @ 4¼c. per lb., live weight. There was a good demand for butchers' cattle, of which the supply was fair, and an active business was done and prices advanced ½c. per lb. on inside quotations. Sales were made freely at 2½c @3½c. per lb., live weight. The receipts of sheep for the past week have been larger, for which there was a good demand from local butchers and traders, and mostly all the offerings were taken at 3½c. per lb., live weight, which shows an advance of ¼c. per lb. The market for live hogs was stronger and values improved ½c@¾c per lb. under a good demand and a light supply and sales were made freely at 5¼c. per lb. Calves were scarce and little enquired for at from $6@$12 each as to quality.

Commenting on the fact that the export season may now be considered as over the the Gazette says:—The season, on the whole, has been a poor one, owing to the large supplies of cattle shipped from here and other points abroad, which exercised great pressure on the British market, and prices dropped to the lowest point ever known in the history of the trade, consequently it is doubtful if any shippers made much money this season.

The British Live Stock Markets.

The Montreal Gazette's cable of Monday 22nd says:—"Just as the last shipments are about to leave the St. Lawrence, the British markets make a further improvement. We have reported an advance of half a cent from last Monday week, or an advance of about 2c from the lowest point and not very far from the highest of the season. Receipts from Canada and the United States have been light, while supplies from elsewhere have been fair. At Liverpool there was a brisk trade at the advance. Prime Canadian steers were at 11c., good to choice at 10½c., poor to medium at 9½c., and inferior and bulls at 7c@8¼c. These quotations are calculated on the basis of 4.80 in the £.

Some interest attaches to the fact that there has arrived on the Old Country cattle markets the first shipment of cattle direct from the North-West (Canadian) territories. The London Canadian Gazette says:—" An interesting feature in connection with the Clyde shipments was the first arrival there of the Northwestern stock, of which notice has already been taken in our columns. We are glad to learn that, notwithstanding the depressed condition of markets, as well as the character for wildness, which the cattle seem to bear, trade ruled fairly good, the average price being over £14. From the reports of the salesmen handling them, we learn that although not seen to the best advantage, the quality generally was excellent, being decidedly better than the ordinary export stock offered at the time This is very satisfactory and we hope that the returns will be such as to encourage the development of the trade.."

BASEBALL LEGISLATION.

The Contract With the Brotherhood—Revision of the Playing Rules.

"The past week," says The New York Sun, "has been memorable both for legislation and diplomacy in the baseball world. The Protective Brotherhood of League Players has met the league managers, and thanks to the firmness and moderation of its committee, has secured official recognition. The concessions to the players have been few, and the latter are still to be bought and sold, but at least they have had some share in framing their contract, which is a document more detailed and voluminous than a bill in equity or an international treaty. When players hereafter are suspended without pay, the time must be made definite, as when a criminal is sentenced, instead of indefinite, as heretofore; if injured while doing his duty, the player must hereafter have his full wages; he may be reserved, but not at a reduced salary. These are examples of the compromise effected, and 'in practical life, ideal reform must compromise with expedience,' say Messrs. Ward, Hanlon and Brouthers to their brethren, with fine philosophy.

"An important feature of the week's work has been the revision of the playing rules. One result which everybody will approve is the repeal of last season's rule allowing a base on balls to count as a hit. There are several good reasons why it should not so count, the best and briefest being that it is not a hit, but an error on the part of the pitcher. A second change back to old rules, in allowing the batsman only three strikes instead of four, is of more doubtful expediency, as it will keep down the batting scores. The rules declaring a runner not out for being hit by a struck ball after it has passed the fielder, but putting him out if he knocks down or runs into a fielder, commend themselves at once; but the rule allowing the runner to take a base if the ball hits the umpire is probably destined to a short life. The removal of the batsman's line to twelve inches from the home plate will be generally approved, but the rules calling him out if he attempts a foul hit after two strikes, or is hit by the ball on the third strike, must go through the probation of experiment.

"It is a little questionable whether the new plan of allowing two extra players to be substituted in a nine during the game will be permanent. Such a substitution may sometimes be a relief to spectators who find a pitcher hit too hard, but it is likely to result also in unjust cries from the crowd for changes which will discourage players."

Position of Feds at 11 o'clock.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The pedestrian match is exciting unusual interest and large crowds are constantly in attendance. Of the thirteen starters in the race four have dropped out, viz.: Vint, Moore, Cronin and Legrand. The nine men remaining to-night are making creditable records and all appear to be in good condition, with the exception of Strokel, whose stomach is giving him considerable trouble. Littlewood, the English champion, seems to travel with more difficulty than yesterday, but he retains his good lead by persistantly dogging Albert, his nearest competitor. Hart, Albert, Noremac and Panchot appear to be in the best condition.

The score at 11 p.m. was: Hart 183, Cox 185, Burns 198, Noremac 200, Elson 197, Albert 220, Strokel 164, Littlewood 245, Panchot 210.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 23.

In Chicago wheat closed at ½c lower than that of yesterday. Corn remains unchanged, while pork was 10c higher. Lard and short ribs were about the same as last night.

Cox & Co.'s private wire from Chicago to-day says: Leopold Bloom bought 10,000 barrels of January pork at $14 from C. Singer and 10,000 barrels from Robert Warren at $14. The market opened stronger on the reported coming cold wave, while there is little or no snow. Outside orders to buy were quite urgent at the opening but has now slumped off on selling by Cudahy's brokers, Trego, Montgomery, Henry Warner and J. M. Shaw.

The report of the receipts of hogs to-day from the Chicago stock yards is: Receipts 31,000, official receipts yesterday, 33,761, shipments 5646, left over 3000. Cattle receipts 9000. Market quiet.

On call to-day 83c was bid for No. 1 red winter, and offered at 84c. For No. 2 81c was bid for Dec. delivery, and 81½c on the track. An offer was also made of 82c for 10,000 bush of No. 2 red winter. One lot of 5 cars of No. 2, Dec. delivery, was offered, but not sold.

LOCAL STREET MARKET.

The local market was fairly active to-day. Between 6000 and 7000 bushels of barley sold at 60c to 84c; 400 bushels of wheat at 80c to 83c for fall and spring and 71c to 73c for goose. Some 200 bushels of oats at 32c to 40c. Peas quoted at 63c to 65c. Hay was fairly plentiful at $16 to $17.50, and a few loads of straw at $11 and $12. Dressed hogs sold to-day at $6.20. Beef $3 to $5 for forequarters, and $5 to $7 for hindquarters. Mutton $5 to $6.50; lamb at $6.50 to $7.50; veal, $5.50 to $6.

ST. LAWRENCE MARKET.

The retail market was good to-day, with prices generally firm and unchanged as follows: Beef 12c to 14c, sirloin steak at 15c to 16c, round steak 10c to 11c. Mutton — Legs and chops 12c to 13c, inferior cuts 8c to 10c. Lamb— 7c to 9c for front and 11c to 12c for hindquarters. Veal—Best joints 12c to 13c, inferior cuts 6c to 8c. Pork—Chops and roasts 10c. Venison, carcase, $4 to $5, haunches $8 to $10. Butter—Pound rolls 22c to 25c, large rolls 20c to 22c, inferior 15c to 18c. Lard—Tubs 9c to 10c. Cheese 14c to 15c. Bacon 10c to 12c. Eggs 20c to 22c. Turkeys 11c to 13c per lb. Chickens per pair 35c to 60c. Geese 70c to 80c, box-lots 6c to 7c per lb. Ducks 50c to 70c. Partridges 50c to 65c. Potatoes, per bag, 30c to 40c. Apples per barrel $2 to $2.25. Beets per bush. 60c to 75c. Onions, bushel, $1.50 to $1.60. Celery, 30c to 75c a doz. Turnips, bag, 40c to 50c. Carrots, bag, 50c to 60c.

OSWEGO BARLEY MARKET.

Oswego reports barley quiet at the following prices: No. 2 ex-Can. 86½c. No. 1 Can. 85½c to 90c, No. 1 bright 93. Freights 4c. Receipt 12,500 bush.

INGERSOLL CHEESE MARKET.

INGERSOLL, Nov. 22.—This week twenty-six factories offered 21,785 boxes of August and balance of the season; no sales. Buyers show a perfect indifference and are apparently with out any orders; salesmen show more anxiety to sell than a week ago, but still their views are too high to meet with any response from buyers. Nine buyers were present. Cable, 3 p.m., 50s.

John L. at Manchester.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—John L. Sullivan reached Manchester to-day. Crowds greeted him at the depot and escorted him to his hotel.

The Lawyer and the Cashier.

A Bank Cashier who had Stolen $60,000 from the Bank and skipped out to Cincinnati Went to a Lawyer and said:

"How can I Fix Matters so as to be safe from the Law?"

"I will Arrange to have the Bank Settle for Half the Amount," was the Prompt reply.

When this had been done the Thief Expressed his Great Pleasure and Satisfaction, and inquired,

"And now what shall I Pay you for your Services?"

"The Other Half, sir!" was the Calm reply.

Moral.—It's a Wonder the Lawyer left so much for the Bank.—Detroit Free Press.

A Serious Drawback.

A New York man says that the great drawback to electric street railways is that you cannot ride even a block on one of those cars without having your watch completely magnetized and ruined so for as time keeping is concerned. All the electric roads have the same difficulty, and the inventors, although they have been trying for years, have not yet succeeded in discovering a remedy. Until that defect is removed no electric street railway will be a success.—The Argonaut.

Tobacco Crop in England.

Mr. France De Laune, of Sharsted court, County Kent, has attracted to himself the admiring eyes of the British nation by successfully raising and harvesting a crop of tobacco. It is said to be the first ever raised in England. The government has graciously given consent that he shall go on with his experiment, but insists that he must pay duty on his crop the same as though the tobacco were imported.—Chicago News.

THE BIG ISLAND'S AGENT.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF NEWFOUNDLAND AT WASHINGTON.

He is Prepared, if Called Upon, to Give Information Regarding His Government's Wishes With Reference to Fishery Matters.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Hon. Mr. Winter, the Attorney-General of Newfoundland, is in the city prepared, if called upon, to give information in reference to the wishes of his Government in the settlement of fishery matters. Mr. Winter is a quiet, unassuming statesman who neither plays poker nor drinks champagne, but is a most patriotic admirer of his colony and indignantly repudiates the bankruptcy and starvation stories which are periodically circulated throughout Canada regarding his beloved terra nova. In conversation with your correspondent Mr. Winter stated that such misrepresentations regarding Newfoundland were much more injurious than they would be if circulated in reference to larger colonies, owing to the close sympathy which exists between the financial, commercial and political interests of the province.

Among the predictions which are current here in reference to the President's message at the opening of Congress is one in reference to reductions in the duties on the necessaries of life. There is no general complaint that the duties are burdensome even as they exist, but there is a surplus of a hundred millions or so more than is fashionable in well-bred nations, and nobody appears to know how it can be used. It is a moiety of this which Mr. Atkinson proposes should be utilized to purchase Acadia, but greenbacks of sufficient value for that transaction are not yet manufactured.

The Democrats carried New York on the pledge of reducing the revenues a hundred millions, and they are bound to redeem their pledge if possible. It is said that one change will be the repeal of the tax on raw tobaccos, which is doubtless deemed one of the necessaries of life. The tax on cigars will not be disturbed, owing to the political influence of the manufacturers. Besides the recommendations of the President there will be an administration bill brought down embodying the suggested changes and on this bill the full Democratic strength will be shown.

THE DIVISION OF DAKOTA.

The Majority in Favor of Dividing the Territory 3000 so Far.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 23.—A special from Bismarck, Dak., says: Official returns thus far received at the Capital show that the majority for division in the territory is about 3000. As the official returns come in the estimated majority for division decreases and the majority for Prohibition increases. It is impossible to give the exact figures, as the returns are not all in. There is a possibility that the small majority for division will be entirely wiped out by returns yet to be received, as the majority of the counties to be heard from are in North Dakota.

The Nissouri Homicide.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Coroner Murray of Thorndale had a jury empanelled yesterday to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Robert Blackwell of West Nissouri. The jury, after viewing the body, adjourned till this afternoon. Drs. Smith and Brown left to-day to make a post mortem. The prisoner will be present at the hearing of the evidence in charge of Detective Graham. Mr. J. B. McKillip on behalf of the Crown will also attend the inquest.

Mr. Mandeville's Airy Cage.

DUBLIN, Nov. 23.—It is stated that Mr. Mandeville, Mr. O'Brien's fellow prisoner in Tullamore jail was forcibly stripped of his citizen's clothing last night by the wardens. He refuses to wear the convict garb and is now attired in a bed quilt.

An Action Set Aside.

DUBLIN, Nov. 23.—The action brought by Mrs. Margaret Dillon, midwife, of Aughrim, in the county Galway, against Mr. Balfour, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, has been set aside with costs. The plaintiff alleged that Mr. Balfour had caused to be published in various journals that the plaintiff had "refused to attend a woman because she was the wife of a man who had worked for a boycotted person." On the part of the defence it was claimed that Mr. Balfour had made the statement referred to in the course of a debate in the House of Commons, that the words had been uttered without malice and that Mr. Balfour was not responsible for the publication of the statement in the newspapers.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL.

Changes in the Management Said to Be At Hand.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—There is talk in inner circles of important changes in management of the Bank of Montreal. They may not occur right away, but enough has leaked out to suggest the idea that the board, or a powerful section of it, is of opinion that there is not the same administrative force at the head of affairs as formerly, and that the return of such a man as Mr. King, the former general manager and then president, would be hailed with satisfaction. It is even said that negotiations to this end are already under way.

M. GREVY WILL STEP DOWN

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT ALMOST FORCED FROM OFFICE.

Before Quitting His Post He Will Issue an Address to the Country—He Will Resign the Presidency with Sincere Wishes for the Republic's Future.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—President Grevy to-day informed M. Maset, a Radical member of the Chamber of Deputies that he had decided to resign. He said he would to-morrow request M. Rebat to form a ministry to superintend the meeting of the Congress of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies which will select a new president. If Rebat should refuse he will ask M. Goblet to form a ministry. Grevy further stated that he will not quit his post before issuing an address to the country in which he will repudiate responsibility for the present state of affairs, and declare that his retirement is forced by the impossibility of governing the country. He will depart from the Presidency with the sincerest wishes for the future of the Republic.

HE WILL FACE THE MUSIC.

Mr. E. E. Sheppard Goes Down to Montreal of His Own Free Will.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.

Last evening Mr. E. E. Sheppard, accompanied by Mrs. Sheppard and a friend, left for Montreal. Mr. Sheppard went down to face his prosecutors in that city. He also went of his own free will, not being under arrest, as the argument at Osgoode Hall has not yet been decided. The step was taken with the consent of his lawyers here, but against the advice of his Montreal lawyers.

It is understood to be Mr. Sheppard's intention to if possible settle the long-standing Montreal difficulty, and if a settlement cannot be arranged to submit to the decision of the courts, whatever it may be. In his valedictory on leaving The News yesterday he said:

For the past two a half years my Montreal lawsuits have been a continued drain financially, and have made it almost impossible for me to carry on business. That litigation has now reached a point where the last possibility has disappeared, and there is nothing left for me but to bow as cheerfully as possible to the inevitable.

Littlewood Leads the Feds at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Only five men now remain in the go-as-you-please race, but these are doing good work and the attendance to-night was as large as on the preceding nights. Littlewood, the Englishman, still holds the lead and his admirers are now confident that he will finish at the top of the list. There was no material change in the relative positions of the contestants to-day with the exception that the Englishman added about 4 miles to his lead over Albert. Score at 11 p.m.: Littlewood, 342 miles 6 laps; Albert, 315 miles; Panchot, 307 miles 1 lap; Noremac, 280 miles 1 lap; Elson, 279 miles.

The score at midnight was: Littlewood, 342 miles; Albert, 315; Panchot, 310; Noremac, 282; Elson, 283.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT.

John Harte, Manager of a Manufacturing Company at Belleville, Under Arrest.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 23.—John Harte, former manager of the Harte & Smith Manufacturing Company, has been arrested on the charge of embezzling the funds of the company. The amount is said to be between $20,000 and $30,000. He was brought up in the Police Court this morning and admitted to bail.

THE WRECK OF THE SCHOLTEN.

Over One Hundred Lives Were Lost by the Channel Collision.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—At the inquest on the recovered bodies of the victims of the W. A. Scholten disaster, the Rotterdam agent of the steamer testified that there were 214 persons aboard, of whom eighty-nine were saved. The body of Marcus Waser, one of the steerage passengers of the Scholten, was recovered to-day off Dover.

At the inquest to-day a steerage passenger named Hughes stated that he was picked up by one of the Scholten's boats, which was not nearly full. The crew of the boat pulled away as soon as the steamer sank. The Scholten's crew were retarded in lowering the boats by the stiffness of the tackle, which had not been used in a long time. Forty-nine of the survivors have returned to Rotterdam.

The Wreck a Dangerous Obstruction.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The German steamer Leander, from Cadiz for Hamburg, struck the wreck of the W. A. Scholten last evening and was towed to Dover in a sinking condition. The channel has been crowded with vessels for the last few days. The wreck of the Scholten lies directly in the path of traffic, and a special lightship has been sent to replace the improvised one placed over the wreck.

A DULL DAY AT OTTAWA.

A Deputation From Toronto and Hamilton Waits on the Minister of Customs.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—Information has been received at Government House of the death of Capt. Byng, at one time A.D.C. to the Governor General. His demise occurred in England after a brief illness.

The Department of Fisheries is receiving fishing bounty claims. The time for the filing of such expires on Dec. 31.

A deputation from Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton and other places called on the Minister of Customs to-day and urged the necessity of placing mould boards for the manufacture of ploughs on the 12½ per cent. list. Hon. Mr. Carling introduced the deputation. The minister discussed the points raised and promised to enquire into the matter. Mr. Wood of Messrs. Leggatt & Wood, Hamilton, referred to item 850 of the tariff which places "wire of iron or steel, galvanized or tinned, number sixteen gauge or smaller," on the free list, and stated that subsequently coppered wire, when imported by manufacturers, was added. He asked to have inserted in the item, after the word "galvanized," "coppered or not," so that wholesale merchants could import if they so desired. The minister promised to consider the question.

Argument in the case of the London Fire Insurance Company v. the Government was continued in the Supreme Court to-day. Judgment was reserved. The case of Gardiner v. Kloepter will be taken up to-morrow.

It is said Mr. Richard Hardisty of Edmonton will likely receive one of the new Senatorships for the Northwest.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau has returned to the city.

A Cabinet Council meeting was held to-day.

MANDEVILLE DONS A QUILT

O'Brien's Partner in Adversity Deprived of His Clothes.

DUBLIN, Nov. 23.—The Express says that Frank Hugh O'Donnell, ex-Vice-President of the Home Rule Confederation, has caused subpœnas to be issued for Parnell and Thomas Power O'Connor as witnesses in his suit against The London Times for £50,000 damages for libel, in charging him with being connected with the Phœnix Park murderers. Mr. O'Donnell has notified Mr. O'Connor to produce the minute books and ledgers of the Home Rule Federation and National League in his possession, particularly those covering the time spent by Mr. Parnell in Kilmainham Jail. The Parnellites are furious. Mr. Parnell had three months ago resolved to cross the sea in November in order to avoid being placed in the witness box.

An Unsuccessful Mission.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The attempt made at Thurles to-day to restore unity in the Gaelic Athletic Association was a failure, Messrs. Davitt and Fitzgerald finding that nothing short of absolute submission to the party represented by the priests would satisfy the seceders from the association, left Thurles without seeing Archbishop Croke.

A Warrant for Dillon.

DUBLIN, Nov. 23.—The Evening Telegraph says: A warrant has been issued for the arrest of John Dillon anywhere in Great Britain.

Montague's Majority is Twelve.

CAYUGA, Nov. 23.—The recount in the Haldimand election case was concluded this evening, resulting in Dr. Montague's majority being reduced to twelve.

Thirty-five Lives Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Advices received here state that two local Russian steamers, the Seneus and Vesta, came into collision off the Crimean coast to-day, and that the Vesta was sunk and thirty-five of her crew drowned.

Langevin-Giroux.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—E. J. Langevin, Clerk of the Senate of Canada, and Miss Giroux were married here to-day. Bishop Rimouski pronounced the Benediction. Sir Hector Langevin was present.

THE CROWN PRINCE'S CASE

A DOCTOR'S REPORT ON THE PROGRESS OF THE DISEASE.

The Patient Expresses Gratitude for the Many Messages of Sympathy Sent to Him From Germany and Elsewhere—Medical Men in Close Attendance.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—Dr. Schmidt, in a report to the Medical Society of Berlin on the case of the Crown Prince, says: Dr. Gerhardt was first consulted March 6. Afterwards by two operations he removed a tumor from the left vocal chord. He then intimated to Dr. Wegenar and Dr. Orth of Ems his fears that cancer existed. The sojourn of the Crown Prince at Ems was considered merely probationary, the object being to ascertain whether the swelling was benign or malignant. On June 18 Dr. Landgraft discovered a swelling on the larynx. On July 1 another swelling was observed, situated on the posterior wall of the larynx, with a strong outgrowth towards the left vocal chord. On Aug. 8 Dr. Mackenzie undertook to eradicate the swelling. After his operations the Crown Prince went to Braemar. The German doctors, for whom no accommodation was provided at Braemar, were not admitted to make a further examination until Aug. 23. The left vocal chord then showed several pointed excrescences which Dr. Mackenzie assumed to be the result of his operations. On Sept. 1 the German doctors left.

In conclusion Dr. Schmidt declares that "cancerous infiltration has existed from the very beginning below the left vocal chord. This caused irritation, which produced the papillary growths on the chord. About the removal of these the public is already fully informed."

How Long Will He Live?

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The latest bulletins from the Crown Prince are favorable, but experts say favorable for the moment only. The real question now is how long his life may be prolonged. German specialists think if an uncontrollable spasm of choking does not occur he may last four or five years. Sir Morell Mackenzie considers two years the limit.

Gratifying Sympathy.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—Count Radolenski, the Chamberlain of the Crown Prince, writes that the manifold proofs of sympathy which the Crown Prince has received from all parts of Germany and from abroad, together with the numerous kindly-meant recommendations of remedies to cure his malady, have deeply moved and rejoiced His Imperial Highness. It is impossible, the Chamberlain says, to reply separately to the many letters and telegrams received and the Crown Prince therefore desires to give a general expression of his thanks for the sympathy extended.

A despatch from San Remo says that the Crown Prince's voice continues very hoarse. Dr. Bramann takes no part in the medical treatment of the patient, which is still entrusted to Dr. Hovell. Dr. Bramann, however, will remain at San Remo in order to be ready at any moment to perform a surgical operation in case dangerous inflammatory action renders such a course necessary.

The Queen Will Visit Her Sick Son-in-Law.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Queen will go to San Remo in March for three weeks if the German Crown Prince and Crown Princess remain there through the winter. But if they return to Berlin Her Majesty will go to Germany at Easter in order to be with them for a time. The Queen has written privately to Emperor William strongly urging that an arrangement should at once be made to afford a liberal provision for the Crown Princess and her younger children in the event of the death of the Emperor and of the Crown Prince, as if they died now she would be left in very moderate circumstances. The Emperor has vast wealth at his disposal, of which it is supposed nine-tenths will pass to His successor on the Prussian throne, the Grand Duchess of Baden getting the rest.

PARKHILL'S GREAT LOSS.

Two Business Blocks Destroyed by Fire—Narrow Escape of the Tenants.

PARKHILL, Nov. 23.—A destructive fire took place here this morning about 1 o'clock, resulting in the destruction of the Levatt and Gardiner blocks. At present it is difficult to estimate the extent of the losses. The sufferers are: Simeon McLeod, Thomas Grundy, John Scoon, Munro Bros., Alexander Gardiner, W. H. Hutchinson and J. W. Green, the proprietor of The Parkhill Gazette, whose office was totally destroyed. Thomas McInnis, the Misses Shinner and E. J. Phippen, suffered by removal of goods, also Andrews' barber parlor and billiard rooms suffered by removal. Fortunately the night was calm, otherwise the loss would have been very serious. The fire brigade worked admirably, and through their exertion prevented the fire from making a fearful havoc. The Levatt family, the Gardiner family and the editor of The Gazette and his wife barely escaped with their lives. Mrs. Levatt was badly burned about the face, and some of the others more or less. At present it is difficult to state the loss but think it about $20,000.

THE CANAL COMMISSION.

JUDGE CLARK having withdrawn from the Trent Valley Canal Commission—and we have been informed on good authority that he will not act, because he would not be able to devote sufficient time to the work—it becomes necessary for the Government to appoint another gentleman to assist in the investigation.

A man should be appointed from the district through which the canal will run. The Commissioners from Toronto and Montreal are capable engineers, and the assistance of one who knows the territory which they are to examine would be of advantage to them. The appointment of a man who is versed in the history of the canal and who has a knowledge of the prospective benefits of its construction would be and advantage to the Commission and an aid to the Government.

It is not asking too much, considering that the people of the canal district are especially interested in the project, to request the appointment of a Commissioner from this section. It is true that the canal will be of great benefit to the people of Ontario generally, to Quebec and to the Northwest, as it would provide a waterway for the carrying of grain and other produce from the west to Montreal, but the people of the counties in which it will be built have a deep interest in it, and they should have one of their number upon the Commission that is to investigate the route.

As the canal is to be built, the Government being pledged to its construction, the authorities of course desire that it should be done according to the plans that will give the most benefit for the money expended. In arriving at a decision in regard to that, the facts gathered and reported by the Commission will no doubt be used, and the presence of man on the Commission who is versed in the subject could not fail to be of benefit in assisting in directing the enquiry and gathering evidence.

Complete information on the points of enquiry is what is required—that is the object of the commission—and following the course pointed out would facilitate the work of the Commission. When the Government appointed a Commission to enquire into labour questions they placed on it labouring men who understood the subject of enquiry, and on the same wise principle the canal district should be represented on the Canal Commission. The district has men competent to fill the position, and it should not be passed over. Mr. John Carnegie would make an admirable Commissioner, and one in whom the people would have confidence. His appointment would, we believe, give general satisfaction.

This view of the matter—the desirability of supplying the vacancy from the district—should be pressed upon the Government

REVIEWS.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.—The December number of this Magazine excels even the brilliant prestige of previous Christmas numbers. Every article and story is complete in itself, and there is a profusion of illustrated short stories. The Christmas idea predominates throughout in a most attractive form. "Old Garden Flowers" is a charming article by Mr. F. W. Burbidge, of the Dublin Botanical Gardens, illustrated by Mr. Alfred Parsons. Mr. Edwin A. Abbey contributes ten large illustrations of Mr. W. M. Praed's poems portraying "The Vicar" of two generations ago. "Pauline Pavlovna" is a powerful dramatic poem by Mr. T. B. Aldrich, illustrated by Reinhart. The most striking feature of the number is a colored plate of American gems illustrating an important article on "Precious Stones in the United States," by Mr. George F. Kunz. A poem, "The Convict's Christmas Eve," by Will Carleton, is illustrated by Mr. Gilbert Paul, and Harriet Lewis Bradley's poem, "Antony of Padua," is accompanied by an engraving by Closson from Murillo's painting of the subject. There are also short poems by Andrew Lang and William Black. The remarkable group of short stories is unparalleled in magazine literature, and they are beautifully illustrated. Mr. Howell's farce "Five O'clock Tea," is a fresh, sparkling dialogue, and is illustrated by Reinhart. The usual variety of attractions in the departments assume a bounteous holiday character. The "Easy Chair" and "Editor's Study" are dressed in a new suit of larger type, like the body of the magazine. The Christmas Reminiscences of Mr. Curtis are an extremely pleasing discourse. The "Drawer," contains a contribution from Mark Twain in the form of a "Petition to the Queen of England," and a humorous illustrated musical drama by Edward Everett Hale.

John Hart, late manager of the Belleville stove foundry, has been arrested on a charge of misappropriating money belonging to the company. The prosecuting lawyer stated that the total amount of the defalcations was $25,000 or $30,000.

While a son of Mr. Robt. McDonald, of Point Ann, was filling a cartridge on Wednesday, it exploded, shattering and lacerating his right hand in a terrible manner.

Harry Larmer, of Ballieboro, was thrown from his rig at a funeral by his horse becoming frightened at a steam mill whistle. He received a severe injury on the head.

Matthew Smith, of Millbrook, was upset out of his boat near Wallace's Point. He reached the shore with difficulty, but lost a pocketbook containing $90 and sundry notes.

Mrs. C. F. A. Holdsworth, of Port Hope, fell on Tuesday on stepping out of her back door and broke one of her arms at the wrist. As she is and elderly lady the fracture will be a serious matter.

Walter Benson, of Ballyduff, was attacked by a wildcat while returning from church. The animal sprang upon him and covered his face with its claws, but Mr. Benson beat it off. The lynx was afterwards caputured.

THE LEGS OF SPRINT RUNNERS.

Physical Characteristics Which Have Been Noted—A Professional Runner.

We feel prepared to maintain that relatively long limbs with a short body, full chest and small bones will characterize the typical short distance runner wherever he may be found. Short races (100, 220 and 440 yards) are often won by a few inches, and the value of an inch or two in a runner's stride is of the greatest importance, for, other qualifications being equal, this man is bound to be first at the goal.

The small girth of the legs of runners is often mystifying. From the girth of a muscle we get a correct idea of its volume or transverse diameters, but learn little of its length and the extent of its contractile fibers. Whereas it is the length of the muscle, and not the thickness, that is of significance to short distance runners. Given the physiological fact that a muscle can contract one-third of its length, it will readily be seen that the longer the muscle the greater will be the movement of the part to which it is attached. To the runner the desired movement is in the elevation of the thigh and the extension and inflexion of the leg and foot. An instantaneous photograph of sprint runners shows that the range in the movement of the limbs is very extensive—the stride of a fast walker being from four to six feet, and that of a fast runner from six to eight feet.

If the stature is short, it is necessary for the runner to get a greater elevation from the ground at each step in order to maintain a long stride. When this is done a relatively long lower leg is of the greatest advantage. This fact is admirably brought out in the case of Myers, the professional runner. With a height of 5 feet 7½ inches, which is a little below the mean or 50 per cent. class, he has a length of lower leg which corresponds to a man over 5 feet 10 inches in height, a length of thigh usually found in men of 5 feet 9 inches, while the sitting height is the same as that which makes up the stature of men of 5 feet 4 inches.—D. A. Sargent, M. D., in Scribner's Magazine.

Luck of a Would be Recruit.

"I want to join the army."

Thus spoke a spare countryman in the office of the United States recruiting station on Exchange street yesterday. He was dressed in homespun, or something very much like it, and wore heavy cowhides, the legs of which were about as long as his own legs. He looked dusty and tired, but in his eyes were the light of triumph that comes only when a goal is reached.

"Where did you come from?" was the first question asked.

"A hundred miles out of Northern Maine."

"How?"

"On my feet."

"What, and lugged those boots?"

"Yes, sir-e-e."

"How much do you weigh without your boots?"

"A hundred and thirty-five when I started."

"That will let you into the army if you weigh that now. Step on to those scales."

The fellow pulled off his boots and stepped on to the scales. He tipped them at 120, just under the weight that Uncle Sam wanted for a man of his height.

The blue coated soldier broke the news to him as gently as he could; but the iron entered the recruit's soul.

"Gosh!" he cried, "in coming that hundred miles have I walked off ten pounds, just flesh enough to have let me in? It must have been those boots that did it. I'll throw them away and fat up; will you take me then?"

"We will take you whenever you get heavy enough."—Portland Press.

Consumption of Sugar.

Statistics show that the consumption of sugar in the last fifty years has gone up from about fifteen to seventy pounds per head; of tea from one and one-quarter to four and three-quarter pounds per head; of tobacco from eighty-six hundredths to one and forty hundredths pounds per head, and so on.—Chicago News.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

Having introduced himself in those terms, he noticed Mrs. Ferrari, and held out his hand to her kindly. "It is some years since we last met, Emily," he said. "I am afraid you have almost forgotten the 'Master Henry' of old times." Emily, in some little confusion, made her acknowledgments, and begged to know if she could be of any use to Miss Lockwood. "The old nurse is with her," Henry answered, "they will be better left together." He turned once more to Mr. Troy. "I ought to tell you," he said, "that my name is Henry Westwick. I am the younger brother of the late Lord Montbarry."

"The late Lord Montbarry!" Mr. Troy exclaimed.

"My brother died at Venice yesterday evening. There is the telegram." With that startling answer he handed the paper to Mr. Troy.

The message was in these words:

"Lady Montbarry, Venice. To Stephen Robert Westwick, Newbury's hotel, London. It is useless to take the journey. Lord Montbarry died of bronchitis at 8:40 this evening. All needful details by post."

"Was this expected, sir?" the lawyer asked.

"I cannot say that it has taken us entirely by surprise," Henry answered. "My brother Stephen (who is now the head of the family) received a telegram three days since, informing him that alarming symptoms had declared themselves, and that a second physician had been called in. He telegraphed back to say that he had left Ireland for London, on his way to Venice, and to direct that any further message might be sent to his hotel. The reply came in a second telegram. It announced that Lord Montbarry was in a state of insensibility, and that, in his brief intervals of consciousness, he recognised nobody. My brother was advised to wait in London for later information. The third telegram is now in your hands. That is all I know up to the present time."

Happening to look at the courier's wife, Mr. Troy was struck by the expression of blank fear which showed itself in the woman's face.

"Mrs. Ferrari," he said, "have you heard what Mr. Westwick has just told me?"

"Every word of it, sir."

"Have you any questions to ask?"

"No, sir."

"You seem to be alarmed," the lawyer persisted. "Is it still about your husband?"

"I shall never see my husband again, sir. I have thought so all along, as you know. I feel sure of it now."

"Sure of it, after what you have just heard?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can you tell me why?"

"No, sir. It's a feeling I have. I can't tell why."

"Oh, a feeling!" Mr. Troy repeated, in a tone of compassionate contempt. "When it comes to feelings, my good soul"— He left the sentence unfinished, and rose to take his leave of Mr. Westwick. The truth is, he began to feel puzzled himself, and he did not choose to let Mrs. Ferrari see it. "Accept the expression of my sympathy, sir," he said to Mr. Westwick politely. "I wish you good evening."

Henry turned to Mrs. Ferrari, as the lawyer closed the door. "I have heard of your trouble, Emily, from Miss Lockwood. Is there anything I can do to help you?"

"Nothing, sir, thank you. Perhaps I had better go home after what has happened? I will call to-morrow, and see if I can be of any use to Miss Agnes. I am very sorry for her." She stole away, with her formal courtesy, her noiseless step, and her obstinate resolution to take the gloomiest view of her husband's case.

Henry Westwick looked round him in the solitude of the little drawing room. There was nothing to keep him in the house, and yet he lingered in it. It was something to be even near Agnes—to see the things belonging to her scattered about the room. There, in one corner, was her chair, with her embroidery on the work table by its side. On the little easel near the window was her last drawing, not quite finished yet. The book she had been reading lay on the sofa, with her tiny pencil case in it to mark the place at which she had left off. One after another he looked at the objects that reminded him of the woman whom he loved—took them up tenderly, and laid them down again with a sigh. Ah, how far, how unattainably far from him she was still! "She will never forget Montbarry," he thought to himself, as he took up his hat to go. "Not one of us feels his death as she feels it. Miserable, miserable wretch, how she loved him!"

In the street, as Henry closed the house door, he was stopped by a passing acquaintance—a wearisome, inquisitive man—doubly unwelcome to him at that moment. "Sad news, Westwick, this about your brother. Rather an unexpected death, wasn't it? We never heard at the club that Montbarry's lungs were weak. What will the insurance offices do?"

Henry started; he had never thought of his brother's life insurance. What could the offices do but pay? A death by bronchitis, certified by two physicians, was surely the least disputable of all deaths. "I wish you hadn't put that question into my head!" he broke out, irritably.

"Ah!" said his friend, "you think the widow will get the money? So do I! so do I!"

CHAPTER VII.

Some days later the insurance offices (two in number) received the formal announcement of Lord Montbarry's death, from her ladyship's London solicitors. The sum insured in each office was £5,000—on which one year's premium only had been paid. In the face of such a pecuniary emergency as this, the directors thought it desirable to consider their position. The medical advisers of the two offices, who had recommended the insurance of Lord Montbarry's life, were called into council over their own reports. The result excited some interest among persons connected with the business of life insurance. Without absolutely declining to pay the money, the two offices—acting in concert—decided on sending a commission of inquiry to Venice, "for the purpose of obtaining further information."

Mr. Troy received the earliest intelligence of what was going on. He wrote at once to communicate his news to Agnes; adding what he considered to be a valuable hint, in these words:

"You are intimately acquainted, I know, with Lady Barville, the late Lord Montbarry's eldest sister. The solicitors employed by her husband are also solicitors to one of the two insurance offices. There may possibly be something in the report of the commission of inquiry touching on Ferrari's disappearance. Ordinary persons would not be permitted, of course, to see such a document. But a sister of the late lord is so near a relative as to be an exception to general rules. If Sir Theodore Barville puts it on that footing, the lawyers, even if they do not allow his wife to look at the report, will at least answer any discreet question she may ask referring to it."

The reply was received by return of post. Agnes declined to avail herself of Mr. Troy's proposal.

"My interference, innocent as it was," she wrote, "has already been productive of such deplorable results that I cannot and dare not stir any further in the case of Ferrari. If I had not consented to let that unfortunate man refer to me by name, the late Lord Montbarry would never have engaged him, and his wife would have been spared the misery and suspense from which she is suffering now. I would not even look at the report to which you allude if it was put in my hands—I have heard more than enough already of that hideous life in the palace at Venice. If Mrs. Ferrari chooses to address herself to Lady Barville—with your assistance—that is, of course, another thing. But, even in this case, I must make it a positive condition that my name shall not be mentioned. Forgive me, my dear Mr. Troy! I am very unhappy, and very unreasonable—but I am only a woman, and you must not expect too much from me."

Foiled in this direction, the lawyer next advised making the attempt to discover the present address of Lady Montbarry's English maid. This excellent suggestion had one drawback: it could only be carried out by spending money—and there was no money to spend. Mrs. Ferrari shrunk from the bare idea of making any use of the £1,000 note. It had been deposited in the safe keeping of a bank. If it was even mentioned in her hearing, she shuddered and referred to it, with melodramatic fervor, as "my husband's blood money!"

So, under stress of circumstances, the attempt to solve the mystery of Ferrari's disappearance was suspended for awhile.

It was the last month of the year 1880. The commission of inquiry was already at work, having begun its investigations on Dec. 6. On the 10th the term for which the late Lord Montbarry had hired the Venetian palace expired. News by telegram reached the insurance offices that Lady Montbarry had been advised by her lawyers to leave for London with as little delay as possible. Baron Rivar, it was believed, would accompany her to England, but would not remain in that country unless his services were absolutely required by her ladyship. The baron, "well known as an enthusiastic student of chemistry," had heard of certain recent discoveries in connection with that science in the United States, and was anxious to investigate them personally.

These items of news, collected by Mr. Troy, were duly communicated to Mrs. Ferrari, whose anxiety about her husband made her a frequent—a too frequent—visitor at the lawyer's office. She attempted to relate what she had heard to her good friend and protectress. Agnes steadily refused to listen, and positively forbade any further conversation relating to Lord Montbarry's wife, now that Lord Montbarry was no more. "You have Mr. Troy to advise you," she said; "and you are welcome to what little money I can spare, if money is wanted. All I ask in return is that you will not distress me. I am trying to separate myself from remembrances"—her voice faltered; she paused to control herself—"from remembrances," she resumed, "which are sadder than ever since I have heard of Lord Montbarry's death. Help me by your silence to recover my spirits, if I can. Let me hear nothing more until I can rejoice with you that your husband is found."

Time advanced to the 13th of the month; and more information of the interesting sort reached Mr. Troy. The labors of the insurance commission had come to an end—the report had been received from Venice that day.

CHAPTER VIII.

On the 14th the directors and their legal advisers met for the reading of the report with closed doors. These were the terms in which the commissioners related the results of their inquiry:

"Private and Confidential.

"We have the honor to inform our directors that we arrived in Venice on Dec. 6, 1880. On the same day we proceeded to the palace inhabited by Lord Montbarry at the time of his last illness and death.

"We were received with all possible courtesy by Lady Montbarry's brother, Baron Rivar. 'My sister was her husband's only attendant throughout his illness,' the baron informed us. 'She is overwhelmed by grief and fatigue—or she would have been here to receive you personally. What are your wishes, gentlemen, and what can I do for you, in her ladyship's place?'

"In accordance with our instructions, we answered that the death and burial of Lord Montbarry abroad made it desirable to obtain more complete information relating to his illness and to the circumstances which had attended it than could be conveyed in writing. We explained that the law provided for the lapse of a certain interval of time before the payment of the sum assured, and we expressed our wish to conduct the inquiry with the most respectful consideration for her ladyship's feelings, and for the convenience of any other members of the family inhabiting the house.

"To this the baron replied, 'I am the only member of the family living here, and I and the palace are entirely at your disposal.' From first to last we found this gentleman perfectly straightforward and most amiably willing to assist us.

"With the one exception of her ladyship's room, we went over the whole of the palace the same day. It is an immense place, only partially furnished. The first floor and part of the second floor were the portions of it that had been inhabited by Lord Montbarry and the members of the household. We saw the bed chamber at one extremity of the palace, in which his lordship died, and the small room communicating with it, which he used as a study. Next to this was a large apartment or hall, the doors of which he habitually kept locked, his object being—as we were informed—to pursue his studies uninterruptedly in perfect solitude. On the other side of the large hall were the bed chamber occupied by her ladyship and the dressing room in which the maid slept previous to her departure for England. Beyond these were the dining and reception rooms, opening into an ante chamber, which gave access to the grand staircase of the palace.

"The only inhabited rooms on the second floor were the sitting room and bed room occupied by Baron Rivar, and another room at some distance from it, which had been the bed room of the courier, Ferrari.

MONOMANIA SAID TO BE THE ONLY SAFETY OF MANKIND.

An Expert's Opinion of Lunacy and Lunatics—A Product of Gin—Cleanliness Run to Seed—Religious Fervor—Foreign Pauper Lunatics.

"It is difficult to draw the line betwixt sanity and lunacy," said the late superintendent of an insane asylum, who finally ended his days at Napa, where he was sent as an inmate, to a reporter. He was an entertaining monologist, and as instructive as he was entertaining. "I, in common with many physicians," said he, "contend that every one is a monomaniac, and he who escapes polymania is a fortunate man.

"I am often asked what I consider to be the most frequent cause of insanity," he went on, "and I, in my turn, have put the same question to all men of our profession who have made disease of the mind at all a specialty. A young doctor from Dublin answered the question tersely with one word, 'Gin.'

"Yes, I suppose alcohol is responsible for a great deal of it, and yet the French have fewer insane than any people upon earth, and with them the red wine is drunk by the tun, and it contains a large per cent. of alcohol. Overwork, stimulated by the prevalent spirit of rivalry, breaks down the brain forces of the American; but his body generally succumbs as well, so that our insane are violent and short lived, while in Great Britian it takes the form of dementia, and the patient lives on and on and dies in a maudlin condition of old age.

"The county of York, in England, is divided into what is known as the East and West Riding. In early times so many miles was called a day's riding. Well, in the West Riding alone of Yorkshire there is a public asylum containing 1,300 native lunatics. Besides, there are those kept at home by friends or sent to private institutions, and the other half of the county is furnished with another asylum of even greater capacity.

FREAKS OF MONOMANIACS.

"Were not any abnormal condition of mind sad to contemplate, some of the freaks of monomaniacs would be most amusing. Many times what appears but a leading characteristic or modification of character in youth assumes at middle life, especially with women, distinctive features of lunacy.

"I remember a lady I knew in her young married days, who was noted for her splendid housekeeping. Not a speck of dirt was to be found, even in the remotest corners of her dark closets. The parlor fairly shone with cleanliness, and even her kitchen was a poem in the beauty of its absolute order and freedom from the smallest smirch.

"Ten years later I visited her, and before she allowed me to enter she asked me to rub my feet on a series of mats before the door, and before she offered me a chair she wiped it carefully with a neatly hemmed cloth that she constantly held in her hand or kept in the pocket of a large apron she wore over her elegant robe de maison.

"It did not occur to me until I had been a couple of hours in the house that my hostess was a mad woman, nor did even her husband suspect it, so slowly had this thing crept upon her; but she is today in an asylum with a dust rag in her hand, and not a grain of dirt mars the utter cleanliness of her apartment.

"Kleptomania is one of the most common phases we find, and," added the doctor, with dry humor, "it appears to be confined to no class or condition of men. The real kleptolunacy is generally confined to the stealing of some class of articles, and arises from antenatal desire or covetousness, and is usually outgrown by adults, though it is not uncommon with children.

AN AGGRAVATING CAUSE.

"Religious fervor is probably the most frequent aggravating cause of insanity in this country. I remember visiting a country asylum where there were thirty-seven patients. Twenty-eight of these had gone mad over religion, five had been sunstruck, two had received falls and one had been frightened daft in a hotel fire. And this same large percentage of religio-maniacs prevails in nearly all of our asylums.

"But now our madhouses are becoming so filled up with foreigners, it is difficult to determine with much accuracy anything about it from a provincial standpoint. One of the surgeons of the Anchor line steamers told me he brought over no less than a score of lunatics, drugged into a submissive state, and kept so the first few days out from Great Britain, and what they sometimes became quiet violent before they reached New York. Here they are put in pauper asylums and our government protects them through the long years of their physical decadence.

"I once knew a woman who could not see water without wanting to drink. It was as much a ruling characteristic with her that she never went anywhere without taking with her a silver tankard of the beverage, and when she went to church to have her child christened she had to stop the rite long enough to satisfy her natural craving by drinking from the baptismal font with the clergyman's goblet, causing a subdued laugh through the congregation. But, poor woman, she couldn't have helped it, had it been to save her life."—San Francisco Post.

An Unfortunate Heroine.

Omaha Dame—How proud I am to know you. You are a true heroine and everybody is talking about you.

Brave Girl—I wish it had never happened.

"How can you! Just think, you attacked a burglar single handed and held him until help arrived. The papers said he was utterly prostrated by the blow you gave him with that rolling pin."

"I wish I hadn't touched him."

"Why, dear?"

"I'm afraid I've spoiled my chances of marrying."—Omaha World.

On the "Installment Plan."

Everything in this city goes on the installment plan, especially among certain classes, not necessarily the poorer ones, by the way. Some time ago a friend of mine was showing me a fine gold watch, worth at least $100, which he had recently purchased. I had not heard of his falling heir to any property or having any luck in the L. S. L., and looked a bit surprised. "I'll tell you how it is," he said. "I am buying this on the installment plan. I paid $20 spot cash and the balance in, payments of $2 per week. Yes, it will take forty weeks to buy the watch; then, I have the watch during that time and every one supposes I own it." And I found that many of the young men are doing the same way.

But I heard of an instance where a young man had bought his engagement ring on the installment plan. He is getting $7.50 per week, and has always managed to wear good clothes, and had one of the prettiest little girls on the East Side for company. At length they became engaged, and she exhibited the ring to some friends, and among them was an expert in jewelry who told me the story. "I could not imagine," he said, "how that young fellow could afford so expensive jewelry, but I found out. The ring cost $18 and he paid $3 down, and is now paying twenty-five cents a week. Only think of it! It will take sixty weeks to pay for the ring." I wonder if the girl knows!—Buffalo News.

A Brutal and Disgusting Sport.

We read a great deal of expatiative twaddle about the excitement of the stag hunting on Exmoor, but there seems to be much that is altogether brutal, barbarous and disgusting about this sport. There is something most horrible in the practice of seizing the deer at the end of the run and publicly cutting its throat. How a mob of educated men and women can look complacently on at such horrid butchery it is difficult to understand. An account of a recent run gives a harrowing picture of a terrified stag finding itself "dead beat" at the end of a long and agonizing chase. It was hemmed in on every side by its pursuers, so, after "looking wildly round," it could only dash down the cliff and plunge into the sea, where it was drowned in sight of the excited field, as it was too exhausted to battle with the waves. At the beginning of another run two stags were hunted out of the glade in which they had concealed themselves, and one was so bustled about that its back was broken.—London Truth.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla acts directly and promptly, purifying and enriching the blood, improving the appetite, strengthening the nerves and invigorating the system. It is, in the truest sense, an alterative medicine. Every invalid should get a trial.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

With the November, 1887, issue THE CENTURY commences its thirty-fifth volume with a regular circulation of almost 250,000. The War Papers and the Life of Lincoln increased its monthly edition by 100,000. The latter history having recounted the events of Lincoln's early years, and given the necessary survey of the political condition of the country, reaches a new period, with which his secretaries were most intimately acquainted. Under the caption the writers now enter on the more important part of their narrative, viz.: the early years of the War and President Lincoln's part therein.

Lincoln in the War,

Supplementary War Papers.

following the "battle series" by distinguished generals, will describe interesting features of army life, tunneling from Libby Prison, narratives of personal adventure, etc. General Sherman will write on "The Grand Strategy of the War."

Kennan of Siberia.

Except the Life of Lincoln and the War Articles, no more important series has ever been undertaken by THE CENTURY than this of Mr. Kennan's. With the previous preparation of four years' travel and study in Russia and Siberia, the author undertook a journey of 15,000 miles for the special investigation here required. An introduction from the Russian Minister of the Interior admitted him to the principal mines and prisons, where he became acquainted with some three hundred State exiles,—Liberals, Nihilists, and others,—and the series will be a startling as well as accurate revelations of the exile system. The many illustrations by the artist and photographer, Mr. George A. Frost, who accompanied the author, will add greatly to the value of the articles.

A Novel by Eggleston.

with illustrations will run through the year. Shorter novels will follow by Cable and Stockton. Shorter fictions will appear every month.

Miscellaneous Features

will comprise several illustrated articles on Ireland, by Charles De Kay; papers touching the field of the Sunday-School Lesson, illustrated by E. L. Wilson; wild Western life, by Theodore Roosevelt; th English Cathedrals, by Mrs. van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Pennell; Dr. Buckley's valuable papers on Dreams, Spiritualism, and Clairvoyance; essays in criticism, art, travel, and biography; poems; cartoons; etc.

By a special offer the numbers for the past year (containing the Lincoln history) may be secured with the year's subscription from November, 1887, twenty-four issues in all, for $6.00, or, with the last year's numbers handsomely bound, $7.50.

Published by THE CENTURY Co. 33 East 17th Street, New-York.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Piano Tuning.

Mr. Geo. Gumpricht is in town. Orders may be left at Mr. T. Menzies' or Messrs. Taylor & McDonald's store.

Shipment of Horses.

Mr. Jacobs, the horse buyer, took from town this morning fifteen fine heavy carriage horses to Montreal. The average price paid was $120.

The Lodge Room.

The improvements at the lodge room of Otonabee Lodge I.O.O.F. are drawing toward completion. The premises will be in first class shape by December 9th, when the fifth anniversary of the resuscitation of the lodge will be held.

The New Toronto Paper.

The new Conservative paper, the Empire, will make its appearance in Toronto about December 15th. It will be a morning paper, and the Manager announces that arrangements have been made for a full supply of news and that it will start with a brilliant staff of writers.

Boys and Fruit.

The Mrs. Gorman fruit and cake case was on the Police Court programme this morning. Mrs. Gorman and some of her witnesses were on hand and the boys who are charged with stealing the jam and cake were also there. Owing to the absence of important witnesses for the prosecution, the case, on the application of Mr. Wood, was adjourned till Monday.

JUST opened out 20 New Patterns of Jackets and Ulster Cloths; remarkable value; at TURNBULL'S

Heavy Damages Claimed.

Messrs. J. Whyte & Co., foundrymen, have entered a suit against the Grand Trunk Railway Company to recover $10,000 damages for their foundry on McDonnel street having been destroyed by fire, caused, they say, from sparks from a passing locomotive. The case will be heard at the next Spring assizes in Peterborough. Mr. C. W. Sawers is retained as solicitor for the plaintiffs.

League of the Cross.

The proceedings of this society at its next meeting will be more interesting than usual. The present members will solemnly renew their pledge for one year under the direction of the Bishop. The same will also be administered to candidates for admission, of whom there are several. The beneficial members will then be enrolled as a distinct branch and subscribe to the regulations favouring assessments. Mr. T. Hurley will read a temperance essay and addresses will be delivered by a number of gentlemen. If time permits and open debate will take place on the subject "Resolved, that the power and influence of England is on the decline." Volunteer speakers are requested to hand in their names to the Secretary before the meeting opens. Should the other proceedings occupy the attention of the society till late the debate will take place at the next following meeting.

Real Estate.

The real estate put up at auction by Mr. Hurley at Cavanagh's hotel on Wednesday was not disposed of. Four out of the six parcels drew bids approxminating the reserve bid, but not quite sufficient to permit a closure.

The Stand.

Mr. Harry Denne will locate his flour and feed store in the Chamberlen block, opposite the market, two doors west of T. Cavanaugh's new hotel, not in the Dunsford block as announced. His friends will find him there in a few days.

Scott Act News.

At this morning's session of the Police Court fines of $50 and costs were imposed upon John Gagnol, and A. Graham for infractions of the Scott Act. Charges of violating the Scott Act preferred against P. Croft and M. Halpin were enlarged till Monday.

Blank Books.

Business men are asked to bear in mind that the REVIEW bindery is turning out the very best description of work in all lines of account books and ledgers. All orders finished up with despatch. Customers can select their own papers from a large and well assorted stock, and have any special ruling desired. d108eod

A Resemblance to the Baby.

Mr. G. B. Sproule, Photographer, Peterborough.

SIR,—I have just received the completion of my order, and must say that I am, or we are very much pleased with them and shall no doubt remember you at some future time if spared. Every body passes a remark about the striking resemblance to the baby. Yours truly, S. VEVIAN, Midland, Ont. d124-w47

A Social

will be held at the residence of Mr. George Dunsford, Simcoe street, on the evening of Wednesday, the 30th inst., in aid of the Mission Fund of St. John's Church. A choice programme, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, readings and recitations, will be given. Admission 25 cents. All are cordially invited. Refreshments. 3d128

At the Capital.

Miss Annie Delaney took part in a concert given by Miss Rose Braniff in the Grand Opera House, Ottawa, on Tuesday evening. The morning Citizen says:—"As pianists, Misses Carrie Braniff, Pinard, Gagne and Pigeon, and above all, Miss Delaney, were remarkably good and contributed their full share to the great success of the evening."

Lots.

Mr. W. A. Dixon, who owns fifty acres of land within the corporation of the town of Sault Ste Marie, sold fifteen lots on Wednesday at $150 each. A syndicate composed of Messrs. Dixon, Jas. Little and A. Thomas, who own twenty five acres in the same place sold three lots at the same amount, the latter lots being a little large in size. The total amount realized was $2,700.

The Industrial School.

We are informed by the Secretary of the Industrial School Association of Toronto, that owing to the rapid increase in the number of lads at the Industrial School at Mimico, it may be impossible, even with the aid of the new building now in course of erection, to accommodate all applicants. We make this fact known in order that neglected lads in this section may enjoy the advantages of the school while possible.

Debating Club.

A meeting of the Literary and Debating Club was held in the Murray Street Separate School on Wednesday evening. The question of debate for the evening was: "Resolved: That the American Colonies had not sufficient cause for separation from the Mother Country." Mr. Joseph Phelan led the affirmative and was suported by Messrs. Hackett and D. Henry. The negative was maintained by Mr. D. Lynch, supported by Messrs. Henry and Doherty. Some spirit stirring speeches were made. Each one was heavily freighted with argument which the light winged eloquence of the rising young orators gracefully carried along. Mr. J. D. McIlmoyl occupied the chair, and, after summing up, decided in favor of the negative. The number of points stood 95 for the negative and 70 for the affirmative.

Presentation.

The St. John's South Ward Sunday School room was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Wednesday evening. Nine or ten of the lady teachers and several friends of the school were present. The special object of the meeting was to present Miss Etta Buller, one of the teachers of the school, who was about taking upon herself new social duties, with a beautiful photograph album in recognition of her services in instructing the children of her class. The presentation was made, on behalf of the teachers, by the superintendent, Mr. F. R. Yokome, who made a neat speech, commenting on the services Miss Buller had rendered to the school, and expressing the good wishes of all for her future welfare. Refreshments were served, vocal and instrumental music was provided, and with such entertainment and in social intercourse a very pleasant evening was spent.

Around the Town Buildings.

—The Town Clerk received five appeals through the post office this morning against the Municipal Voters' list. There are only about ten appeals altogether.

—Engineer English has some doubt as to how the iron track will work in the engine house.

—The people have only six days to get their taxes into the hands of the Collector if they wish to avoid the extra 5 per cent.

—A confiscated catapult lies in the constable's parlor. Inspector Cochrane saw it this morning. A few days ago he saw a boy shooting birds off a telegraph wire with a similar machine. He didn't know how it worked. P. C. Adams showed him. A missile was placed in the sling. The Inspector aimed at the opposite wall. Whiz! Missile takes Inspector on the chin.

—The next Council meeting will be called by the Mayor. It will be held on Monday evening next in all probability.

—A meeting of the Finance Committee is called for to-morrow evening.

—Magistrate Dumble used his elegantly luridly upholstered chair for the first time this morning.

S. O. E.

The annual dinner of the Sons of England, Lansdowne Lodge, will be held at the Grand Central Hotel soon. Announcement of the date will be made later.

St. Andrew's.

Attention is called to the advertisement in another column of the date upon which the St. Andrew's dinner is to be held, the place it will be held and the arrangements made to make it a successful affair.

Otonabee Canoe Club.

A meeting of the Otonabee Canoe Club was held on Wednesday evening, Mr. John Miller, the Commodore, in the chair. After passing several accounts the members present talked over the affairs of the club. It was decided that at the next meeting they will hold either a debate or a spelling match—a spelling match likely. The Commodore has "one" for any man who has the courage to stand up against it. He is going to give out she-la-leigh to start with. Now for dictionaries.

Died.

Mr. Wm. Metheral, who was admitted to the Nicholls Hospital a few days ago, died this morning at five o'clock of typhoid fever, which disease he was taken ill with a short time ago. He spent a very good day on Wednesday, but a relapse occurred during the night and he succumbed at the hour mentioned. The deceased was 61 years of age and spent the best part of his life in business in Peterborough. He carried on his carriage factory business on Aylmer street with success, and in his dealings with the people made many friends. His wife died about two weeks ago.

Boat House Burned.

Canoeists who were at Stoney Lake last summer will remember McCracken's spring on the south shore of the lake. Alongside the spring was a new boat house built by residents of the vicinity, and well filled with canoes and boats. On Friday morning the boat house was burned with the entire contents. About $300 worth of paddling and sailing craft was reduced to ashes. Fortunately the building and contents were insured for a fair amount. It is said that the fire was the work of an incendiary and steps are being taken to investigate the matter.

Saw Works.

A meeting of those interested in the establishment here of a saw and file works was held on Wednesday afternoon. A satisfactory arrangement was made for a building suitable for the commencement at an early date of the manufacture of saws and files. Others details were settled and, the stock book being opened, a fair amount was subscribed. The subscription of $5,000 more stock is required before the Company can start operations. Those interested in the town, and especially those largely interested in real estate, should not allow the arrangments for establishing this industry here to fall through when but little assistance on their part would assure its success. The stock book is at Mr. Stevenson's office. Subscriptions will be gladly taken even if they are below $500.

Local Brevities.

—The water mains are being extended up Chambers street to supply the livery stables in rear of blocks on Hunter street.

—Taking the testimony of a galloping urchin as founded on fact there is "bully skating up at Whyte's foundry." The ice may be there, but a prudent thing to do is to sort out lightest boys to use it. The usual sudden immersion-and-daring-rescue items may be looked for shortly.

—The Skating and Curling Rink, in anticipation of the season's business, has been swept and garnished. This afternoon the curling rink floors will be given a sprinkling of water, just to solidfy things and afford Jack Frost a chance to get in a little work. When given a good cold snap the rinks will will be flooded.

—The Deputy District Grand Master, R. Bro. Shortly, accompanied by the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, District Secretary, and W. Bro. Belleghem, L.A., will visit the Norwood Masonic Lodge this evening.

An Old San Francisco Coin.

A coin that is much sought after by numismatists was shown to a reporter the other morning. It is not only remarkable for its scarcity, but for its being a relic of the days of '49. The coin is a half eagle and there are very few of them in existence. The market value of the coin is said to be $5. On the face of the coin is the old style American eagle surrounded by the words: "California gold—without alloy." On the reverse side are the words: "Full weight of half eagle." Twenty-two stars line the inner circle of the above words and inside the inner circle at the top are the letters "N. G. and N." Across the diameter of the inner circle is the date "1849," and below this is the name "San Francisco." The edges are not milled. The coin is light yellow in color and resembles a brass check but is heavier than a half eagle of the present day.—New York Evening Sun.

TEA AND ENTERTAINMENT.—A tea and entertainment in aid of the Presbyterian Sunday School was held on Thanksgiving Day at Centreville. The tea was held in the Agricultural Hall and the entertainment in the Church, and proved to be quite a success, the proceeds amounting to about seventy-five dollars. After the tea a splendid programme was provided, which consisted of instrumental and vocal music, and readings and recitations. The programme was as follows:—A Thanksgiving hymn by the choir, a reading by J. F. Morrison, entitled "The Sunday School," a song by the Sunday School children, "Gather Them In," which did their trainers great credit, a song by the Gillett Family and Mr. C. Byers, which did them great credit, an instrumental solo by Miss Hutchings, which was executed in first class style, a reading and recitation by Miss Clark, of North Monaghan, which was given in grand style, a recitation by Master Herriott, rendered beautifully for a boy of eight years, an instrumental solo by Miss Lila Might was rendered with great credit to both teacher and pupil. A song, "Let the Angels In," by the children was very nicely sung, which closed the first part.

Part second was commenced by the Church Choir singing an antnem, "Praise Waiteth for Thee," which elicited great applause. A reading by Mr. Strike, which was the only piece bordering on the comic, was received with general clapping of hands. A song by the Gillett family and Mr. C. Byers followed and brought down the house, as usual whenever Charlie is singing. An instrumental duet by the Missis Deyell was splendid. A recitation was given by Miss Might. An instrumental solo by Miss Alice Stuart was beautifully given and received the applause it deserved. A vocal duet by the Missis Hutchings was given in their usual fine style. A recitation by Miss Dodds, of Hope, was given in professional style. A song "Little ones like me," by the Sunday School children followed. The performance closed with "God Save the Queen." The afternoon was a most enjoyable one and every one appeared pleased with the performance.

DEATH OF JOCKEY SPELLMAN.

A Canadian Who Attained Eminence in the Saddle—Toboggan Slide in Queen's Park.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—John Spellman, the jockey, died this morning from the effects of injuries received in a house of questionable reputation on Thirteenth-street.

[Spellman was a Canadian by birth, having been born in the County of Brant. About 1871 he was a bell boy in a Brantford hotel, which occupation he left to join the turf. His first and only employer in Canada was the well-known horseman Pat Davey, in whose employ he was two years, during which he became prominent by riding the old horse Pilot. In 1873 he left Canada and went to the United States, where he soon became very successful in the saddle, and till within a few years was considered one of the best jockeys on the American turf. One of his most prominent victories was on Drake Carter at Saratoga in 1883 when he defeated the Dwyer Brothers' crack Barnes for the United States Hotel Stakes. Barnes was a big favorite and what made it stronger he had McLaughlin on his back. An account of the race says that "Barnes and Drake Carter came into the home stretch locked together; a most terrific race to the finish resulted in a head victory for Carter." The distance was a mile and a half and the time 2.36 showed that it was a desperate contest. Spellman has ridden for all the most prominent owners on the American turf, but of late years has seldom been seen in the saddle, having taken to the bottle. The past few years he has made his living by racing horses of his own, one of which was Strathspey, which he only recently sold to Mr. Wm. Hendrie of Hamilton. Spellman was well known in Toronto and is said to be about 33 years of age.]

THE BOGUS CHECK SWINDLE.

A Hamilton Merchant Taken in by a Man Who Said He was a Brakeman.

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—On Monday a man who gave his name as John Chambers and said that he was a brother of a railway conductor on the Grand Trunk who ran east from Toronto, purchased a suit of clothes and several shirts at Messrs. W. P. Giles & Co. In payment he tendered a bank check for $40.45, signed C. Stiff, G.T.R. He explained that he was a brakeman on the G.T.R., and having come in late Mr. Stiff, when he applied for his pay, had handed him the check and told him that he would have no difficulty in negotiating it anywhere in the city. Mr. Giles was suspicious at first, but the manner of the man disarmed him and he accepted the check, giving $33.45 in change, with which and his purchase the man disappeared. It was afterwards found that the check was of no value. The police are trying to find the swindler.

The Funeral of Mr. Dennis Moore.

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—The funeral of the late Mr. Dennis Moore took place from the family residence, Hannah-street, this afternoon, and was the largest funeral which has been seen in this city for years. The employes of the different works in which Mr. Moore was interested attended in a body. The cortege went from the house to the Centenary Church and from there to the cemetery. The pall-bearers were Senator Sanford, A. T. Wood, John Stuart, Charles Hope, S. F. Lazier, Joseph Lister, F. C. Fearman and Charles Gurney.

The Middlemarch Tragedy.

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 15.—The inquest into the cause of death of Thos. Hatherly of Middlemarch was opened this morning before Coroner Gustin in the County Court House. There was a large attendance and intense interest was manifested, but the evidence so far as taken failed to implicate the parties accused of the crime, and would seem to indicate after all that deceased came to his death by accidentally falling from his vehicle while under the influence of liquor and breaking his spine at the neck in the fall.

THE GERMAN REICHSTAG.

NO MEMBERS OF THE COURT PRESENT AT THE OPENING.

The Speech From the Throne Alludes Briefly to the Ailment of the Crown Prince—Nothing Said as to the Position of Prince William.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The Reichstag was opened to-day. Minister Von Boetticher read the speech from the throne. The speech was substantially as follows:

Germany in her foreign policy has successfully endeavored to strengthen the peace of Europe by the cultivation of friendly relations wish all of the powers by treaties and alliances, aiming to avert the dangers of war and to jointly oppose any unjust attacks. Germany has no aggressive tendencies, she has no wants to be satisfied through victorious wars. An unchristian disposition to surprise neighboting peoples is foreign to the German nature and to the constitution of the empire. The military organization of the country is not calculated to disturb the peace of her neighbors by arbitrary attacks. Germany is strong in parrying surprises and in defending her independence. She wishes to become so strong that she can face with composure every danger.

The resumption of the Reichstag comes at a serious time. The grave complaint with which the Crown Prince has been visited fills the mind, not only of the Emperor, but also of his august allies and the whole of Germany, with anxious care. Nothing that human science, knowledge and careful tending can do will be left undone. Our eyes and prayers, however, are directed toward God, whose decrees rule the destinies of nations as well as the life of the individual man. Firm confidence in God and the faithful fulfilment of duty have been in all especially grave moments the tried support of our people, and they now also enable us to do justice to the labors awaiting the legislatures.

There has been a gratifying improvement in the financial condition of the country, and it is expected that next year will show a surplus of nearly fifty million marks. Bills will be introduced abolishing compulsory contributions on the part of officers and Imperial officials to the widows and orphans' funds, increasing the corn duties, modifying the Landwehr and Landstrum system, so that it will be considerably strengthened, relating to the insurance of artisans in cases of old age and sickness, modifying the friendly societies' law, with regard to the sale of wine, temporarily prolonging the Austro-German treaty and ratifying treaties of commerce with some American states."

One hundred and fifty deputies were present. The places reserved for members of the court were not occupied. In the diplomatic gallery there were only a few military attaches, but the public galleries were crowded.

At noon the members of the Bundesrath entered the White Hall, which was illuminated, and took positions on the left of the throne. During the reading of the speech the minister was often interrupted by applause and enthusiastic cheers. At the close he declared the Reichstag open and Herr Wedell Piesdorf, the president of the body, called for cheers for the Emperor, which were given with enthusiasm.

The president in his opening address alluded to the serious nature of the illness of the Crown Prince, and the grief of the country over his fate. Anxiety concerning his condition relegated all other thoughts to the back ground. The members would join, the president said, in expressing their sorrow and declaring that they placed their confidence in God's grace and mercy. He asked authority to convey these sentiments to the Emperor and send the following telegram to the Crown Prince:

The Reichstag, in profound reverence and cordial love, thinks of Your Imperial Highness. May God protect your precious life and preserve it for the salvation of the Fatherland.

The deputies listened to the address standing, and unanimously approved the president's suggestions.

THE FISHERY CONFERENCE.

Any Decision the Commissioners Come to May be Rejected in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The daily arrival of members of Congress with their families and followers is adding generally to the interest of the capital and giving it a truly metropolitan aspect. The fact that an Anglo-American conference is in session here brings the Canadian question into greater prominence than it usually occupies in political circles and facilitates methods of inquiry as to how it is likely to be treated by Congress. The greatest mistake made on the northern side of the border is the supposition that there is any general national sentiment regarding Canada. No such interest attaches to it and among representatives and senators generally the future of the Dominion is looked upon with supreme indifference. It has been, is now and will always be treated as a political kite which will be utilized or thrown aside as a party exigencies dictate. In the present crisis the existing Government realizies that it is due to the dignity of the nation that an honorable settlement should be effected, and is anxious to accomplish it, but it is to be feared that the opposition, who are in the ascendency in the Senate, will not adhere to the requirements of national honor and prestige if they can embarras the Government by frustrating a settlement of the question at issue.

SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

The Employes of a Decorating Shop Found Unconscious on the Floor.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Nov. 24.—Last evening Elmer Bennet entered the decorating shop of James Baum, and was horrified at finding five girls and two men lying prostrate on the floor, to all appearance dead. He summoned assistance, and by throwing water in their faces, managed to resuscitate two of the girls and two of the men, one of whom fell over again, however. Physicians prescribed for the patients, but could not account for their condition. At the present writing a decorator named James Amelius, is raving like a maniac, and a girl named Ella Hill is not much better, the others being in a serious condition. The physicians cannot tell whether death will result or not. It is supposed that the hands were asphyxiated by a leak of natural gas, but no odor is perceptible in the shop, and the whole affair is surrounded in mystery.

TYPOS AND THEIR WORK.

SECOND DAY'S EVIDENCE BEFORE THE LABOR COMMISSION.

A Terrorized Plumber Witholds his Name—A Printer Talks of the Union and Female Compositors—The Union Kept up Wages—In Favor of Arbitration.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.

The Labor Commission resumed its sittings in Shaftesbury Hall yesterday morning when there was again a total absence of public interest in the proceedings. Only one witness was examined, a journeyman plumber, who had very little to tell, but who threw a side-light on the relations of some employers and employed by declining, from personal and prudential motives to disclose his name. The proceedings were brief, and it was agreed that a much smaller building would be preferable as the public ignored the sessions of the Commission. Hence, in the afternoon the Board met in the Inspector's office, Post Office building when the proceedings were of a similar nature to those of the morning. Ten Commissioners, their secretary, one witness and three reporters comprised those present.

Judge Armstrong presided, the other members of the Commission present being Messrs. A. T. Freed, John Armstrong, S. R. Heakes, J. A. Clarke, M. Walsh, J. Helbronner, H. A. McLean, London, W. A. Gibson, U. Carson, and Secretary Blackeby.

At the morning sitting a plumber employed in the city was examined. He gave particulars of wages, holidays, and hours of work, etc. There are two apprentices to each journeymen plumber. There was an understanding between employers not to engage apprentices before their time was out. He believed the unions did good. Many improvement had been secured by their means. There were too many boys employed in the trade. As a rule the workmen could not own houses of their own. Witness objected to his name being published as he was afraid that if his name appeared his employer would dismiss him.

In the afternoon Mr. Steward J. Dunlop, 58 Phœbe-street, printer, deposed that he had been thirty-three years connected with printing. He was a member of the Typographical Union. He gave particulars of the rate of wages in newspaper and jobbing offices. There was occasionally a considerable number of printers out of work in Toronto. Many printers flocked to the city—some as improvers, others just out of their time. Country newspapers usually employed boys, and when the engagement expired, employers, if they could make a "smart bargain," re-engaged them; if not, they drifted to the States or the large cities of Canada. Presses were dangerous to inexperienced hands, but the greater number of accidents were due to carelessness. He mentioned an accident to a boy in a press-room at Montreal which could have been prevented by protecting the gearing. He knew of no printers being "black-listed" in Toronto. There were offices where union men would not seek work nor purchase papers printed at such offices. If an office has been "ratted" a permit from the union must be obtained by a member to allow him to work there. There were offices where union men are not permitted to work.

Many women and girls are employed in this city as compositors and press feeders. The female compositors worked by piece and were generally paid a lower rate than men. Almost invariably female work was inferior to that of men. Girls were not trained to the trade, but taken on and put to "case" at first and left to do the best they could. Some girls became as expert as boys, but there were fewer swift compositors in proportion to their number than amongst men. Employers who did first-class work did not employ female labor, except as feeders of presses. There was a difference of from $4 to $6 a week in the wages paid to female and male compositors. In some offices a week's pay was kept in hand by the employers. Wages were paid on nearly all days of the week, but witness would prefer Friday night.

There was not, he thought, more drinking amongst printers than in other trades. The closing of beer shops on Saturday nights would be a greater advantage if the law were strictly observed. There would be a great advantage in returning to the apprenticeship system. It would be better for the boys, the employers and the trade generally. The Union kept up wages. It had also the power to order a strike if a dispute could not be otherwise settled. No increase of wages had ever been obtained by printers except as the result of organization. Some printers had saved money and had their own houses.

By Commissioner John Armstrong: "There are employers in this city who refuse to employ union men. We have a female member of our union who receives the same pay as the men. The union and most of the men favor the apprenticeship system.

Witness continued: The sanitary arrangements in some printing offices are wretchedly bad. He had seen lack of ventilation and cleanliness. "I am in favor of arbitration and so is the union." There was a desire that females, if qualified, should join the union. Type-setting was often but a temporary employment for young women. He believed that trade organizations were equally good for employers as men. The work was done better and more regularly by members of the union.

The commision then adjourned, till 10 o'clock this morning, again to meet at the Post office.

The Scott Act Sustained.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 24.—An election took place in Charlottetown City on a petition asking for the repeal of the Scott Act. The act was sustained by a majority of 28, the total vote being 664 for the petition and 692 against it.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENCY.

M. Grevy Has Definitely Decided to Resign His Message Will be Read on Monday.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—M. Grevy has requested M. Rebot to form a Cabinet and charged him to convery to the Chamber his resignation. M. Rebot consented, but advised M. Grevy that as the message was a political act, the tenor of which required the approval of the Cabinet, the President ought to confer with the retiring Ministers.

M. Grevy accordingly summoned M. Rouvier and his colleagues.

The Rebot Cabinet will probably include M. Flourens, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, M. Sadi Carnot and Gen. Ferron.

The Radical journals strongly oppose the election of Gen. Saussier to the presidency.

It is reported that M. Rebot, in a second interview with M. Grevy to-day, advised the President to retain the Rouvier Ministry in office until he had resigned.

The Journal Des Debats predicts a definite settlement of the crisis to-morrow.

The Rouvier cabinet had a conference with M. Grevy to-day. He intimated that he had definitely decided to resign. His message will be read in the Chamber of Deputies on Monday. The two Chambers will probably assemble on Tuesday.

At a meeting of Radicals to-day it was decided to resolutely oppose any military candidate.

M. Rouvier, on being shown the text of M. Grevy's message, objected to it as too comminatory, saying that it would cause a storm in the Chamber. M. Rebot overcame M. Rouvier's objection, but he himself is urging M. Grevy to modify the message. M. Grevy appears to have greatly aged within the last few days.

The Republican party desires to hold a caucus before Congress meets in order to ensure a unanimous vote and avoid the chance of a split, which might enable the Opportunists, led by Ferry, to bring in Gen. Saussier, with the help of the Monarchists. The extreme Radicals are trying to prepare a charge of treason against M. Grevy.

ON TRIAL FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

John Harte of Belleville Before the Court on a Serious Charge.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 24.—Mr. John Harte, arrested yesterday on a charge of appropriating money belonging to the Harte & Smith Manufacturing Company to his own use, was put on preliminary examination to-day. Mr. Harte was released on bail yesterday. Mr. C. W. Meakins of Hamilton telegraphed a $16000 deposit and Mr. F. J. Shannon gave bail for the amount.

Mr. Harte seemed careworn when he appeared in court. Mr. Meakins was present, having arrived this morning, accompanied by Mr. Duff, an attorney from Hamilton.

Mr. J. L. Biggar was the first witness. He said: The Harte & Smith Manufacturing Company was incorporated April 6, 1883. John Harte acted as managing director until May 7, 1887. Mr. Harte had charge of the finances and cash of the company under the bylaws of the company, which gave him power. By the minutes Mr. Harte was elected managing director, April 11, 1883. The company was insolvent when Mr. Harte resigned, and is now in liquidation. It went into liquidation on June 13, 1887. Mr. Harte is still a director. The company has no funds to meet its creditors or pay off shareholders. The assets will hardly pay the creditors. The paid-up capital is $70,000, and I am of the opinion that they will get nothing. I was appointed liquidator. The company never went into insolvency under the act, but there was a friendly arrangement made between the creditors and the company, in which the creditors agreed not to force or harass the stock-holders pending a settlement of claims. In 1887 Mr. Harte was asked to account for the missing money. He promised to go through his books and answer for the deficiencies. He has never done this to my knowledge.

The cross-examination of the witness lasted until the court rose.

They Will Go to Washington.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—At a slimly attended meeting of the Commercial Union Club last night a resolution was passed recommending that a deputation be sent to the British Commissioners at Washington to inform them that a large majority of the people of Canada are in favor of Unrestricted Reciprocity with the United States. The members of the deputation have not yet been appointed.

TAMPERING WITH BALLOTS

THE PHARMACY COLLEGE ELECTION DECLARED NULL AND VOID.

What Mr. Justice Robertson Thinks of Registrar Hodgetts and Scrutineer Love's Action in Connection With the Affair—Defendants to Pay the Costs.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.

The Pharmacy College election trial, the hearing of which occupied all last week, was brought to a close yesterday when in the Chancery Divisional Court Mr. Justice Robertson gave judgment, setting aside the election. The plaintiff, it will be remembered, was Mr. Jabez M. Pearen, a Toronto druggist, and the defendants Geo. D. Hodgetts, registrar; Charles Love, scrutineer; President Edward Harvey of Guelph, and these other members of the council: Neil C. Love, Hugh Miller, R. W. Elliott, J. E. D'Avignon, Windsor; W. B Saunders, Stayner; Neil C. Polson, Kingston G. W. Harkness, London; C. K. McGregor, Brantford; R. Weightman, Owen Sound; W. O. Foster, St. Thomas; L. W. Yeomans, Belleville; and the Ontario College of Pharmacy as a corporation. Messrs. Dalton McCarthy, Q.C., and Wallace Nesbitt appeared for Mr. Pearen; Mr. J. K. Kerr, Q.C., and Mr. J. A. Paterson for Mr. Hodgetts and Charles Love; Mr. W. F. W. Creelman for D'Avignon and Polson; Mr. E. F. Gunther for McGregor, and Mr. C. R. W. Biggar for the college and the other defendants named.

The room was crowded with druggists, and at the conclusion of the judgment Mr. Pearen was heartily congratulated at the successful issue of his suit. The judgment was:

1. The election must be declared void. By-law No. 10 requires the registrar (as returning officer) and two scrutineers to be present, and the amendment of February, 1886, requires the scrutineers to be elected by ballot. None of these provisions were complied with. Only one scrutineer was properly appointed and there may be some doubt as to the legality of his acting, after the change in the law. For this cause alone I would set aside the election.

2. As to Charles Love, the evidence satisfies me he did not tamper with the ballots, but he authorized Hodgetts to open them the day before the scrutiny, which was highly improper. However, had he not purloined them from the vault on the following Saturday and burned them, I might have acquitted him of any complicity in the wrongful acts which have been proved, but this leaves an impression on my mind that he is guilty of some act which I do not care to designate.

3. As to Hodgetts, he was practically the returning officer and should have been the custodian of the ballots until he handed them over to the scrutineers. His opening them on the previous day and making a selection of those which should be rejected was extremely suspicious. I find that the voting papers of H. K. Bowden, Walden Parke, C. W. Cryderman and J. F. Hazelton were tampered with. I do not say Hodgetts tampered with them, but his conduct indicates that he was privy to some wrongful act, which would have been made public but for their destruction. It may have been that Love read them incorrectly, but whatever was wrong, I think Hodgetts was privy to it.

4. As to Harvey his evidence satisfies me that he had nothing to do with the wrongful acts complained of, but he appointed Hodgetts (the Registrar) as scrutineer, contrary to law and his plea that he did not know the statutes and bylaws of the college, and that he acted under the advice of Neil C. Love, is no excuse.

5. As to members-elect of the council, McGregor has made common cause with the plaintiff, and I therefore give him his costs. Brierly has resigned and therefore has no costs. The other members of the council have chosen to retain their seats and allow this investigation to be held. They must therefore pay for it, just as a municipal or parliamentary candidate who defends his seat against an election petition.

6. As to the college itself, I think they are entitled to be paid their costs. The judgment will therefore be:
(a) I declare the election void.
(b) I order a new election.
(c) Plaintiff to be paid his costs by all the defendants except the College, Brierly and McGregor.
(d) Costs of College, Brierly and McGregor to be paid by the other defendants.

A Montreal Grocer Absconds.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—James Dalrymple, grocer, has skipped out, leaving a number of disconsolate creditors and relatives behind. He has also taken, it is said, $5300 belonging to his mother's estate. His store has been seized. Although a married man, it is reported that he left the city with another woman.

A Supply Schooner Stranded.

QUEBEC, Nov. 24.—A private telegram states that the Government telegraph supply schooner Triumph was stranded on the south side of Barnaby Island during the heavy gales of last Tuesday week. Both masts and bowsprit are gone, but the hull is not badly damaged. The crew of three men were saved.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1887.

A TURN IN A TORTUOUS COURSE

THE speeches of Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Chapleau at Montreal have greatly displeased the Globe. It is chagrined because the tales told about a disagreement between Sir Hector and his colleague are not true, but its greatest trouble is that they spoke, as Canadian public men should speak, in opposition to Commercial Union.

The Toronto organ knows that the Minister of Public Works and the Secretary of State have a powerful influence in Quebec. It is aware that their opinions will receive attention, and, being considered, the people of that Province will see that the United States scheme would injure Canada.

The scheme is not advancing in public favor in Ontario or the Maritime Provinces, despite the strenuous efforts made to boom it. Quebec will also be against it, and the advocates of the idea are becoming desperate. The Mail has from the first tried to influence Ontario by appeals to sectional and national prejudices, and the Globe now shows a strong disposition to join it. "If the Bleu chiefs," it says in its issue of Thursday, "should so succeed in rousing French Canadians to oppose the English provinces in this purely commercial matter, the latter would undoubtedly break up the Union rather than submit to such control." It is highly amusing to see the Globe threaten the French Canadians (they are no longer Canadiens) now, after the course it has pursued since November, 1886. But aside from that, have not the people of Quebec a right to vote as they think best on a purely commercial question? What reason is their for threatening them or Canada so long as that right is exercised legitimately? Commercial Union is not a race question, but is purely a political and commercial one. Is it to be decided by one portion of the people only? It is preposterous to suggest that, on a question effecting the very existence of the country, a large section of the people should be allowed no voice.

Sir Hector and Mr. Chapleau opposed the proposition on the same grounds as it is opposed in Ontario—because it would injure Canada and endanger our connection with the British Empire.

This outburst on the part of the Globe is an acknowledgement that the boastings of the Commercial Unionists have been empty—that they did not believe what they said. If it were true, as we have been told, that the people of the Provinces, outside of Quebec, were almost unanimous in favour of the scheme, they would elect all their representatives to vote for it, and the voice of Quebec would be drowned. But the people are so far from being almost unanimous in its favour, that a majority are opposed to it.

The Globe need not call out the reserves just yet. Quebec will not oppose the English speaking Provinces in this matter, simply because the English speaking Provinces will agree with Quebec. Toronto does not want its trade ruined any more than Montreal wants to lose its commerce, and the bye-elections show that the Maritime Provinces are one with Ontario in opposition to national obliteration.

FAVORING FAIR TRADE.

IT is easy to say that the Fair Trade idea is not finding favour in England, but there is evidence that it is. The British Conservative Union, which is not an insignificant organization, declared in favor of Fair Trade at a recent meeting, and that policy is gaining so much in the Conservative ranks that Liberal politicians are beginning to ask the Liberal-Unionists how they like their Protectionist allies.

When England decides to adopt a protective policy—as that is what the Fair Trade movement really aims at—there will be an opportunity to benefit every part of the Queen's dominions and draw them together by a policy of Inter-Imperial trade. That does not imply free trade between different parts of the Empire, and is not a British Commercial Union, but it means each part of the Empire having control of tariff laws would discriminate in favor of the other portions.

The leaders of the Fair Trade movement in England include, as was shown at a recent conference in London, the idea of Inter-Imperial trade in their scheme. The progress of the movement will be watched with interest in Canada.

RUMOUR regarding changes in the Dominion Cabinet are circulating. Some changes are necessary owing to the legislation of last session. Among those mentioned as likely to enter the cabinet is Mr. J. J. Curran, of Montreal. Mr. Curran is an able man, an eloquent speaker and a good representative, and has been consistent in supporting Conservative principles. He would make a good Minister. What changes will be made are not known, however, as no official announcement has been made.

UNTIL protectionist ingenuity shall devise some stronger reasons for stretching a line of Customs-houses across the Continent, from Maine to Oregon, the interest in the scheme of Trade Reciprocity will continue to gain adherents.—Philadelphia Record.

This is the paper that explained how the large United States manufacturing concerns had combinations to break down weak competitors and wished the tariff removed that they might secure the Canadian market

A SOCIAL.—On Monday evening a social in aid of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in the Agricultural Hall, in order to give the children of South Monaghan and Cavan a good feed. Some got more than they could stow away and others got less, but on the whole it passed off well. The first part of the programme commenced with "Go Tell the World of His Love" by the choir. A reading by Mr. W. Kent followed. A quartette by four of the choir, entitled "Rock of Ages," was rendered in good style. "The Dying Tramp" by Miss Galloway was recited in great style. "Whispering Hope," a duet by the Misses Rutherford, was deserving of special mention. The second part commenced with the "Gipsy Boy" by the choir. A recitation, "Shall New Year come to night," by Miss Soden, was loudly encored. An instrumental solo by Miss Julia Eayleson was very pleasing. "Hand writing on the Wall," a solo by Mr. F. Deyell with chorus, was deserving of great praise. A recitation by Mr. Strike, which was given in his usual style, was loudly encored, when he came forward and gave "Asleep at the switch," which kept the audience spell bound until he came to the "Nightmare." A duet by the Misses Hutchings and "God Save the Queen" brought the entertainment to a close, after a most enjoyable evening, with the "heathens." The proceeds amounted to about eighteen dollars.

BOAT HOUSE BURNED.—Last Friday night the new boat house at McCracken's landing was burned to the ground. It contained about twenty-four boats owned by the neighbors of this vicinity, and was erected last summer for their convenience or to save trouble of drawing about boats. The boats in stock were principally canoes. There is no doubt but that the building was set on fire, as it was isolated and had not been entered for some time. The building was put up at the general expense of those interested, and was insured for two-thirds its value, with insurance on the boats. Further developments regarding the fire are looked for.

A TURN IN A TORTUOUS COURSE

The speeches of Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Chapleau at Montreal have greatly displeased the Globe. It is chagrined because the tales told about a disagreement between Sir Hector and his colleague are not true, but its greatest trouble is that they spoke, as Canadian public men should speak, in opposition to Commercial Union.

The Toronto organ knows that the Minister of Public Works and the Secretary of State have a powerful influence in Quebec. It is aware that their opinions will receive attention, and, being considered, the people of that Province will see that the United States scheme would injure Canada.

The scheme is not advancing in public favor in Ontario or the Maritime Provinces, despite the strenuous efforts made to boom it. Quebec will also be against it, and the advocates of the idea are becoming desperate. The Mail has from the first tried to influence Ontario by appeals to sectional and national prejudices, and the Globe now shows a strong disposition to join it. "If the Bleu chiefs," it says in its issue of Thursday, "should so succeed in rousing French Canadians to oppose the English provinces in this purely commercial matter, the latter would undoubtedly break up the Union rather than submit to such control." It is highly amusing to see the Globe threaten the French Canadians (they are no longer Canadiens) now, after the course it has pursued since November, 1886. But aside from that, have not the people of Quebec a right to vote as they think best on a purely commercial question? What reason is there for threatening them or Canada so long as that right is exercised legitimately? Commercial Union is not a race question, but is purely a political and commercial one. Is it to be decided by one portion of the people only? It is preposterous to suggest that, on a question effecting the very existence of the country, a large section of the people should be allowed no voice.

Sir Hector and Mr. Chapleau opposed the proposition on the same grounds as it is opposed in Ontario—because it would injure Canada and endanger our connection with the British Empire.

This outburst on the part of the Globe is an acknowledgement that the boastings of the Commercial Unionists have been empty—that they did not believe what they said. If it were true, as we have been told, that the people of the Provinces, outside of Quebec, were almost unanimous in favour of the scheme, they would elect all their representatives to vote for it, and the voice of Quebec would be drowned. But the people are so far from being almost unanimous in its favour, that a majority are opposed to it.

The Globe need not call out the reserves just yet. Quebec will not oppose the English speaking Provinces in this matter, simply because the English speaking Provinces will agree with Quebec. Toronto does not want its trade ruined any more than Montreal wants to lose its commerce, and the bye-elections show that the Maritime Provinces are one with Ontario in opposition to national obliteration.

FAVORING FAIR TRADE.

It is easy to say that the Fair Trade idea is not finding favour in England, but there is evidence that it is. The British Conservative Union, which is not an insignificant organization, declared in favor of Fair Trade at a recent meeting, and that policy is gaining so much in the Conservative ranks that Liberal politicians are beginning to ask the Liberal-Unionists how they like their Protectionist allies.

When England decides to adopt a protective policy—as that is what the Fair Trade movement really aims at—there will be an opportunity to benefit every part of the Queen's dominions and draw them together by a policy of Inter-Imperial trade. That does not imply free trade between different parts of the Empire, and is not a British Commercial Union, but it means each part of the Empire having control of tariff laws would discriminate in favor of the other portions.

The leaders of the Fair Trade movement in England include, as was shown at a recent conference in London, the idea of Inter-Imperial trade in their scheme. The progress of the movement will be watched with interest in Canada.

Rumour regarding changes in the Dominion Cabinet are circulating. Some changes are necessary owing to the legislation of last session. Among those mentioned as likely to enter the cabinet is Mr. J. J. Curran, of Montreal. Mr. Curran is an able man, an eloquent speaker and a good representative, and has been consistent in supporting Conservative principles. He would make a good Minister. What changes will be made are not known, however, as no official announcement has been made.

Until protectionist ingenuity shall devise some stronger reasons for stretching a line of Customs-houses across the Continent, from Maine to Oregon, the interest in the scheme of Trade Reciprocity will continue to gain adherents.—Philadelphia Record.

This is the paper that explained how the large United States manufacturing concerns had combinations to break down weak competitors and wished the tariff removed that they might secure the Canadian market

The Peterborough Review says the manufacturering industries of that town are booming. Unpleasant news for those sour-visaged people who say the country is going to ruin.—Ottawa Citizen.

It is the kind of medicine they need, though. Perhaps their case is not hopeless.

A Social.—On Monday evening a social in aid of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in the Agricultural Hall, in order to give the children of South Monaghan and Cavan a good feed. Some got more than they could stow away and others got less, but on the whole it passed off well. The first part of the programme commenced with "Go Tell the World of His Love" by the choir. A reading by Mr. W. Kent followed. A quartette by four of the choir, entitled "Rock of Ages," was rendered in good stlye. "The Dying Tramp" by Miss Galloway was recited in great style. "Whispering Hope," a duet by the Misses Rutherford, was deserving of special mention. The second part commenced with the "Gipsy Boy" by the choir. A recitation, "Shall New Year come to night," by Miss Soden, was loudly encored. An instrumental solo by Miss Julia Eayleson was very pleasing. "Hand writing on the Wall," a solo by Mr. F. Doyell with chorus, was deserving of great praise. A recitation by Mr. Strike, which was given in his usual style, was loudly encored, when he came forward and gave "Asleep at the switch," which kept the audience spell bound until he came to the "Nightmare." A duet by the Misses Hutchings and "God Save the Queen" brought the entertainment to a close, after a most enjoyable evening, with the "heathens." The proceeds amounted to about eighteen dollars.

To Time the Preacher.—The "Bethel" people will be able to time their preacher now, since our local jeweller has supplied them with a very nice little eight day clock as a present. Everything will be complete as soon as an organ is provided to fill up the list. It takes a lot of Paynes to produce much song in this locality without an organ.

Boat House Burned.—Last Friday night the new boat house at McCracken's landing was burned to the ground. It contained about twenty-four boats owned by the neighbors of this vicinity, and was erected last summer for their convenience or to save trouble of drawing about boats. The boats in stock were principally canoes. There is no doubt but that the building was set on fire, as it was isolated and had not been entered for some time. The building was put up at the general expense of those interested, and was insured for two-thirds its value, with insurance on the boats. Further developments regarding the fire are looked for.

Defective Bridge.—The third line bridge, at N. Payne's, is looking quite dangerous. We hope our council will not allow it to cost them any damages, as we would not like to see anyone blame them.

Birth.—the wife of Mr. S. Edwards has lately made him a present of another daughter. Mr. Edwards must expect to be troubled a good deal with young men, some time in the future, if this business is kept up. We wish them success and congratulations in the event.

"Those are not heavy enough for me. I suffer so much from the cold that I must have the heaviest and warmest hosiery I can buy."

"How so?"

"I will give you a simple remedy that is certain to cure you if you will give it a fair trial."

"I'll guarantee that."

"Before you retire to-night bathe your feet in water at a temperature of about 80 degrees. Hold them in the water ten minutes. Repeat this in the morning. The next day make the water 5 degrees colder, until it reaches the temperature of 39 degrees. # COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"The rooms on the third floor and on the basement were completely unfurnished, and in a condition of great neglect. We inquired if there was anything to be seen below the basement—and we were at once informed that there were vaults beneath which we were at perfect liberty to visit.

"We went down, so as to leave no part of the palace unexplored. The vaults were, it was believed, used as dungeons in the old times—say some centuries since. Air and light were only partially admitted to these dismal places by two long shafts of winding construction, which communicated with the back yard of the place, and the openings of which, high above the ground, were protected by iron gratings. The stone stairs leading down into the vaults could be closed at will by a heavy trap door in the back hall, which we found open. The baron himself led the way down the stairs. We remarked that it might be awkward if that trap door fell down and closed the opening behind us. The baron smiled at the idea. 'Don't be alarmed, gentlemen,' he said: 'the door is safe. I had an interest in seeing to it myself, when we first inhabited the place. My favorite study is the study of experimental chemistry—and my workshop, since we have been in Venice, is down here.'

"These last words explained a curious smell in the vaults, which we noticed the moment we entered them. We can only describe the smell by saying that it was of a twofold sort—faintly aromatic, as it were, in its first effect, but with some after odor very sickening in our nostrils. The baron's furnaces and retorts, and other things, were all there to speak for themselves, together with some packages of chemicals, having the name and address of the person who had supplied them plainly visible on their labels. 'Not a pleasant place to study,' Baron Rivar observed, 'but my sister is timid. She has a horror of chemical smells and explosions—and she has banished me to these lower regions, so that my experiments may neither be smelled nor heard.' He held out his hands, on which we had noticed that he wore gloves in the house. 'Accidents will happen sometimes,' he said, 'no matter how careful a man may be. I burned my hands severely in trying a new combination the other day, and they are only recovering now.'

"We mention these otherwise unimportant incidents in order to show that our exploration of the palace was not impeded by any attempt at concealment. We were even admitted to her ladyship's own room—on a subsequent occasion, when she went out to take the air. Our instructions recommended us to examine his lordship's residence, because the extreme privacy of his life at Venice, and the remarkable departure of the only two servants in the house, might have some suspicious connection with the nature of his death. We found nothing to justify suspicion.

"As to his lordship's retired way of life, we have conversed on the subject with the consul and banker—the only two strangers who hold any communication with him. He called once at the bank to obtain money on his letter of credit, and excused himself from accepting an invitation of visiting the banker at his private residence on the ground of delicate health. His lordship wrote to the same effect on sending his card to the consul, to excuse himself from personally returning that gentleman's visit to the palace. We have seen the letter, and we beg to offer the following copy of it. 'Many years passed in India have injured my constitution. I have ceased to go into society; the one occupation of my life now is the study of Oriental literature. The air of Italy is better for me than the air of England, or I never should have left home. Pray accept the apologies of a student and an invalid. The active part of my life is at an end.' The self seclusion of his lordship seems to us to be explained in these brief lines. We have not, however, on that account, spared our inquiries in other directions. Nothing to excite a suspicion of anything wrong has come to our knowledge.

"As to the departure of the lady's maid, we have seen the woman's receipt for her wages, in which it is expressly stated that she left Lady Montbarry's service because she disliked the continent and wished to get back to her own country. This is not an uncommon result of taking English servants to foreign parts. Lady Montbarry has informed us that she abstained from engaging another maid in consequence of the extreme dislike which his lordship expressed to having strangers in the house in the state of his health at that time.

"The disappearance of the courier Ferrari is, in itself, unquestionably a suspicious circumstance. Neither her ladyship nor the baron can explain it, and no investigation that we could make has thrown the smallest light on this event, or has justified us in associating it, either directly or indirectly, with the object of our inquiry. We have even gone the length of examining the portmanteau which Ferrari left behind him. It contains nothing but clothes and linen—no money, and not even a scrap of paper in the pockets of the clothes. The portmanteau remains in charge of the police.

"We have also found opportunities of speaking privately with the old woman who attends to the rooms occupied by her ladyship and the baron. She was recommended to fill this position by the keeper of the restaurant who has supplied the meals to the family throughout the period of their residence at the palace. Her character is most favorably spoken of. Unfortunately, her limited intelligence makes her of no value as a witness. We were patient and careful in questioning her, and we found her perfectly willing to answer us; but we could elicit nothing which is worth including in the present report.

"On the second day of our inquiries we had the honor of an interview with Lady Montbarry. Her ladyship looked miserably worn and ill, and seemed to be quite at a loss to understand what we wanted with her. Baron Rivar, who introduced us, explained the nature of our errand in Venice, and took pains to assure her that it was a purely formal duty on which we were engaged. Having satisfied her ladyship on this point, he discreetly left the room.

"The questions which we addressed to Lady Montbarry, related mainly, of course, to his lordship's illness. The answers, given with great nervousness of manner, but without the slightest appearance of reserve, informed us of the facts that follow:

"Lord Montbarry had been out of order for some time past—nervous and irritable. He first complained of having taken cold on Nov 13, last; he passed a wakeful and feverish night, and remained in bed the next day. Her ladyship proposed sending for medical advice. He refused to allow her to do this, saying that he could quite easily be his own doctor in such a trifling matter as a cold. Some hot lemonade was made at his request, with a view to producing perspiration. Lady Montbarry's maid having left her at that time, the courier, Ferrari (then the only servant in the house) went out to buy the lemons. Her ladyship made the drink with her own hands. It was successful in producing the perspiration—and Lord Montbarry had some hours of sleep afterward. Later in the day, having need of Ferrari's services, Lady Montbarry rang for him. The bell was not answered. Baron Rivar searched for the man, in the palace and out of it, in vain. From that time forth, not a trace of Ferrari could be discovered. This happened on Nov. 14.

"On the night of the 14th, the feverish symptoms accompanying his lordship's cold returned. They were in part, perhaps, attributable to the annoyance and alarm caused by Ferrari's mysterious disappearance. It had been impossible to conceal the circumstance, as his lordship rang repeatedly for the courier; insisting that the man should relieve Lady Montbarry and the baron by taking their places during the night at his bedside.

"On the 15th (the day on which the old woman first came to do the housework), his lordship complained of a sore throat, and of a feeling of oppression on the chest. On this day, and again on the 16th, her ladyship and the baron entreated him to see a doctor. He still refused. 'I don't want strange faces about me; my cold will run its course, in spite of the doctor'—that was his answer. On the 17th he was so much worse, that it was decided to send for medical help whether he liked it or not. Baron Rivar, after inquiry at the consul's, secured the services of Dr. Bruno, well known as an eminent physician in Venice, with the additional recommendation of having resided in England, and having made himself acquainted with English forms of medical practice.

"Thus far, our account of his lordship's illness has been derived from statements made by Lady Montbarry. The narrative will now be most fitly continued in the language of the doctor's own report, herewith subjoined.

"'My medical diary informs me that I first saw the English lord, Montbarry, on Nov. 17. He was suffering from a sharp attack of bronchitis. Some precious time had been lost, through his obstinate objection to the presence of a medical man at his bedside. Generally speaking, he appeared to be in a delicate state of health. His nervous system was out of order—he was at once timid and contradictory. When I spoke to him in English he answered in Italian, and when I tried him in Italian he went back to English. It mattered little—the malady had already made such progress that he could only speak a few words at a time, and those in a whisper.

THE SABBATH DAY.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. GEO. P. HAYS, D. D., LL. D.

Lesson IX of the International Series (Fourth Quarter) for Sunday, Nov. 27. Text of the Lesson, Matt. xii, 1-14; Golden Text, Matt. xii, 12.

We have here a remarkable indication of the poverty of Christ and his disciples. They do not seem to have been far away from the habitations of men: yet they seem to have been so poor that this morning they had had no breakfast. Their plucking of these ears of corn was to satisfy hunger and not for amusement. In the Mosaic law this eating by the wayside was made lawful, as we see in Deut. xxiii, 25. This act of the disciples was not petty stealing in the light of this provision. It was no more stealing than is the picking of the small coal thrown out upon the waste dump of a coal mine by the children of the neighborhood. The Pharisees do not raise the question of theft, but only the question of Sabbath work.

The Sabbath.—In this lesson we have set forth the two types of lawful Sabbath work: works of necessity and works of mercy.

Two things are to be noted just here. If the Sabbath was to be abolished, now was Christ's time to make some indication of that fact. Neither here nor anywhere else does he suggest that the Sabbath was a Mosaic institution, and therefore terminated its observance with his coming. In all the Pharisees said its perpetuity is assumed; and its perpetuity is just as confidently assumed in all Christ said in reply. He did not discuss its existence and obligation, but commended and enforced both. He only discussed the right method of its observance.

Still further, verse 8 is a specific declaration of authority on his part over the Sabbath day.

Extremes.—Men are very prone to run to extremes. This is conspicuously shown in regard to the Sabbath day. One class of people abolish it by saying that every day is holy and should be kept sacred. This, in experience, has simply resulted in destroying all sacred Sabbath. Another class says that no day is holy, and that what is right on any day is right on every day. These also destroy the Sabbath by their laxity. Others still destroy it by the rigidity with which they exclude everything that requires bodily activity. This was the line of argument of these Pharisees. Plucking the ears of corn and eating required some physical exertion. Christ, in his reply, covers two classes of labor, and justifies them as right upon the Sabbath. The one was that kind of labor required for health and life. Such was the case of David when he entered into the house of God and did eat the shew bread. The ceremonial law would have prohibited him and his men. The law, however, was not the end of its own existence, but merely the means of grace to promote the spiritual life of those that kept it. Therefore Christ justifies David, as God had previously justified him and his followers in this formal breach of the law. We are not to make arrangements for extra work on the Sabbath in the direction of providing food, and then justify it on this plea, as is sometimes done by Sunday visits. But that work to provide food, which is reasonable and fairly unavoidable, is not improper on the Sabbath day.

Work in worshiping.—The other kind of work which the Saviour justifies is that involved in the worship of God. The priests did not rest on the Sabbath day, but went on with their work in the service of the temple. Christ's introduction of this additional illustration is an adroit answer to a form of the question which was not included in the objection made by the Pharisees, but was certain to come up. In his future church more or less of effort would be involved in the work of his ministry; and that which is necessary for them in their work is as proper as the necessary work of the priests in the temple. It is not unlawful work for the sexton to build the fires which are needful to make the house of God comfortable.

Deeds of mercy.—The second type of lawful Sabbath work which the Saviour approves of (vs. 10-13) is deeds of mercy. God's method of giving a commandment is to use a typical act as inclusive of all of its kind. When he would require honesty he simply says, "Thou shalt not steal;" when he would protect character he says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." So both in this case and in the preceding part of the lesson a typical case is given in order to include all of the kind.

Visiting the unfortunate.—On the other hand, visiting the sick and the sad and the tempted is precisely in the line of what Christ here approves. In the modern church the Sabbath day is not much used for this purpose. It is well worth considering whether any time is more suitable for the visiting of the poor and sick, or more likely to find the visited in a proper frame of mind than the Sabbath day.

The success of the miracle here was the vindication by omnipotent power of the Saviour's teaching. These miracles and this reasoning made Christ's position unassailable. The Pharisees, however, instead of being converted to his views, sought to destroy him (v. 14). It is a very hard thing to surrender, when it involves on our part a confession that we were wrong.

REMEMBER.

1. Christ's disciples are poor.
2. Jesus defended his disciples.
3. Christ is Lord of the Sabbath.
4. Christ never abolished the Sabbath.
5. Christ did good on the Sabbath.

HINTS FOR PRIMARY CLASSES.

BY ALICE W. KNOX.

V. 1. "Jesus went on the Sabbath day through the corn," etc.; read the verse. Not corn like ours, for they had none of that kind, but all grains were then called corn; perhaps it was wheat. Children like to eat wheat before it is ground or cooked. It was lawful in that country for people to take grain in that way when passing through the fields.

V. 2. Read it. The Pharisees pretended to be very pious, and were exceedingly particular about many little forms and ceremonies; but they were unkind, selfish and proud. They often came to hear Jesus preach, but they were fond of criticising him, finding fault and objecting to what he said. They objected now to what the disciples did. Instead of relieving their hunger they found fault because these good men ate their simple meal while walking through the fields, picking the grain as they went.

Vs. 3, 4. These Pharisees believed in David. They thought he was an unusually good man; and so he was. So Jesus referred to David, and said, "Have ye not read," etc. This was when David was fleeing from his persecutor, Saul, at the time Jonathan warned him to escape. See I Samuel xx, 6. This was one example of an exception to the general rule. Only the priests were permitted ordinarily to eat the shewbread, but in his extremity David did what was right when he ate it. The Lord never reproved him for it, and now Jesus Christ quoted it as a proper thing for him to do.

V. 5. Jesus also referred to the work the priests had to do on the Sabbath day in offering sacrifices and attending to temple duties. From this part of our lesson we learn that works of necessity may be done on the Sabbath day.

Vs. 6-8. Another reason why it was right for the disciples to do this was because Jesus was Lord of the Sabbath and had a right to let them do it. He made the Sabbath for the good of man, and he made the rules for keeping it. He was with the disciples, and as their Lord and Master had a right to tell them what to do.

Verses 10-13. After this kind and important talk and explanation to the Pharisees Jesus and his disciples went on to worship. The place where service was held was called a synagogue. Finding a man there with a withered hand, the Pharisees began again to talk about what was right to do on the Sabbath day. They said, Is it lawful to heal, etc. They were anxious to find fault with the blessed Jesus, and it is a wonder his patience was not exhausted. But he knew men and women would ask just such questions about the Sabbath as long as the world should last, and he kindly and patiently explained all about it, so that any one can understand who will honestly study the words of Jesus. Instead of answering yes, of course it is, Jesus asked them a question about their animals. If your sheep falls into a pit (or great hole), where it is likely to suffer or die, on the Sabbath day, would you pull it out? Is not a man much better than a sheep? Worth more? Is it not more important to save a human being from suffering and from death than to save a sheep? You see then, it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days. Works of mercy are right on the Sabbath day.

Here is the rule for us all. It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days.

V. 14. The wicked Pharisees were angry with the blessed Jesus and went away to consult how they might destroy him. Was that a work of necessity? Was it a work of mercy? Plotting and planning how to destroy a righteous man. Poor Pharisees, how self deceived and how wicked they were! Taking counsel how to destroy the Son of God! How much wiser, better and happier were those who believed on Jesus and tried to obey him.

The Sabbath well kept is one of the greatest blessings to men. In countries where they have no Bible, or where but few have it, people pay no attention to this holy day. They work, they build, they visit, they buy and sell as on other days; and very painful it is to the Christian heart to see such a state of things.—Sunday School World.

Held by a Pledge.

Never was that empire (of France, in Algeria) in such danger as in the Franco-German war. As soon as it was evident that it was going against the French, their troops were recalled from Africa to take part in the great struggle at home—till Algeria was left almost without defense. Then the hour for which the conquered races had long waited had come, and if they could at once have joined their forces and proclaimed a holy war, it is altogether probable that the French would have been driven from northern Africa. They might have regained Algeria after the German war was over, but only by a repetition of the years of fighting which it cost to conquer it. That the tribes did not take advantage of this and rise while the French had their hands full on the other side of the Mediterranean was owing wholly to their fidelity to a solemn pledge.

When the war broke out, a chief of great influence among the tribes, Mokrani, gave his word to the governor general of Algeria that there should be no insurrection while the war lasted. That word was faithfully kept. The French arms were followed by disaster after disaster; Napoleon surrendered at Sedan, and Bazaine surrendered at Metz. Then it seemed as if a voice from the Rhine called to the tribes of Kabylia to seize an opportunity which might never come again. But not a man stirred; nor yet when all the defeats and disgraces of the war culminated in the siege and surrender of Paris. The Moslem's faith was plighted; the Moslem's faith was kept! But—when all was over, when the last battle had been fought, and the treaty of peace had been signed at Frankfort, then Mokrani was released from his pledge, and then, and not until then, did he declare war. And still he would take no unfair advantage, but gave forty-eight hours' notice. Then the war cry went through the mountains, and the tribes rushed to the field.—Henry M. Field in Scribner's Magazine.

A Great Slaughtering and Cutting of Prices in Dry Goods

—AT—

THOS. KELLY'S

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practice to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price alone is no criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

Fatal Accident.

Mr. Geo. D. Lockhart died on Wednesday from the effects of injuries received at the Pontypool station of the Canadian Pacific on the previous day. The Port Hope Guide says that the deceased was down to his elevator about six in the morning attending to the loading of some cars, and while in the act of jumping from the door of the elevator to the car which was standing on the track alongside, his foot slipped and he fell backwards out of the car, his head striking the rail. He lived at Pontypool.

Irish National League.

A meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Irish National League was held in the Murray Street Separate School on Thursday night. The election of officers was to have taken place, but owing to the large amount of other business, which had accumulated since the last meeting, the election of officers was postponed. Accounts were gone over and the Treasurer was directed to forward $100 to Dr. O'Rielly, Detroit, Treasurer of the Irish National League in America.

Taken Home.

The body of Miss Farley was taken home to Meriden, Con., to-day. Miss Farley was an employee of the Lock Manufacturing Company's Works. She was on Wednesday prostrated with a sudden illness from the effects of which she died in a few hours. Only seven months ago her father, who was also employed at the Lock Works, took sick and died and was taken to Meriden. The employees of the Works deeply regret the death of Miss Farley and give their sympathy to her brother, who left with the body for Connecticut. The Lock Works employees quit work to-day in respect to the deceased.

Real Estate.

Mr. T. Cahill purchased on Monday last from the Smith Estate the property between Charlotte and King streets west of George street. The property is that upon which the Peterborough creek runs, there being a considerable amount of good land on it and a frontage on Charlotte and King streets. The price paid was $3,000.

With Money and Maid.

Acting Chief Adams received a circular this morning issued by the Superintendent of the Northern Pacific Express Company. It offers a reward of $300 for the arrest of John H. Webber who absconded from Fargo, Dakato, some time ago with several packages of money and a woman 24 years of age.

Read This.

H. S. Griffin & Co. have been watching the markets for special lines in Dry Goods and buyers will find their value unsurpassed. Many lines at prices below wholesale value. They have a large selection of Ladies and Children's Manties which will be sold regardless of price, as they do not intend to carry goods over from one season to another. The public may look out for close prices the balance of this year at H. S Griffin & Co's.

The Taxes.

Collector Cummings says that he has had a "splendid run" at his office during the last four days. The people are paying up their taxes with much promptness. Yesterday he banked about $1,100 and to-day he has banked as much or more. Those who wish to avoid paying the extra five per cent. should visit the Collector's office to-morrow or Monday. If they wait till the last day they will suffer inconvenience, as the office is generally crowded all day on November 30th.

Mr. Patrick Costello, a landmark of the town, departed for Rochester this morning. He will take up his residence there.

Mr. Ira P. Griswold, Passenger Agent of the Union Pacific Railway, was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Albert Lech, who has been ill for the past two weeks, is recovering.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton, jr., is making fair progress back to good health.

Mr. Goldman, Inspector of agencies for the North America Insurance campany, is in town.

The Rev. E. F. Torrance was waited upon by the deputation from the St. Andrews Society, and has consented to preach the sermon before the Society on the Sunday before St. Andrew's Day.

A City's Big Talk.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"Let little stand-still towns talk about parks. Belleville is too progressive; land is too valuable to be devoted to such frivolous purposes. There was a park here but it was gobbled up for building purposes last summer. When people have less to do than an present it will be time enough to grow tired and buy a little park to crow over." A town that spends more money in building, and is increasing more rapidly in population, than the city, is not a "stand-still" one. Since Belleville stopped progressing after the manner of a crab it feels quite cocky. Up this way a vacant lot that the owner may build on at any time is not considered a public park, but slow-going eastern people have queer ideas.

DRESS-MAKING! We are pleased to announce that Miss Johnston, the accomplished Dress-Maker at TURNBULL'S, is delighting everybody with her work. She is introducing many new Styles into Peterborough, is prompt and obliging, and with TURNBULL'S extensive range of Fashionable Dress Goods at her disposal, is prepared to satisfy the most exacting taste on the shortest notice. Prices always right and consistant with First Class Work.

Trade With Japan.

The Vancouver (B. C.) Daily News-Advertiser bearing date Nov. 10th contains the following paragraph:—"Mr. R. V. Winch, the well known proprietor of the Cordova street market, has shipped to Yokohama per SS. Parthia, 367 boxes of winter apples, each box containing 55 lbs., the greater portion of which came from Sea Island and the balance from the Sound. This is the first shipment of fruit ever made from British Columbia to Japan and is the commencement of a trade which, in time, no doubt will assume enormous proportions. Mr. Winch also sent as samples 300 lbs of Fraser River smoked salmon, and 40 lbs. of British Columbia roll butter. He expects that quite a profitable trade will very shortly be done in shipping the produce of our farms and fisheries to China and Japan." Mr. Winch is a nephew of Messes Harry and Fred Winch of this town. He belongs to an enterprising family.

Snow Shoe Club.

A meeting was held in the Young Men's Christian Association Rooms on Thursday evening for the purpose of organizing a snow shoe club There were about fifteen young men present. Mr. Roger, President, occupied the chair, and first called on Mr. Stevens to read a paper on "Recreation." In his paper Mr. Stevens spoke of the enjoyment and benefit to be derived from proper recreation and made special mention of value of vigor giving winter sports. The election of officers was proceeded with as follows:—

HONORARY PRESIDENT—G. M. Roger.
PRESIDENT—C. N. Brown.
VICE-PRESIDENT—R. Henderson.
SECRETARY-TREASURER—W. Dee.

The next meeting will be held on Tuesday evening to complete the organization of the club and enroll new members. Those wishing to join should be on hand on Tuesday night.

AMBROSE & WINSLOW FINED.

The Court Decides that they Committed an Infraction of the Scott Act.

At the Police Court this morning the Magistrate delivered judgement in the Ambrose & Winslow Scott Act case, holding the defendants guilty and imposing fines upon them. His judgement is as follows:—

The information charges Albert Winslow and T. H. Ambrose, brewers, of Port Hope, with selling intoxicating liquor in the town of Peterborough between the 20th August and 30th September.

The evidence and admissions prove that the defendants keep a salaried servant in Peterborough whose duty it is to solicit and take orders for defendants, also to collect payment, etc. This servant took orders for ale in Peterborough within the time charged, forwarded the orders to his employers the defendants, who delivered the ale in Peterborough within the time charged. The agent swears that the orders were for fixed quantities at fixed prices in Peterborough, the freight being paid by defendants. The defendants' counsel urges that there were no sale in Peterborough; that the agent had no authority to make a binding sale; that the defendants retained the power (as proved) to refuse to fill his orders; that if any it was in Port Hope and was complete when the ale was put on the cars and that no offence cognizable was committed in Peterborough. I am of opinion that the servant in taking the order represented his employers and that they as represented by him were in Peterborough in exactly the same way as if, being personally present, they took the orders themselves. I am of opinion that the taking of the order for a fixed quantity of ale at a fixed price, the freight being paid by the vendor, coupled with the delivery of the ale at Peterborough, within the time charged, completed and made a sale at Peterborough. To hold that a brewer in an outer county can keep in a Scott Act county a salaried servant to solicit orders, collect price and then from his brewery flood the county with ale and be free from the law would be absurd—particularly from a county where the act was not in force and so no charge could be preferred in the outer county against the brewer. It was not the intention of the act that a brewer in a Scott Act county should by any means be enabled to sell ale in another Scott Act county and if he does it matters little where he is fined. In this case the offence was committed in Peterborough and here the charge lies. As to the other objections raised against the jurisdiction of this court I overrule them and leave the parties to their right to bring them for adjudication to a higher court. I find the defendants guilty of the offence charged, and I adjudge that they do pay a fine of $50 and costs, one half to be paid by each defendant in ten days and in default of payment, distress, and in default of distress, imprisonment for two months.

Judgment was also given in the Queen vs. Calcutt case, the defendant being fined $50 and costs.

Wm. Holland, of the Little Windsor Hotel, was charged with an infraction of the Scott Act. He pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and costs.

A TRAGEDY RETOLED.

How Brothers of a Man "Wanted" by the Peterborough Police were Lynched.

The Cobourg World says:—Mrs McDonald, the old woman who moved into town from Peterborough about the 1st inst., and was subsequently convicted of receiving stolen mutton, the property of J. T. Webster, and who is now serving a term of imprisonment for abetting the larceny, is the mother of John and Frank McDonald, the two Canadians who were lynched in Menominee, Mich., 6 years ago. They first went to Michigan in 1879 and during the winter of 1879 and 1880 worked in a lumber camp. In the spring of 1880 they got into a quarrel with some lumbermen, and for violently resisting arrest were sent to State prison for a term of eighteen months. After serving sixteen months they were released and obtained work at a mill in Menominee. On October 3rd, 1881, they got involved in a quarrel in a house of ill-fame with Willie Kittison. Kittison left the house and the McDonalds followed and overtook him and his brother, who had heard of the qurrel and was on his way to the house in question. They exchanged words which brought on blows and in a moment Willie was dead from a knife wound through his lungs and his brother Norman lying dangerously wounded. One of the McDonalds was wounded in the leg by a pistol ball and cooly went to a surgeon's to have it dressed. Norman fired the shot. The McDonalds were both arrested. On the same night of the arrest threats were freely made by the mob, but nothing was done beyond a noisy demonstration until the night following, when about 500 men assembled about the court house and despite the efforts of the Sheriff they battered down the doors of the court house and took the McDonald boys out of their cells. One of the brothers, anticipating his awful fate, deliberately placed the rope around his own neck. They were dragged to the house of ill-fame in which Kittison's murder had been determined, and after the mob had fired the house, they were hung to a tree in front of it, which was photographed as they were in the agonies of death. Their old mother and younger brothers were living in Belleville (Ont.) at the time of the lynching and continued to reside in the Bay City till about three months ago when they moved to Peterborough. Since their removal to Cobourg several persons have come to town on a search for goods and chattels which the McDonalds have borrowed but forgotten to return. It will be remembered that one evening about 9.30 o'clock, as Police Constable Ulyatt was walking along Bali Street, he noticed a man leaning against the fence and apparently in a state of intoxication. He spoke to him and urged him to go home, and in reply was assaulted by the fellow and a pal who was with him. After a plucky fight, Constable Ulyatt succeeded in landing both men in the lock-up, and it was circumstances connected with their arrest that aroused Chief Constable Rankin's suspicions and led to the discovery of Mr. Webster's stolen mutton in Mrs. McDonald's house on Forth street. Daniel McDonald and Edward Ward were sent up to Castle Culver for 60 days for assaulting Constable Ulyatt while in the execution of his duty, and now Dan is wanted in Peterborrugh for a similar assault on Police Officer McGinty, and also for an unpaid fine in another case."

Crack Shooting.

Three representatives of the Gun Club met in the Riverside Park on Thursday afternoon. This time they had real birds to crack at; not birds of clay as they have used heretofore. They secured thirty pigeons at ten cents apiece got the trap at working and stood off twenty six yards. As the birds flew up the marksmen got their fine work in. Out of Mr. Kents ten he took down four; Mr. Tivey shot five out of his ten, and Mr. Nell shot none out of the ten that flew for him. The game was taken home as prizes. Bagarders should speak up now if he wishes to keep up his reputation.

TWO OLD LADIES.

They Meekly Apply for Admission to the Gaol.

Two old ladies, so infirm that they could scarcely climb the stairs to the Police Court, waited patiently for the Magistrate to hear their cases at this morning's session of the Police Court.

When the other cases were over the Magistrate called out:

"Mary Johnston!"

Mrs. Johnston arose and assisted by her stick got over to the Magistrate's desk. His Worship explained that she was charged with being a vagrant, having no visible means of support. "Have you any home?" he enquired.

"No, Sir," said Mary.

"And what do you want me to do?"

"I want to go to gaol, Sir."

"Do you want go up for the rest of you days?"

"Oh, no, sir," replied Mary, smiling simply "I only want to stay there six months."

"And how long do you want to stay?" his Worship said, addressing Johanna Welsh, who was sitting quite still.

Johanna made her way forward.

"What about the ticket they got you to go to Toronto?"

"M?" interrogated the old lady.

"To go to Toronto," said his worship louder.

Still Johanna heard not, but she heard the next time.

"Oh," said she, "I won't go to Toronto. My daughter died there and I couldn't bear to go. I just want to go to gaol, Your Worship."

"Six months at hard labor," pronounced the magistrate good-humouredly.

"I suppose they'll let me out once in a while to have a walk" said Johanna meekly. Mary said that she could not do much, but she "could knit some."

Local Brevities.

—The sidewalks were very slippery this morning after the sleet and rain of last night. It was quite amusing to see the citizens navigate along the sidewalks. Every little spot of sawdust or ashes was eagerly sought as a resting place. Where no device to establish sure footing was put out the people relied solely on their even balance, and the small boy on skates shouted for joy. More than one was seen to give an expiring kick and go down, and even cautious young ladies were observed once in a while to throw up their hands and gaze at the sky.

—Mr. Donald Cameron is out for the Deputy-Reeveship of Asphodel. Isn't it time candidates for a seat in the Town Council were making known their intentions? A card in the REVIEW would give the information to the electors.

What shall I say of thee,
Flower all elusive, guarding alike from the rain and the sun
The mystical heart of thyself—
What shall I say of thee?
Hast thou some foe thou wouldst shun?

Or else to the bee and bold elf
Knowing the way of thee,
Art thou a chamber for feasting and revel, and do they purvey of thee

AFRAID TO GIVE EVIDENCE

THE LABOR COMMISSION SHUNNED BY EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYED.

Another Witness Withholds His Name Through Fear—The Court May Summon Witnesses to Make the Enquiry Thorough—A Carpenter and a Machinist Examined Yesterday.

TORONTO, Nov. 26.

Yesterday's proceedings of the Labor Commission were not at all satisfactory. The Court sat all morning awaiting the advent of promised witnesses, but not one put in an appearance. They did not even make satisfactory excuse, and the efforts of Secretary Blackeby and the two local commissioners failed to bring them to the witness-box. One who had promised was Mr. Daniel Rose (Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., printers), but he telephoned that he had changed his mind, revoked his promise, and declared he should not depose. In the afternoon the commission caught a voluble witness who occupied the session and certainly made a good contribution to the evidence already obtained. The evening was a small repetition of the afternoon's business, only one witness being examined and he afraid to have his name published. For the official report however the names were given or the president would have refused the evidence. Judge Armstrong stated that the court has power to summon witnesses and compel their attendance.

Mr. Callow was examined at length respecting the agreement between the union and the masters and the late strike. The masters wished to pay 22½ cents an hour to "qualified workmen" only, but the men objected to this clause.

Commissioner Heakes: Do you think a man who cannot properly work at his trade ought to be paid the same as one who can?

Witness: I do not. I might just as well go and want to be paid as a bricklayer.

Commissioner Heakes: As a matter of fact the agreement was signed with those words in it.

Witness next spoke of co-operative stores, giving his experience of their successful working in England. They were a great benefit to the workingman if they were properly worked and the men had confidence in one another. "But," he added. "I am sorry this is not so in Toronto. It is as the vulgar saying is in the United States: 'Everyone for himself and the devil take the hindmost.'"

In conclusion Mr. Callow spoke of the increased value of property in this city, which had "gone up like a balloon" in the last few years. Many workmen, some of them carpenters, had houses in Seaton Village and Davenport. He had paid for his own house, but some had got assistance from the loan societies, "and they will squeeze the fat out of them; but they will not squeeze any fat out of me."

At the evening sitting the first witness was a machinist, who wished that his name should not be published. He thought his employers might not like his giving evidence.

President Armstrong: It is a great pity there should be such a feeling.

Witness has been fourteen years in Toronto, where is a branch of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the headquarters of which is London, Eng. Wages were no better in Canada than England, but house rent was much dearer in Toronto than Dundee, Scotland, whence witness emigrated. Butchers' meat was dearer in this city than five years ago. Witness gave particulars of rates for wages in the Old Country, stating that he received a penny an hour for "beer money" when working overtime.

Commissioner Carson: You don't get any beer money here?

Witness: No, you hardly get time to take your grub.

Commissioner Walsh: Do you know anything that would improve your position?

Witness: Yes; more money. We are underpaid and work too long hours. I do not think the Factory Act goes far enough. I think boys and girls should remain at school and not go out to work till they are 15.

The inquiry was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning. Next week the Commissioners will hold afternoon and evening sessions.

COMMERCIAL RECIPROCITY.

Chamberlain and Tupper Favor It, But Not Commercial Union.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The Star this evening says: "The English Fishery Commissioners think that they are not to discuss commercial reciprocity, but would like a few words in regard to the killing of Alaskan seals. Outside of the subject of Canadian sealfish the United States prefers to talk about the weather." The Star in this paragraph does injustice to the British and Canadian plenipotentiaries, as Mr. Chamberlain in his Washington newspaper interview intimated that both he and Sir Charles Tupper strongly favored commercial reciprocity, which would leave to each country the regulation of its own tariff against other countries.

President Grevy Still Sticks.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—President Grevy still stubbornly resists the demands for his immediate resignation. The press unanimously condemns he prolongation of the crisis.

THE VACANT JUDGESHIPS.

A REPORT THAT MR. O'GARA OF OTTAWA WILL GET ONE.

A Statement of the Exports and Imports for the Month of October—The Announcements to be Made in The Canada Gazette.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—There was no meeting of council to-day but there will be one to-morrow, at which it is believed some more of the existing vacancies on the bench will be filled. The name of Mr. O'Gara, Police Magistrate, who was freely spoken of some time ago as likely to get one of the vacancies, is again mentioned and it is just possible that Sir John may yield to the wish of the Ottawa bar to have an eastern man appointed as Hon. John O'Connor's successor, and thus relieve himself of the difficulty of having to choose between Hugh McMahon and J. J. Foy. Mr. O'Gara is a Liberal in politics but not an active party man. He has been an excellent police magistrate and would make an acceptable judge, but as he has one of the largest practices in Ottawa it is doubtful whether he would give it up to go on the bench.

There is some feeling in the united counties of Prescott and Russell that an outsider should not be appointed County Court Judge in succession to the late Judge Daniell, and to-day a deputation waited on Sir John Macdonald and urged the appointment of Mr. P. O'Brien of L'Orignal, the oldest practising barrister in the united counties. Sir John promised to consider the matter.

The Journal to-night says: "Mr. P Purcell, M.P., appears disposed to come out on top of the heap. It is believed by his friends that he has assured the Government of an independent support, owing, it is alleged, to the warm friendship existing between Sir Charles Tupper and Purcell."

On Monday a motion will be made in the Supreme Court, by the respondent in the Russell election case, to have the appeal set down for hearing at the present sitting of the court or at an early date thereafter.

The lumbermen are agitating for a reduction of insurance rates on account of the greatly increased facilities for fighting fires now possessed by the city, and it is said they will probably secure a reduction which will save them about $30,000 a year.

A meeting of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council has been called for Dec. 13. Several cases in which the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railways and the corporation of the city of Toronto are interested will be discussed before the committee.

A deputation from Owen Sound waited on the Minister of Railways and Canals to-day and submitted samples of the limestone from the Owen Sound quarries, which they urged should be used in the new Sault Ste. Marie Canal. The Minister promised that the matter should receive consideration. The survey of the canal route is progressing favorably, and will probably be completed by January next.

It is understood that ex-Judge Clark has finally decided to resign his position on the Trent Valley Canal Commission owing to the onerous duties imposed on him by the acceptance of the Canadian Pacific Railway solicitorship. His successor will shortly be named, when the prescribed task will be begun.

The Collector of Customs at Vancouver has effected a seizure of some valuable jewelry smuggled into that port from the United States by an employe of a vessel for a citizen of that place. The property will probably be confiscated.

In the Supreme Court to-day argument was heard in the case of McKenna v. McNamee, a suit arising out of McNamee's contract with the British Columbia Government in 1882 for building the Esquimault graving dock.

Statement of Exports and Imports.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—Following is the statement of exports from the Dominion for the month of October:

| | Produce of Canada. | Produce of other countries |
|---|---|---|
| Produce of the mines | $ 429,071 | $ 25,635 |
| Produce of the fisheries | 1,073,013 | 12,345 |
| Produce of the forest | 2,244,823 | 190,032 |
| Animals and their produce | 3,240,634 | 78,859 |
| Agricultural products | 2,261,542 | 441,758 |
| Manufactures | 696,918 | 55,152 |
| Miscellaneous articles | 84,684 | 6,078 |
| Totals | $10,030,685 | $810,859 |

Compared with the same month last year this shows a decrease of $449,955 in the produce of Canada and $180,761 in the produce of other countries. In the produce of Canada the decreases are: Mines, $27,924; forest, $322,029; and animals and their produce, $472,504. The increases of fisheries $84,013; agricultural products, $43,527; manufactures, $220,326; miscellaneous, $21,668. In the produce of other countries the falling off is almost entirely in agricultural products and products of the forest. Taking the first four months of the fiscal year the total exports from the Dominion amount to $41,630,134, being an increase of $1,923,817 over the same period last year, of which $807,398 is in produce of Canada and $1,116,419 in produce of other countries.

The statement of goods entered for consumption during October is: Dutiable goods, $5,253,150; coin and bullion, $27,254; free goods, $3,185,302; total, $8,465,706; duty collected, $1,699,832.

The Postoffice Savings Bank statement for October shows deposits of $130,686; withdrawals, $678,511; balance at credit of depositors, $19,679,725, which is over $2,000,000 more than at this time last year.

Notices in The Gazette.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The Gazette will contain the appointments of Judges Tellier, Charland, Bain and Falconbridge, and of the five new members of the Labor Commission, all already announced; also of T. G. Davis as deputy collector of Inland Revenue for London from Jan. 1, and George Marsan as assistant postoffice inspector for Ottawa postal division from Oct. 1.

Letters patent have been issued incorporating the Bristol Iron Company with a capital of $200,000.

A circular from the Secretary of State for the Colonies with reference to the revised regulations governing the examination and entry of naval cadets will appear in to-morrow's Canada Gazette containing an extract from a letter from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty stating that they have decided to allow the colonial candidates who fail to pass successfully at their first examination the opportunity of being examined again at about six months' time, provided they are still within the prescribed limit of age.

The Superintendent of Insurance gives notice that a license has been issued to the Germanic Life Insurance Company to do business in Canada. A. V. Engel is the chief agent and the head office is at Montreal.

The Minister of Railways and Canals gives notice of the expropriation of certain lands in Emerson and in the parish of St. Agathe, Manitoba, taken in connection with the Pembina branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Notices are given of the following applications to Parliament: The Upper Ottawa Improvement Company for power to extend operations and increase capital to $200,000; the Ontario and Quebec Railway, for extension of time for the completion of the western extension, and also of its Don branch into the City of Toronto; the Annapolis Atlantic Railway Company, to construct a railway from Annapolis Royal to Liverpool, N.S.; with branches to Shelburne, Lockeport and Barrington.

A. Mackenzie, president of the Sovereign Fire Insurance Company, gives a winding-up notice that on and after Dec. 27 all the remaining assets of the company will be divided amongst the shareholders and the act of incorporation relinquished and the company finally dissolved.

Notices of dividends are given by the following banks: Hochelaga and Union Bank of Canada, 3 per cent. for the half year, payable Jan. 3; Standard Bank, at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, payable Dec. 1.

THE LAW TO FIT THE CASE.

Justice Getting Ready to Sift Mr. Henry Taylor.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The financial panic experienced by London is now clearly emphasized in fashionable social circles, and as the ball and party season has now set in the general effect becomes more apparent. Ladies whose husbands and fathers were reputed to be of great wealth and consequently occupied the highest positions in society are now absent from the tony gatherings. Sensational developments of frauds, embezzlements and steals have grown stale and common. Interest centres on what shall be done with Henry Taylor and the other rogues who are responsible for the disaster. A large majority of shareholders of the Ontario Investment Association carried a resolution at the last meeting of the company to proceed against Taylor criminally. From the best authority the charges and the law upon which the criminal prosecution will be conducted have been learned. Three specific charges are to be made: First, fraudulently appropriating stock and cash; second, keeping false accounts; third, publishing false statements. The law under which a conviction will be asked for is the Larceny Act, 49 Victoria, chapter 164, sections 66 to 70, providing that a director or manager of any company or corporate body fraudulently appropriating property shall receive seven years' imprisonment; also, any manager keeping false accounts, wilfully destroying or falsifying books, is liable to seven years; also, a manager or officer who makes or circulates, or concurs in doing so, any written statement or account which he knows to be false in any material respect, with intent to deceive or defraud a shareholder or creditor, or induce any person to become a shareholder or advance any property to such body, is guilty and liable to seven or ten years.

It is held that the facts of Henry Taylor compiling fictitious stock lists on which to sell debentures, the false stock books kept and imaginary assets published, the misappropriation of funds, the booming of association stock by association funds, can all be proved. The coming trial threatens to wreck Henry Taylor's life.

A RICH MAN'S BEQUESTS.

Victoria College Benefited $25,000 by the Death of Mr. Moore of Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Nov. 25.—The will of the late Mr. Dennis Moore gives $25,000 to the trustees of the University of Victoria College, located at Cobourg, to establish, or to assist in establishing, a chair or professorship in the Faculty of Arts in the said University, the same to be for the purpose of instruction in such subject or subjects of literature, philosophy or science, and to be called by such name as the College Board may direct; $600 a year for ten years to the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church; $500 to the Boys' Home, $500 to the Protestant Orphan Asylum, $300 to the Girls' Home, $300 to the Home of the Friendless.

Provision has also been made for carrying on the business of D. Moore & Co. The residue of his estate goes to his wife and children. The executors are his wife, Mrs. D. Moore; his son, Mr. E. J. Moore; Mrs. W. A. Robinson and S. F. Lazier.

THE GERMAN PARLIAMENT.

The Crown Prince Replies to the Message of Sympathy to Him.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—Herr Wedell Riesdorff, was to-day re-elected President of the Reichstag and Dr. Buhl and Herr Unruhe Bornst Vice-Presidents. The Budget estimates will be submitted on Nov. 29.

The President read a telegram from the Crown Prince, in response to the message of sympathy sent by that body yesterday, thanking them for their sympathy and expressing the hope that the favorable turn in his ailment, which has already resulted from his stay in the south, would permit him to resume to the full extent his duties to the fatherland.

A "GROTESQUE EPISODE"

SO MR. BALFOUR STYLES THE AFFAIR OF O'BRIEN'S CLOTHES.

Seven English M.P.s Attend a Meeting to Protest Against the Treatment of the Irish Editor—Seven Summonses Served on Mayor Sullivan.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A letter written by Mr. Balfour is published in which he refers to the "grotesque episode" of Mr. O'Brien's clothes. He says that Mr. O'Brien is not treated in Tullamore Prison with either leniency or severity. He has succeeded in sheltering himself under the medical opinion that his lungs are delicate and his heart's action weak. Mr. Balfour also says if Mr. O'Brien refuses to wear the prison dress force will not be applied to compel him. There is no reason why he should not fulfil his term in prison, but he cannot safely be subjected to the usual discipline.

The Meeting Protested.

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—A crowded meeting was held yesterday to protest against the treatment of Mr. O'Brien by the Tullamore Jail authorities. Lord Mayor Sullivan acted as chairman, and seven English members of the House of Commons were present.

Lord Mayor Sullivan has received seven summonses for publishing in his paper, The Nation, the proceedings of suppressed branches of the League. The trial will begin December 1.

THE SHEPPARD AFFAIR.

The Quondam Editor of The News Said to Have Settled the Difficulty.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—There has been no new developments in the Sheppard case to-day, the court not being able to take cognizance of his appearance here until to-morrow. But there has, nevertheless, been a lot of quiet negotiating going on. I am able to state to-night on excellent authority that the affair is practically settled. When the case is called in court in the morning an adjournment for a few days for consultation will be asked, and it is more than likely Sheppard will be released on his own recognizances. The officers of the 65th and their lawyers have to-day shown a great desire to settle the case, and a leading French lawyer has been in consultation with Sheppard and his counsel with this result. This evening the guard of bailiffs has been dismissed and Sheppard is practically free, being simply on his parole d'honneur. Deputy Sheriff Dubreuil, who has charge of the prisoner, has shown himself very gentlemanly and has given him every latitude possible.

A Toronto View of the Case.

Mr. Justice Rose has not yet given judgment in the matter of the application to compel Police Magistrate Denison to show cause why he should not endorse the Montreal warrant for the arrest of Mr. E. E. Sheppard on the charge of criminal libel. It was stated yesterday by one who well understands the case, that although Mr. Sheppard is now in the Province of Quebec he cannot be arrested at present, as he is there in the capacity of a witness in the case of The Queen v. Kribs.

TROUBLE BREWING IN QUEBEC.

French Canadians Bitterly Opposed to the Salvation Army.

QUEBEC, Nov. 25.—Last night a mob of 600 persons attacked the Salvation Army, which was out on parade. The mob was under command of a well-known volunteer officer and was headed by a man carrying a red flag. It kept up an incessant blowing of trumpets, hooting, yelling and the singing of French songs. The barracks was stoned and a large number of windows broken. The police charged the mob and in the melee Col. Vohl and Detective Walsh were roughly handled and received some injuries. The crowd was finally dispersed. The feeling this morning among French Canadians is intensified, and they claim if the authorities will not allow them to enjoy the same privilege as the Salvation Army in parading the street that they will take the law into their own hands. It is said that a circular is to be issued and delivered at each house calling upon French Canadians to join in subduing and routing the army from the city. Grave fears are entertained as to the peace of the city, and the affair is dwindling down to race prejudice. The army will again to-morrow night, and trouble is sure to occur. The mob lacked organization, and owing to this only was serious trouble averted last night.

The Crofter Uprising Collapses.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Crofter movement for the extermination of deer on the Isle of Lewis collapsed on the appearance of a force of police. Troops have been sent to prevent a renewal of the troubles. There has been a heavy slaughter of deer.

TRADE WITH JAMAICA.

TRADE between Canada and Jamaica is likely to be extended by the formation of a company for the purpose of starting a line of freight steamers between Halifax and Jamaica ports. These steamers, the Ottawa Citizen says, will be of light draught, so as to be able to enter the numerous small harbours with which the island abounds From the natural configuration of Jamaica, which is long and narrow—its breadth nowhere exceeding fifty miles—and is traversed throughout its entire length by a chain of lofty mountains, railway communication is, except near the capital, impracticable, and ordinary roads, from the many ravines and mountain streams to be bridged, are costly and difficult to construct. Land carriage is, therefore, very expensive, and its cost has hitherto been a formidable obstacle to the developement of trade with Canada in perishable commodities like fruit, of which the island produces immense quantities, many of them being of species all but unknown to Canadians.

As the proposed company intend to ask for power to advance money on fruit and other produce consigned to them, the Citizen adds, it is necessary to obtain an Act of incorporation, which will accordingly be applied for at the next session of the Dominion Parliament. Mr. A. Spencer Jones, whose exertions to extend Cnnadian trade with the British West Indies are well known, has been appointed Parliamentary agent of the company, and he will also allot those shares in the capital stock of the company which are to be issued in Canada. After the company gets into full operation it is intended to appoint agents throughout Canada to dispose of Jamaica produce consigned to it, and to receive consignments of Canadian produce for Jamaica. The steamers will be provided with Blackman's Patent Exhaust, by which process fruit and other perishables can be landed as fresh as when shipped. They will not carry passengers. As a large portion of its capital will be raised in London and Jamaica, the company has already been registered under the Companies Act.

The formation of this company is a direct result of the recent visit to Jamaica of Mr. Wylde, who was sent last fall by the Dominion Government as the commercial agent of Canada to the West Indies. In his correspondence with the chief men of Jamaica, Mr. Wylde strongly advocated the establishment of a steam packet service, to be assisted by subsidies from the exchequers of both the island and the Dominion. The financial condition of Jamaica prevents her from contributing, and the proposed plan of a join subsidy has been for the present abandoned. But the seed planted by the proposals of our Government has not been unfruitful, and the present project, which asks no subsidy, is the direct result of the attention that has been called to the immense value of the trade that steam communication will create between the Dominion and her sister colonies.

Now that the editor of the Hamilton Spectator has gone into solomn conclave with Mr. Hugh McLean, of this city, and the other gentlemen of what is known as the Labor Commission, it will be in order for the Tory press to denounce the holding of sessions with closed doors. But we have our solemn doubts about their doing so.—London Advertiser.

And they will not do so, for a very good reason. The sessions of the Commission are not held with closed doors.

THE Toronto News undertakes to answer all question sent to it, but this question bothered the oracle: "If my aunt's father's son is not my uncle, what relation is he to me?" And the oracle answered: "We should say he was your uncle." If he was not his uncle, we should say he was his father. And we do not undertake to answer all questions, either.

DISTRICT NOTES.

Midland District News Condensed from Contemporaries.

There was tolerably good sleighing in Haliburton last week.

James Craighead, a Seymour boy, fell and fractured his arm one day last week.

The evangelistic service in Lindsay, conducted by Messrs. Crossley and Dewey, are largely attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were seriously injured at Monmouth by horses running away.

The second cargo of lumber from Parry Sound, to pass over the Midland esplanade arrived Monday.

A too much married brakeman, named Fraser, who skipped out from Midland a few weeks ago, was seen in Detroit on Nov. 14th with wife number two.

A drunken passenger on the Grand Junction train lost $50 in the water closet of the car, while on his way from Belleville, on Tuesday.

About 25,000 ties have been shipped from Rathbun's mill at Campbellford to Port Covington, Maine, and 40,000 or 45,000 more are to go.

Wm. Whitton, a Campbellford cattle dealer, lost a bank draft and a number of bills, together amounting to over $100, near that village.

There is hardly as much forest produce being taken out as usual at this time of the year, but next month there may be an improvement.

The Board of Health for Harvey, Verulam and Bobcaygeon, are taking commendable action with regard to the diphtheria, and there is every indication that the two cases, one in Harvey and one in Verulam, will be confined to their present limits.

The Beaubocage made its last regular trip on Saturday the 19th. On Monday it did some towing on the lower lake, and on Wednesday the 23rd she started for Lindsay, but found the Scugog blocked with an impenetrable mass of ice. That settles the navigation for '87.

SEMI-OFFICIALLY DENIED.

There is no Prospect of War Between Austria and Russia.

PESTH, Nov. 25.—A semi-official denial is given here to the statement in The Berlin Post that there is an immediate prospect of an Austrian-Russian war. It is stated that nothing has lately happened to increase the danger of a conflict, and the remarks of The Post are held to be directly contrary to the confidential declarations of Count Kalnoky, the Imperial Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the delegations. Official circles are convinced that a war between Russia and Austria alone is an impossibility, because if Austria were assailed Germany and Italy would be bound to assist her and the inevitable result would be a general conflagration in Europe.

The Conditions of the Alliance.

PESTH, Nov. 25.—The Pesther Lloyd denies that each of the powers in the triple alliance is only bound to assist an ally if two powers attack. It says an ally is bound under all circumstances to assist. The paper also says Bismarck informed the Czar that the triple alliance was the result of Russia's sullenness and ill will.

A SCHOONER LOST.

The White Star Goes Ashore at Point Pelee in a Fog.

DETROIT, Nov. 25.—An Amherstburg despatch says it is reported here that the schooner White Star is ashore at Point Pelee, and that part of her crew had got ashore, but that the captain and a man named Hunter were lashed to the rigging. A small boat cannot live in the sea. A telegram from Leamington says it is impossible to rescue them, and it is feared they will be lost. Word has been sent to Sandusky, across the lake, for a lifeboat, as the only possible means of rescuing them. The schooner, it is feared, will go to pieces. The crew are from Oswego. A very dense fog has prevailed on the upper end of Lake Erie for three days past, all craft being compelled to stop.

A Vessel Ashore at Picton.

PICTON, ONT., Nov. 25.—The schooner Delaware went ashore last night about a mile south of Point Peter lighthouse. It was snowing hard at the time and a big sea was running. She is light and hard on. The crew was all taken off this morning. Great credit is due to the men who went to the rescue. Their names are W. Cole, H. Ostrander and R. Hanley. They launched a fish boat, after drawing it a couple of miles on a wagon, and, although the sea was running very high, were successful in rescuing all the crew.

A Tug Burned at Thorold.

THOROLD, Ont., Nov. 25.—The tug Munro, owned by John Cloy, took fire and was badly burned and sunk in the canal here this evening. The loss is probably covered by insurance.

A Wheat-Laden Vessel Ashore.

PICTON, Ont., Nov. 25.—The schooner Merrick is ashore on Timber Island, loaded with 19,000 bushels of wheat. Capt. Donnelly has gone to her with tug and lighter.

Anarchists to Reorganize.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Anarchists here state that an effort is being made in the principal cities to reorganize the followers of Spies and Parsons. The leading spirit is to be Louis Vierack of Munich, who will be brought from Germany for the purpose of assuming direction of the undertaking.

Imprisoned for Selling O'Brien's Paper.

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—D. McNamara, a shopkeeper at Ennis, has been sentenced to a week's imprisonment for selling copies of United Ireland, of which Wm. O'Brien is editor, and the selling of which has been proclaimed. This is the first instance in which a person has been prosecuted for selling newspapers.

No woman can be contented and happy if her skin is covered with pimples and blotches. These disfiguring eruptions are easily removed by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is perfectly safe to take, and is a thoroughly reliable blood purifier.

The railroads in southern Illinois are running water trains to meet the demand for water occasioned by the excessive drought.

"Did n't Know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"'I at once applied the necessary remedies. Copies of my prescriptions (with translation into English) accompany the present statements and are left to speak for themselves.

"'For the next three days I was in constant attendance on my patient. He answered to the remedies employed—improving slowly, but decidedly. I could conscientiously assure Lady Montbarry that no danger was to be apprehended thus far. She was indeed a most devoted wife. I vainly endeavored to induce her to accept the services of a competent nurse; she would allow nobody to attend on her husband but herself. Night and day this estimable woman was at his bedside. In her brief intervals of repose her brother watched the sick man in her place. This brother was, I must say, very good company in the intervals when we had time for a little talk. He dabbled in chemistry down in the horrid under water vaults of the palace, and he wanted to show me some of his experiments. I have enough of chemistry in writing prescriptions, and I declined. He took it quite good humoredly.

"'I am straying away from my subject. Let me return to the sick lord.

"'Up to the 20th, then, things went well enough. I was quite unprepared for the disastrous change that showed itself when I paid Lord Montbarry my morning visit on the 21st. He had relapsed, and seriously relapsed. Examining him to discover the cause, I found symptoms of pneumonia—that is to say, in unmedical language, inflammation of the substance of the lungs. He breathed with difficulty, and was only partially able to relieve himself by coughing. I made the strictest inquiries, and was assured that his medicine had been administered as carefully as usual, and that he had not been exposed to any changes of temperature. It was with great reluctance that I added to Lady Montbarry's distress; but I felt bound, when she suggested a consultation with another physician, to own that I too thought there was really need for it.

"'Her ladyship instructed me to spare no expense, and to get the best medical opinion in Italy. The best opinion was happily within our reach. The first and foremost of Italian physicians is Torello of Padua. I sent a special messenger for the great man. He arrived on the evening of the 21st, and confirmed my opinion that pneumonia had set in, and that our patient's life was in danger. I told him what my treatment of the case had been, and he approved of it in every particular. He made some valuable suggestions, and (at Lady Montbarry's express request) he consented to defer his return to Padua until the following morning.

"'We both saw the patient at intervals in the course of the night. The disease, steadily advancing, set our utmost resistance at defiance. In the morning Doctor Torello took his leave. "I can be of no further use," he said to me. "The man is past all help—and he ought to know it."

"'Later in the day I warned my lord, as gently as I could, that his time had come. I am informed that there are serious reasons for my stating what passed between us on this occasion, in detail, and without any reserve. I comply with the request.

"'Lord Montbarry received the intelligence of his approaching death with becoming composure, but with a certain doubt. He signed to me to put my ear to his mouth. He whispered, faintly, "Are you sure?" It was no time to deceive him; I said, "Positively sure." He waited a little, gasping for breath, and then he whispered again, "Feel under my pillow." I found under his pillow a letter, sealed and stamped, ready for the post. His next words were just audible and no more—"Post it yourself." I answered, of course, that I would do so—and I did post the letter with my own hand. I looked at the address. It was directed to a lady in London. The street I cannot remember. The name I can perfectly recall; it was an Italian name—"Mrs. Ferrari."

"'That night my lord nearly died of asphyxia. I got him through it for the time; and his eyes showed that he understood me when I told him, the next morning, that I had posted the letter. This was his last effort of consciousness. When I saw him again he was sunk in apathy. He lingered in a state of insensibility, supported by stimulants, until the 25th, and died (unconscious to the last) on the evening of that day.

"'As to the cause of his death, it seems, if I may be excused for saying so, simply absurd to ask the question. Bronchitis, terminating in pneumonia—there is no more doubt that this, and this only, was the malady of which he expired, than that two and two make four. Doctor Torello's own note of the case is added here to a duplicate of my certificate, in order, as I am informed, to satisfy some English offices in which his lordship's life was insured. The English offices must have been founded by that celebrated saint and doubter, mentioned in the New Testament, whose name was Thomas!"

"Doctor Bruno's narrative ends here.

"Reverting for a moment to our inquiries addressed to Lady Montbarry, we have to report that she can give us no information on the subject of the letter which the doctor posted at Lord Montbarry's request. When his lordship wrote it? what it contained? why he kept it a secret from Lady Montbarry (and from the baron also)? and why he should write at all to the wife of his courier? these are questions to which we find it simply impossible to obtain any replies. It seems even useless to say that the matter is open to suspicion. Suspicion implies conjecture of some kind—and the letter under my lord's pillow baffles all conjecture. Application to Mrs. Ferrari may perhaps clear up the mystery. Her residence in London will be easily discovered at the Italian couriers' office, Golden square.'

"Having arrived at the close of the present report, we have now to draw your attention to the conclusion which is justified by the results of our investigation.

"The plain question before our directors and ourselves appears to be this: Has the inquiry revealed any extraordinary circumstances which render the death of Lord Montbarry open to suspicion? The inquiry has revealed extraordinary circumstances beyond all doubt—such as the disappearance of Ferrari, the remarkable absence of the customary establishment of servants in the house, and the mysterious letter which his lordship asked the doctor to post. But where is the proof that any one of these circumstances is associated—suspiciously and directly associated—with the only event which concerns us, the event of Lord Montbarry's death? In the ansence of any such proof, and in the face of the evidence of two eminent physicians, it is impossible to dispute the statement on the certificate that his lordship died a natural death. We are bound, therefore, to report that there are no valid grounds for refusing the payment of the sum for which the late Lord Montbarry's life was assured.

"We shall send these lines to you by the post to-morrow, Dec. 10, leaving time to receive your further instructions (if any) in reply to our telegram of this evening announcing the conclusion of the inquiry."

CHAPTER IX.

"Now, my good creature, whatever you have to say to me, out with it at once! I don't want to hurry you needlessly; but these are business hours, and I have other people's affairs to attend to besides yours."

Addressing Ferrari's wife, with his usual blunt good humor, in these terms, Mr. Troy registered the lapse of time by a glance at the watch on his desk, and then waited to hear what his client had to say to him.

"It's something more, sir, about the letter with the thousand pound note," Mrs. Ferrari began. "I have found out who sent it to me."

Mr. Troy started. "This is news indeed!" he said. "Who sent you the letter?"

"Lord Montbarry sent it, sir."

It was not easy to take Mr. Troy by surprise. But Mrs. Ferrari threw him completely off his balance. For awhile he could only look at her in silent surprise. "Nonsense!" he said, as soon as he had recovered himself. "There is some mistake—it can't be!"

"There is no mistake," Mrs. Ferrari rejoined, in her most positive manner. "Two gentlemen from the insurance offices called on me this morning, to see the letter. They were completely puzzled—especially when they heard of the bank note inside. But they know who sent the letter. His lordship's doctor in Venice posted it at his lordship's request. Go to the gentlemen yourself, sir, if you don't believe me. They were polite enough to ask if I could account for Lord Montbarry writing to me and sending me the money. I gave them my opinion—I said it was like his lordship's kindness."

"Like his lordship's kindness!" Mr. Troy repeated, in blank amazement.

LIFE IN THE PENITENTIARY.

A Correspondent's Reflections After a Visit to the Inmates of Sing Sing.

Think what it is to enter those walls and face that clock, whose slow pendulum shall beat out—not seconds, minutes, hours, days, weeks or months—but years of your precious youth and manhood before you again see the world which has discarded you! Think of the unrelieved round of toil, succeeded by the solitary cell and miserable hours of thinking what might have been and what is! How slow the hours to him without hope, without profit in his bitter toil, without comfort in his solitude, without honor, without respect, without liberty! How slow the days make the week, and the weeks the month, where each is drearily the same, season in and season out, till the doleful year is told!

To be the companion of the vilest, cheek by jowl; to wear the garb of infamy; to be driven from the cell to labor, and from the labor to the cell; to see on all sides the high walls and the redoubts, where gleam the rifles ready to kill the insurgent; to know that however skillfully the escape is planned, however bravely executed, there are keen scented and lynx eyed pursuers to track and the strong arm of the law to recover; to feel that by no power can relief come until the long distant day appointed, save the power which can bless an unhappy life by ending it.

What a record of hopelessness, of despair, remorse and gnawing misery the pitiless stone of those cells could tell! Small wonder that after years of confinement every kindly trait of nature is withered, root and branch, and only sullen desperation and hatred of society remain.

Look at their faces to read their story. Not one in a hundred not the face of shame, of unhappiness, of stolid resignation to inevitable privation and disgrace. See that long line of gray misery marching to its noonday meal—a human centipede—a hundred locked together—shuffle, shuffle, shuffle, shuffle—the very step is a degradation. Slowly they file into the cheerless room, and in silence and with bowed head each sits to devour his portion. Not a word, not a whisper, all wants expressed by signs. Long lines of keepers, each coldly and keenly watchful, each ready with pistol to suppress the slightest token of revolt, for this is the time of danger in a state prison. The meal is soon over. At a beckon they arise and lock together—shuffle, shuffle, shuffle, shuffle—back to labor again. —Henry Guy Carleton in New York World.

A Cause of Clerks' Dishonesty.

I firmly believe that more than one-half of the defalcations and breaches of trust among clerks are caused by the silent teachings of dishonest merchants. I do not mean to excuse the clerks who permit themselves to be influenced by such teachings, but I wish to put the first blame where it belongs—and, in meting out punishment to the offenders, ideal justice would consign them both to the penitentiary.

Everybody must deplore the morality that permits false weights and false prices; that puts a "three pound" label on a forty-two ounce package; that sells fifty per cent. of spoiled flour and worse than spoiled buckwheat as "pure" mustard and "pure" pepper; that laughs at the sharp trick of false weights inserted in bills of lading to defraud the railroad and steamship companies; that applauds the successful bribery of a custom house examiner of dutiable goods; that chuckles at the clever imitation of a competitor's trade mark; that twists and turns and prevaricates to avoid the payment of taxes justly due the commonwealth for its blessings of liberty and protection; that does, in a word, everything that is low and mean and degrading, and nothing that is fair and true and just. I say morality of this sort is not the atmosphere in which to bring up a youth. Should he survive it all, and come out of it pure and true, it will be because he has within him the mettle of a true man, and not because of his surroundings.—Frank Grafton in The Epoch.

Cutting California in Two.

A scheme is on foot to make two states out of California, the lower half to be called Coronado. The new state could begin life with a population of 163,000, a property valuation of $100,000,000 and 27,000 square miles of territory.—Chicago News.

Force of Heat and Cold.

The amount of force exerted by heat and cold in expansion and contraction of metal is equal to that which would be required to stretch or compress it to the same extent by mechanical means.

P. T. BARNUM'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE "SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE."

Jenny Lind's Kindness of Heart Illustrated—Her Daughter's Voice—Teaching the Great Showman a Lesson. Profits of Her American Trip.

P. T. Barnum, who is spending a few weeks in the city, gave a reporter some interesting reminiscences of Jenny Lind a few days ago. "My autobiography," said the veteran showman, "gives nearly all that I can say about Jenny Lind. Her natural impulses were most noble and good. I never met a person so susceptible to the wants, needs or sufferings of others. I could at any time make her tears flow by relating some case of want, and her dollars would flow freely with her tears. She could not bear the thought of 'passing by on the other side,' when she could relieve the sorrow of any being, however humble."

Mr. Barnum told a touching story of an incident that occurred when Jenny was singing in Boston. "A poor working girl," he said, "thurst $3 into the hands of the ticket seller at the Boston Temple for a back seat at Jenny's concert. On receiving the ticket she said: 'There goes my wages for one week, but I must hear that good angel sing.' Jenny's secretary, her cousin, Max Hjortzberg, heard the remark and immediately went to the greenroom and laughingly told it to Jenny. 'I shall never forget how she jumped to her feet and exclaimed: 'Oh, this must not be! Poor girl, she shall not lose her money! It is wicked! Max, take this money'—handing him a twenty dollar gold piece—'search out that dear creature and put it in her hands, with my love. God bless her!' Cousin Max found the girl, gave her the money and message, and witnessed a flood of grateful tears from the working girl's eyes. If she is alive today she will remember it.

HER KINDEST REGARDS.

"When I was struggling against the Jerome clock debts, in 1858," Mr. Barnum went on, "I took my wife and children to London. One day Jenny's husband, Otto Goldsmith, called on me and said: 'Mrs. Lind, hearing of your financial misfortune, desired me to call on you and say if a few hundred pounds, or a thousand, will serve to relieve your present wants, I am to hand it to you with her kindest regards. We are now living in Dresden, and my wife says if you will take your family there she will gladly find you nice apartments at a low rent, and we shall both be glad to render you any service we can.' The kind offer was declined with thanks, but it shows the charitable character of this almost angelic woman.

"She has two children, the elder a son. The daughter has a voice which Sir Julius Benedict told me he believed if cultivated would prove equal to her mother's. 'But,' he added, 'her parents are rich, and have no ambition to have her attain musical renown, which would involve such arduous study and practice.'

"Her share of profits in our musical campaign, in 1850 and 1851, was $208,675.09. She sang in ninety-three concerts. She was worth over $1,000,000 when she left the United States in 1851, and this sum has been increased by occasional concerts in Great Britain, and by the judicious investments of her husband.

"Kind and lady like as Jenny Lind was, she had a horror of meeting strangers, and I will tell you this story, though it is against myself. During the first few weeks of our engagement I introduced to her numbers of ladies and gentlemen who desired to see her. She frequently intimated to me that it was displeasing to her, but I was anxious to gratify the people who so persistently sought an introduction.

INTRODUCING A STRANGER.

"One morning at the Continental hotel in Philadelphia, an esteemed lady friend called on me and asked for an introduction to the 'Swedish Nightingale.' I told her how glad I would be to gratify her, but these introductions of strangers were very annoying to Miss Lind and that I really dreaded to go and ask her permission. 'Oh, do please do so just this once, for I am dying to speak to her,' urged my friend, and at last I reluctantly consented to ask her permission.

"'Miss Lind,' I said, 'I know you dislike to have me introduce strangers simply because they are friends of mine, and I refuse many such requests daily, but a particular lady friend of my family is waiting in the reception room, very anxious to speak a few words with you.'

"Jenny surprised me by saying with a pleasant smile, 'Dear Mr. Barnum, how can I refuse you anything? Bring up your lady friend immediately, by all means.'

"I hastened down stairs, brought up the lady, and was delighted to introduce her. Jenny bowed and received her graciously, then pointed to a chair and they both were seated. Jenny's face at once assumed a sober aspect as she said: 'Madam, I do not know what to say to you; we are perfect strangers. You have come only to gratify an idle curiosity; what can I say?'

"I was shocked to hear this, and to see my friend turn as red as scarlet when she tried to make some excuse. 'Oh, do not apologize,' said Jenny; 'I do not blame you half as much as I do Mr. Barnum. I have warned him often, and now I am compelled to give him this severe lesson, which I am determined he shall never forget.'

"It is needless to say that I never did forget it, nor, seeing the justice of Jenny's position, did I ever repeat the offense."

"How long has it been since Jenny Lind gave any concerts?" was asked.

"I think it must be ten or fifteen years," Mr. Barnum replied. "She gave many for charities in England that were never known to the public. The tickets were sold privately, always at a guinea each, and the hall was always filled. During the last year that she sang, all her concerts were for the benefit of poor clergymen."—New York Tribune.

Scott Act in Victoria.

At a meeting of temperance workers in Lindsay reports from all parts of the county were read complaining that the law was not enforced. Resolutions were adopted complaining of the policy of fining and favouring prohibitionist candidates for every election. At a meeting of hotel keepers a proposal to close up the hotels and give no further accommodation was discussed, but it was not agreed to.

Northwest Products.

As will be seen by an advertisment in another column, a car containing specimens of the products of Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia will be at the Canadian Pacific Railway station, Peterborough, on Nov. 28th and 30th. It will be open to visitors from 8 o'clock a.m. to 8 p.m. each day. The exhibition car will be of special interest to farmers, but all are cordially invited to inspect the products of of western Canada.

Lakefield Reeveship.

Mr. R. C. Strickland, Reeve of Lakefield, announces that he will not be a candidate for that position for 1888. Mr Strickland has been Reeve of Lakefield for eight years, and during that time the village has steadily progressed, while the taxes, owing to the careful management of municipal affairs, have not increased. Mr. Strickland's retirement will be regretted, and will be a loss to the whole county as well as to the village, as he was a valuable member of the County Council.

Personal.

Mr. Geo. Hilliard, who was injured a few weeks ago in moving a heavy stone, is now well again.

The Ottawa Citizen of Thursday says: —"Last evening Mr. John F. Orde, law student in the law office of Messrs. McIntyre, Lewis & Code, was notified that he had won the first scholarship of $100, offered by the Law Society at the first intermediate examination recently held at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. Forty students from all parts of the province presented themselves for examination, and Mr. Orde distanced them all. His success is due to careful and unremitting study. His many friends, while congratulating him, feel that it is but the forerunner of still greater triumphs in the future."

Railway Notes.

It is undrstood that everything in relation to the double track of the Grand Trunk is in satisfactory shape, and that the new track will be brought into use in about two weeks. The improvement will facilitate the handling of traffic and avert many dangers. A large share of the double track business will run via Lindsay to Belleville.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new engine house at Lindsay, under the superintendance of Locomotive Engineer J. Storey, the Post says The boiler has arrived and is being placed in position, several of the engine-pits are completed and the large tank for supplying the engines with water has been sunk in the ground and connection made with the water pumping engine. The reservoir will hold about 500 barrels of water. Three tracks will be laid in the building, the working track being in the middle. A large smoke channel extending the length of the building will be erected next week. Workmen are busy putting up the "tall chimney," which will be 65 feet in height; and the roof is being sheeted with galvanized tin and is nearly completed. It is feared that the building, large as it is, will hardly supply the room required for the large repairing shop in connection.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The usual services will be conducted.

METHODIST CHURCH, Mark street (Ashburnham).—The usual services will be conducted.

Fatal Result of an Accident.

Mrs. Charles Brealey, of Ashburnham, died on Friday afternoon, her death being the sad result of an accident. On Saturday, while getting out of the phaeton at the door, her dress caught and she was thrown down. The horse stepped up and a wheel ran over her ankle. Not feeling much hurt, Mrs. Brealey went into the house and Mr. Brealey went to put the horse away. But after going into the warm house Mrs. Brealey fainted, falling back on her head and shoulders, and lay on the floor till her husband came in. Medical aid was summoned and she was restored to consciousness. She progressed well and on Thursday was down stairs, but she was worse that night, and although on Friday forenoon her death was not thought of, she expired at half past three o'clock in the afternoon. The shock and cold had increased an affection of the heart and neuralgia in the head. Mrs. Brealey was in her fifty-fifth year. She was born in Cavan, near Millbrook, where her mother, Mrs. John Ward, still resides. In 1852 she was married to Mr. Brealey. They lived in Cavan eight years, and in 1860 they removed to a farm in North Monaghan on which their son, Mr. James Brealey, is still living. In the spring of 1884 they retired from the farm and came to live Peterborough, soon after taking up their residence in Ashburnham. Another son, Mr. Wm. Brealey, lives in Otonabee. Mr. Brealey has the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends in his affliction. The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

WHAT PEOPLE READ.

Diverse Tasts and the Way They are Expressed in a Library.

A man's character is judged by the the language he uses, by the clothes he wears, by his signature, by his gait, and sometimes even by the way he holds a cue at a game of billiards. But there is no better way of getting at a man's mental calibre than by finding out what his mind feeds on. A person who reads nothing but works on logic is as ready for an argument as a Greek; he who rummages around for books on science is sure to be something of an amateur scientist. This rule will not work on boys. The lad may read all the books published on travel and yet stay at home all his life.

"I find," said the librarian of the Mechanics' Institute on Friday evening, "that our scholarly members go over the whole range of the library."

With this remark he turned the heavy ledger and pointed out a list of books one man had taken. His record showed diversity.

"Now, most of the ladies and the boys have but one selection. The ladies take works of fiction and the boys books of travel."

He turned up a boy member's list. It was a straight line under the head of "travel" and the several lists of books taken out by ladies bore out the librarian's assertion.

From musing on this oddity he went on to give something of what the institution was doing. There were, he said, altogether 300 members. These three hundred had taken out during the year 8,000 volumes, on an average of twenty-six books each. There was a fine collection to choose from. Of works on biography there were 450 volumes; of ordinary fiction, 800; of historical works, 350; of poetry, 130; of bound perodicals, 120; of religious works, 215; of works on science, 510; of books on travels, 370; of reference boods, 198; of essays and lectures, 280; of standard works of fiction, 650; of works on philosophy, 100; and a large collection of miscellaneous works, making in number altogether over eight thousand volumes.

The librarian explained how difficult it would be to keet a record of the books going out and coming in where it not for the excellent system (which, by the way, is owing to Mr. Lewis' laborious work) used by him. Each member has an account opened and the book's number and kind is recorded. At any time a member's name can be turned up and the number of books taken can be ascertained. If a member asks if such a book is in the library all that is necessary is to turn to the class it should be in in the index and it can be found in a short time—if it is there. Also there is a list of the names of the authors and the books such authors have written. In a moment the librarian can tell whether a certain man is the author of a certain book.

Among the members are quite a number from the country. They come in on Saturday secure their books and return them the next. The Institute offers great advantages to townspeople. There is a cheery warm reading room in which the members can sit in the evenings to read newspapers, magazines or books. They have the choice of a library of 8,000 volumes, and the fee is but nominal. Parents could not do a better thing to get their boys and girls interested in literature than to make them member of the Institute.

PROTECTING THEIR PROPERTY.

An Association of Stoney Lake Property Owners Formed.

A circular was issued on Tuesday inviting the owners of cottages at Stoney Lake to meet at the office of Mr. E. H. D. Hall on Friday afternoon, for the purpose of forming an association for the mutual protection of their property.

There were present at the meeting:—Messrs. Wm. Lech, E. H. D. Hall, John McClelland, R. McWhinnie, Wm. Brownscombe, H. Grundy, H. T. Strickland, John Burnham, Gordon Smith and J. B. McWilliams.

After some preliminary discussion Mr. MCCLELLAND moved, seconded by Mr. LECH,—That we form an association to be called the Stoney Lake Property Owners Protection Association, having for its object the protection of the property of its members from damage; that the Association shall consist of all present and any others of such owners who are willing to join and pay the annual fee of $2.—Carried.

It was decided that the officers consist of President, Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer.

The officers were then elected as follows:
PRESIDENT.—E. H. D. Hall.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—E. B. Edwards.
SEC'Y-TREASURER.—H. Grundy.
COMMITTEE.—R. C. Strickland, J. McClelland, G. M. Roger, R. Graham, A. Hall and Geo. Cochrane.

Mr. Grundy presented a list of the names of persons who owned property at Stoney Lake. There were about seventy altogether

Mr. MCCLELLAND moved, seconded by Mr. MCWHINNIE,—That Mr. Roger and the Secretary be a committee to draft by-laws. —Carried.

It was decided that steps be taken in the prosecution of the person who broke into Mr. E. H. D. Hall's house at Stoney Lake.

It was also decided to select a man whom the Association could recommend to Judge Weller to appoint as County Constable, which office has been vacant since Captain Cooper's leaving town.

It is understood that the Association will supplement the constables salary in return for his paying special attention to see that their propriety is kept safe. The Association will bear the expense in the prosecution of persons found damaging their cottages or breaking into them.

Around the Town Buildings.

—Collector Cummings is kept very busy. Over $1,500 came into his coffers yesterday and to-day before one o'clock he took in over $1,800.

—A public meeting is called for Monday evening to discuss the merits of the proposed Saw and File Works, and to make an effort to have the remaining stock subscribed.

—A meeting of the Town Council was to have been held on Monday evening, but on account of another meeting to be held in the council chamber on the same evening the Council meeting will take place on Tuesday evening.

—Both the Collector and the Town Clerk sport handsome door plates in front of their offices.

—Messrs. Ambrose & Winslow were fined $100 on Friday, $50 in each case.

—There was a full at the Police Court this morning.

Run Down by a Barge.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The three-masted scow schooner Phœnix was run into late last night just outside of the harbor here by an unknown barge, supposed to be the Wild Melbourne, and so badly cut up that she immediately water-logged. The captain and crew abandoned the vessel and nearly lost their lives in making land in a yawl.

Survivors of the Scholten Disaster.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Thirteen more of the passengers reported as lost on the steamer W. A. Scholten have just been reported saved. Their names are Gustave Bromonsky, Gustave Will, Guiseppe De Bartolini, Henry Kenyon, H. Susler, Peter Jewichowski, Max Brecki, James Prechings, Joseph Lusmiski, J. Gund, Andrew Altka, Philip Meeker and Hermann Weide.

The Case of Jake Sharp.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A rumor gained credence here to-day that four judges of the Court of Appeals favored a reversal of the conviction of Jacob Sharp, and that three maintained that the conviction should stand. District Attorney Martine said he believed there was no truth in the rumor. The decision in the case will be handed down Tuesday next.

A London Banker Charged with Fraud.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A magistrate to-night granted a summons against Henry Louis Bischoffsheim the banker, on a charge of obtaining the sum of £47,600 by false pretences from Jas. MacHenry, in connection with the Atlantic and Great Western Railway. The alleged fraud is said to have occurred in 1874.

A riot occurred in Pittsburg on Thursday night between members of the notorious "Owl Gang" and a crowd of Italians. Twelve or fifteen persons were injured, but no one was killed.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S BAIT ACT.

The Government of the Island Making Preparations to Enforce it.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A special to The Evening Post from St. Johns, Nfld., says: The Government of the Island is preparing to enforce the Bait Act. Three steamers are being built which will be placed on the coast to prevent smuggling on the part of the French fishermen. There will be no interference with the exportation of frozen herring to the United States in February, as these are not for bait but for commercial purposes. The French fishermen will not be seriously injured as all their nets will be sold in France for a good price, and all will be requited there. This will greatly lessen the surplus in future for exportation after the French markets are supplied.

Mutinous Spanish Convicts.

MADRID, Nov. 25.—Further information in regard to the plot of the military convicts, on the island of Gomera, Africa, to escape, shows the convicts had attempted to seize the mail steamer but were frustrated. It was their intention, if they had succeeded in capturing the steamer, to proceed to other depots and release the prisoners and then take refuge in Oran. Two soldiers of the station assisted the plotters.

The Sunday Shave.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The Supreme Court by a decision filed to-day at Salem, rules that a man must pay for being shaved on Sunday, and that under certain circumstances shaving on Sunday is "essential to his health and cleanliness." The plaintiff is a barber and shaved a Salem man until his decease sixty-nine times, fifty-two times occurring on Sunday.

The Report of Failures.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number, for the United States 187 and for Canada 20, or a total of 207, as compared with 224 last week and 217 the week previous to the last. The figures for the corresponding week of 1885 were 216, made up of 189 in the United States and 27 in Canada.

The Funeral of Father McManus.

GODERICH, Nov. 25.—The funeral of the late Father McManus of Windsor took place here to-day. His remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of mourners to add to their sorrow his aged father, Mr. Charles McManus, aged 85 years, died very suddenly this evening of grief owing to the loss of his son, and also a grandchild who died the same day his son died.

A WARM DISCUSSION EXPECTED.

Members of the National Liberal Club Anxious to Engage in Political Work.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—It is probable that a split will shortly occur in the National Liberal Club. Eighty-eight members have made a requisition on the committee to convene a meeting of the club to debate a resolution that in the interests of the party the members should actively engage in political work. Many Unionists and Gladstonian members are opposed to such action, on the ground that the club comprises all sections of the Liberal party, and that it would be unwise to accentuate divisions by participating in active politics. A warm discussion is expected to take place at the meeting.

A VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.

The Result of the Inquest Regarding the Death of Blackwell of Nissouri

LONDON, Nov. 25.—At Thorndale this afternoon an inquest was held on the body of the late Robert Blackwell of West Nissouri, who was kicked to death the other day by Robert Annett. The evidence of three witnesses and the doctors who attended Blackwell was taken. After being out about half an hour the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter.

THE PATIENT AT SAN REMO

THE PRINCE REFUSES TO CONFER ABOUT RENOUNCING THE THRONE.

Emperor William, Receiving the President and Vice-President of the Reichstag, Expresses Deep Sorrow at the Crown Prince's Infliction.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Mr. Chapman Coleman the First Secretary of the American Legation, sent a dispatch to the Crown Prince, in the name of the American residents of Berlin who were present at the Thanksgiving Day dinner, expressing sympathy with his Imperial Highness. To-night the Prince replied through Count Radolinski, his Chamberlain, thanking the Americans of Berlin for their message of sympathy.

According to court reports, the Crown Prince declined to see Prince Bismarck regarding the formal act of renouncing the throne, and wrote a letter to the Emperor which stopped Bismarck's going to San Remo. The relations between Prince William and the Chancellor are strengthening. The Prince, under the assent of the Emperor, is about to be instructed in the routine business of the Foreign Office and Finance Department.

Count Winterfield, on returning to-day from a visit to San Remo, presented a report upon the Crown Prince's condition to the Emperor. Regarding his general condition the report is favorable, but no improvement of his malady is indicated. A resident of Breslau has written to the Emperor offering his own larynx as a substitute for the Crown Prince's if the surgeons are willing to perform the operation of transplanting it.

The Prince Looks Cheerful.

SAN REMO, Nov. 27.—The Crown Prince indulged in a drive this morning and a walk in the afternoon. He looked well and cheerful.

The Emperor Deplores His Stricken Son.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Emperor William to-day received the President and Vice-Presidents of the Reichstag, who came to express the sympathy of that body with the Crown Prince. The Emperor, replying to their address, said that the ailment of the Crown Prince was a severe visitation, especially in view of his high position and his great abilities for continuing the direction of the policy of Prussia and Germany in a manner which would have enabled the Emperor to close his eyes in peace. What Providence might further decree none could tell, but it was the duty of all to bow to God's inscrutable will. The universal sympathy which had been shown in such a remarkable degree was a great consolation. He regretted that he was unable to open the Reichstag in person. He would have liked himself to have told the world that he desired peace, although Germany was perfectly prepared to meet attacks. He next alluded to the satisfactory state of the country's finances, which, he said, was also manifest in the individual states of the Empire. Finally, in the course of a few words on the general political situation, he expressed regret at the proposed resignation of M. Grevy.

MOB LAW IN QUEBEC.

The Next Parade of the Salvation Army Will Probably Lead to Bloodshed.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—Mayor Langelier has written to the Salvation Army asking them not to parade the streets in a body until Wednesday next, when he will give them reinforced protection. It was rumored to-day that a meeting is to take place to-morrow night on Dufferin-terrace for the purpose of organizing a mob to attack the Army and their protectors on Wednesday should they parade. Inflammatory speeches are promised by several well known young men in the city. Efforts will likely be made to suppress the meeting. It is said that nearly 100 revolvers were sold in the city yesterday as well as a large number of sling shots, etc., in anticipation of trouble. Last night a young man named Hatch was arrested for causing some disturbance and being armed. He was admitted on bail, giving sureties for $40. The rector of Laval University has threatened any student taking part in processions or outside demonstrations with immediate expulsion from the university.

L'Evenement last night calls upon citizens to assert their rights and seek redress before the courts as to the legality of the Salvationists parading the streets as they have been doing. Cardinal Taschereau has been asked by the police board to interfere and advise his flock to take no such regrettable steps as those on Thursday and last night.

LOYAL TO THEIR COUNTRY.

New Brunswickers Not in Favor of Commercial Union or Annexation.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 26.—The Bangor Commercial sent representatives to St. John and other New Brunswick points this week, who interviewed many prominent men there on the subject of Commercial Union, fisheries and other leading questions. To-day The Commercial prints interviews on these topics. The project for Commercial Union receives the indorsement of but one man of any prominence. All express friendly feeling towards the States, which, they say, exists throughout the provinces, and all give their views as to how trade with the States could be increased. They look to the settlement of the fishery dispute by the commission and that very soon. There is no great feeling in the provinces for annexation, but several think the people would very readily favor it if broached in the right manner.

When asked in regard to the project for the purchase of the Maritime Provinces by the United States they asserted that such a proposition would not be considered by the people of the Dominion for a moment. The people of the Dominion would accept such a proposition in the same spirit as would the people of the United States in case the Dominion Government should make an offer to purchase the State of Maine.

Belfast Strongly Conservative.

BELFAST, Nov. 26.—Corporation elections, under the municipal franchise were held here to-day, resulting in the return of ten Conservative Aldermen and ten Conservative Councilors. The single Parnelite candidate was at the foot of the poll.

A Rumor About Parnell Denied.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A report was current here to-day that Mr. Parnell was suffering from a cancerous tumor. The rumor is denied.

ENTERTAINED BY BAYARD

A DINNER PARTY TO MESSRS. CHAMBERLAIN AND TUPPER.

Afterwards Minister West Gives a Reception at the British Embassy—The Second Formal Meeting of the Conference Will be Held To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Secretary Bayard entertained a party of gentlemen this evening at dinner to meet Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Sir Charles Tupper. The other guests were Senator Ingalls, Secretary Fairchild, Secretary Lamar, Postmaster-General Vilas, Mr. Putnam, Sir Lionel Sackville-West, the British Minister; Gen. Cameron, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Bergne, Mr. Winter, Mr. Moore, Mr. Graham, Senator Edmunds, Senator Sherman and Mr. Angell.

The remainder of the Commissioners' party availed themselves of an invitation to participate in the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club at Welcker's."

After dinner the whole party attended a reception at the British Legation. This "At Home," one of the principal social events of the season, was kindly given by Sir Lionel and Miss West in honor of Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Chamberlain. The second formal meeting of the Conference will be held to-morrow at which matters will be advanced another stage.

The report of the Postmaster General shows the receipts from postal sources during last year to have been $49,000,000 an increase of 1 per cent. over the previous year. The expenditure was $53,000,000, showing an increase of but 3 per cent. It is thought that at the end of the current fiscal year there will be a surplus in the department which the authorities attribute to the increased business caused by the adoption of what is virtually the "penny postage." The establishment of a postal telegraph is now being agitated, and is likely to come before Congress in a practical form this session. A prominent Congressman, who was interviewed last evening, said: "I can't see how a postal telegraph would be centralizing the power of the Government, because the people themselves would control it. I call it centralizing the power of the Government when these important adjuncts of the people are farmed out to corporations. I believe the question will receive a good deal of agitation in this Congress, and when the people come to realize the importance of the subject they will be in favor of the Government taking control of the telegraph.

SUNDAY ROW IN LIMERICK.

The Police Put an End to a Treasonable Demonstration.

LIMERICK, Nov. 27.—An attempt made in this city to-day to hold a demonstration in honor of the Manchester martyrs, Allen, Larkin and O'Brien, was suppressed by the police. The unveiling of a statue to commemorate the hanging of the men was set down as a portion of the program. Fearing interference with the statue a guard surrounded it during the night. Mr. McInerney of New York, who had been chosen to preside at the demonstration, was on the ground and addressed the people. The police then drew their batons and made an onslaught upon the crowd. This was answered by stone-throwing. The crowd was dispersed. Subsequently wherever groups were found assembling the police charged upon them and seized their flags. In these encounters a number of people were hurt. Troops now occupy the thoroughfares. The Mayor and other municipal officers are actively engaged in quieting the people.

A serious disturbance occurred here to-night. The crowd stoned and hooted the police who tried to clear the streets with batons and bayonets but met with great resistance. Many civilians and constable were injured. The wounded men were conveyed to the hospital. The police acted in a reckless manner. The windows of the hotel on the streets where the trouble occurred were filled with onlookers. Many of these persons taunted the police, who replied by throwing staffs and stones, breaking a large number of windows. Thirty persons had their wounds dressed at the hospital. At 1 o'clock to-night the town was quiet.

Hanlan Defeated.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 26.—Beach has beaten Hanlan again, and sporting men on this part of the globe are exuberant with delight. The struggle was an exciting one from start to finish. Beach caught the water first, and quickly gained a little more than a boat length. Hanlan was right on the Australian's heels and, although the former was never passed he succeeded in reaching the finish line only two lengths ahead of the Canadian.

Hanlan had free scope and fair play to-day. Beach never appeared in better form. He was cheered enthusiastically by thousands of people on the river banks along the course. Beach's victory to-day gives him the undisputed claim to the championship of the world.

Finish of the Philadelphia Walking Match.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—The 142 hour go as-you-please race ended to-night shortly before 10 o'clock, with Littlewood, the Englishman, in first place, nearly forty miles ahead of his nearest competitor. The Englishman early this morning abandoned his expressed intention of trying to beat the world's record of 610 miles and jogged along easily through out the day. The only feature of interest to-night was Elson's successful effort to reach 500 miles. His last few hours on the track, however, were rather a distressing sight. The old man was a physical wreck and but for the kindly aid of Albert, who remained on the track and walked around with him, it is believed he would have given up before he reached the desired goal. He completed the 500 miles at 9.30 o'clock, and then wobbled around an extra lap. Littlewood will receive about $2200 as his share of the gate receipts and entrance fees, Albert about $1200, Panchot $600, Noremac $450 and Elson about $300. The management's share of the profits is about $4000. The following are the scores of the five men at the finish: Little wood 569 miles 1 lap, Albert 530 miles, Pancho 511 miles 9 laps, Noremac 501 miles 6 laps Elson 500 miles 1 miles.

Killed On the Spot.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The Strasburg Post says that a tragic incident occurred there. A woman named Louise, Hauter was taken by soldiers into the barracks at that place, and was found and arrested by the officer of the guard. The patrol was ordered to take her to the police station. On the way thither the woman tried to escape, when the patrol shot and killed her on the spot. The people are incensed at the murder, and the papers demand the trial of the officer of the patrol.

THE SHEPPARD CASE.

The Defendant Will Read a Statement in Court To-Day.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side) was filled to overflowing yesterday morning with lawyers, priests and officers of the Sixty-fifth Regiment and hundreds of prominent French Canadians of the city to witness the proceedings in the Sheppard rule for contempt of court. Mr. Donald Macmaster, Q.C., represented the prisoner. On his motion the case was adjourned till Monday, when Mr. Sheppard will make a voluntary statement explaining his contempt of court.

Mr. Sheppard was admitted to bail, himself in $400 and two sureties, both employes of The Mail, in $200 each. He has been hard at work all day on the statement, which he will read in court to-morrow morning.

French Canadian Feeling.

From La Patrie, Montreal.

After two years' litigation, having exhausted all the legal and extra-legal subtleties, and tried to arouse the Province of Ontario against us, Sheppard is obliged to cave in and admit that if the French Canadians have nothing more to their credit they possess at least a big share of stubbornness. For the last two years Sheppard has gloried in aggravating the insults he had showered upon the 65th and the French Canadians. He went to Buffalo lately and has caused to be published the worst infamies concerning our race. Not a day has passed but those who wanted to obtain justice have received insulting letters from him or his friends. All this must be wiped out and Sheppard will have to settle the score. This time he will have to acknowledge in his best handwriting that he is a base slanderer, and, what is more galling to him, that the French Canadians have come out first best.

From La Presse, Montreal.

Mr. Sheppard is on the era of reaping what he has sown. His public declaration that the French Canadians have ruined him is an appeal to fanaticism. He poses as a victim to get financial help. He has sown fanaticism and to-day he is trying to gather his harvest. Fanaticism has been the cause of his ruin, not litigation. He thought of making money with that war-cry, but he made a mistake. His journal fell into disrepute, and his readers who were not imbued with fanaticism have stopped reading it. This is a lesson to fanatics of all kinds.

From L'Etendard, Montreal.

We have the honor at last of having the illustrious Sheppard of Toronto in the precincts of our city. It appears that our officers have succeeded in capturing the clever dodger. He will have to retract or pay up.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL.

No Appointments Yet Made to Fill the Vacancies on the Ontario Bench.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—There was a meeting of Council yesterday afternoon, but it is understood that no appointment was made to fill either of the vacancies on the Ontario Bench.

Judge Benson has been appointed Revising Officer for the East and West Ridings of Northumberland, in place of ex-Judge Clark.

The Commercial Unionists will soon have a chance to show their strength or weakness in East Northumberland, as the writ for a new election has been issued. Nominations on Dec. 15 and polling on Dec. 22. Mr. Ketchum, who was returning officer at the general election, will act again.

The Marine Department was advised yesterday by its agent at Quebec that both the lightships at the Traverse had been forced to quit their moorings on account of ice and seek shelter in Les Eboulements Bay, where they will probably winter.

The Government steamer Napoleon is now at the Traverse to render all possible assistance to outward bound vessels.

Mayor Mowat of Regina, Mr. D. W. Bole, President of the Board of Trade, and Mr. N. F. Davin, M.P., had interviews yesterday with the Ministers of Public Works and Agriculture with reference to the completion of the new jail and the erection of a building for immigrants at Regina. The deputation will proceed to Montreal in the morning to interview the C. P. R. authorities with reference to making a new station south of the town, which would serve as a union depot for the C. P. R., the Regina and Long Lake and the Southwestern Railways.

Hon. Mr. Foster was prevented from leaving for Washington yesterday by severe indisposition which it was feared was typhoid fever. To-day, however, his physician, Dr. Logan, says the fever was only the result of a cold and is not typhoid. It is expected that he will be sufficiently recovered to leave for Washington to-morrow.

Opening of the Roumanian Chambers.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 27.—The Chambers were opened to-day. The speech from the throne was read by the King in person. He said that Roumania maintained good relations with all the Powers. In spite of the trouble near the frontier Roumania had kept out of the conflict and had gained increased strength and confidence on all sides. The army had been strongly developed and the financial position of the country was satisfactory. The King announced that an important work, the construction of a bridge over the Danube to connect with Kustendje is about to be begun.

No Disturbance in London.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—This city was quiet to-day. There was no attempt to hold any meetings in Trafalgar-square. A small number of persons assembled in Hyde Park, but good order was preserved.

BISMARCK AND THE CZAR.

THE EFFORT TO FIND THE AUTHORS OF THE FORGED LETTERS.

Certain Officials at the Court of Denmark Suspected of Having Been the Channels for the Transmission of the Bogus Documents.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The truth of the revelations which associate Orleanist intrigues with the forgeries which Prince Bismarck denounced to the Czar continues to be questioned by the Progressist papers and by certain court organs. The Vossiche Zeitung leads in asking for definite information as to what documents were forged and who were the forgers. The Kreuz Zeitung expresses doubt of the possibility of any Berlin court persons ages being concerned in deluding the Czar in regard to Prince Bismarck's foreign policy.

The diplomatic circles here do not share in this incredulity. It is recognized that the disclosures of The Cologne Gazette are of necessity vague, and that it will be difficult for Prince Bismarck to take open measures against the culprits, as he did in the case of Count von Arnim. No official in the Foreign Office is implicated, nor any one within Prince Bismarck's power to publicly punish. The dispatches which were laid before the Czar consisted of semi-diplomatic papers and private letters emanating from the Courts of Wurtemburg, Oldenburg and Saxe-Coburg. The letters, which extended from a time prior to Prince Ferdinand's candidature in Bulgaria to the time of the Czar's residence in Fredensborg, quoted pretended despatches from Bismarck.

Baron Jomini, a trusted adviser of the Czar and a strong Panslavist, is believed to have been used as the medium to place before the Czar the earliest letters giving fraudulent extracts from Bismarck's dispatches. Officials of the court of Denmark are suspected of having been the channels for the transmission of the later bogus documents which led the Czar to break the arranged interview with Emperor William at Stettin. Neither the Comte de Paris nor the Orleanist chiefs are directly involved in the intrigues, but members of the Orleans family who are related to the Danish and the other courts abovementioned are believed to be the sources of deception. The intrigue aimed to persuade the Czar that Bismarck, while affecting the neutrality of Germany towards Bulgaria, privately initiated and supported Prince Ferdinand.

The political importance of this discovery has been overrated. It may tend to peace in helping to disabuse the Czar's mind of the impression that the German policy is two faced; but it cannot affect the policy of the triple alliance in resisting Russian aggression in Bulgaria, nor alter permanently the unfriendly relations between Germany and Russia, which are dependent upon the cessation of the anti-German agitation in Russia.

The Chancellor's Anger.

PESTH, Nov. 26.—The Pesther-Lloyd says the interview between Prince Bismarck and the Czar was a dramatic one. Prince Bismarck was scarcely able to restrain his passion. The Czar assured the German Chancellor that he desired peace, and did not intend to attack Germany or take part in any coalition against her. Prince Bismarck declared that whoso ever wished peace must not attack Germany's allies. He presented the casus foederis clearly to the Czar, who admitted that Prince Bismarck's views were not new to him, and added that his declarations regarding Germany applied equally to Austria.

The Cause of Bismarck's Passion.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The passion shown by Prince Bismarck in his interview with the Czar here was on account of his learning of the receipt by the Russian Government of forged letters purporting to be signed by himself in regard to the relations between the two governments. It was after the Czar had heard the explanation of the matter by Prince Bismarck that he gave him the assurance spoken of by the Pesther-Lloyd.

Copies of the Forgeries.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—The National Gazette states that the Czar has forwarded to Prince Bismarck the originals of the forged documents containing what purported to be the Prince's sentiments toward Russia.

The War Feeling in Russia.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—All practical measures proceeding in Russia show no cessation of the war feeling. Troops are daily arriving at Warsaw from the interior and pass toward the frontier. They will go into winter quarters along the Vistula and the railways.

The Moscow Gazette to-day, in an article on the relations between England and Russia continues the attack upon Germany, and invites England to abandon her jealousy of Russia regarding India, come to a thorough understanding with Russia upon all questions and turn her attention to Germany as a dangerous competitor of England by land and sea.

THE HERITAGE GIVEN.

BY THE SCOTS OF OLD TO THEIR CHILDREN.

Sermon Preached by the Rev. E. F. Torrance, Before the Members of the St. Andrew's Society.

The Rev. E. F. Torrance preached the annual sermon to the members of the St. Andrew's Society in St. Paul's Church on Sunday evening. He took his text from St. John, iv, 37 and 38.—"And herein is that saying true, one soweth, and another reapeth. I send ye to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labor: other men labored and ye are come into their labors." These words, he said, formed part of the reply which the Lord Jesus made to his deciples on their return from Sychar whether they had gone to procure food. A short time before the deciples had left Jesus sitting at Jacob's Well weary with the journey which he had taken under a hot eastern sun, and had gone to the city to buy food. But in the interval between their departure and return he had been mysteriously supplied with food for he did not desire to partake of it that was brought from Sychar. He said unto them "I have had meet to eat that ye know not of." Thinking that he was referring to food they enquired one of another who had brought it till he explained that his meat was to do the will of Him that sent Him and to finish his work. The words about sowing and reaping following were suggested by the approach of a company of Samaritans Jesus said: "Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. And he that gathereth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together. And herein is that saying true one soweth and another reapeth." Jesus' sowing was in the heart of the Samaritan woman. The deciples were to reap soon after in making converts in that place.

"One soweth and another reapeth." These words had often been uttered as a complaint. The truth it enunciated was held to be one of the anomalies of the world. The preacher gave examples of the apparent unequal distribution of this world's goods and of the great enterprises accomplished with expense of much labor only that the fruits of such toil should be enjoyed by others. And yet this principle was inseparable from our existence. It was absolutely necessary to progress that some should reap the fruit of others' toil. The father's earnest attention to business provided means for educational and social advantages for the children. The nation reaps the harvest of the statesman's labor. A general plans a campaign, his soldiers meet the foe in battle, and the country's enemies are dispersed. The people reap the harvest of the general's labors. This truth appeared not only to an interdependence between men, but it appeared likewise to generations. We reaped the harvest the labor of generations past as generations to come would reap the harvest of ours. He pointed out how far advanced the people of this age were advanced in the knowledge of all branches of human thought, the merest school boy now being possessed of more learning than the sage of past generations. Why was this? Because there were brighter intellects now? No; but because the succeeding generations had treasured up the labors of the preceeding. It was the same in moral and political reforms. Many men who brought forward great schemes for the good of mankind were reproached and heaped with obloquy. They gained no personal benefit. But afterwards their schemes were brought into use to the emancipation of the race. Wilberforce, Cobden and Clarkson were mentioned as men to whom the present age owed gratefulness. The same principle prevailed in the realms of literature. Some sowed and others reaped. But persons who did little acts of kindness and usefulness perhaps did as much good to the human race as those famous in science, literature, statecraft or invention. Where were these? In their houses they were to be found. Good mothers instilling the principles of truth and righteousness in their children, many persons of all classes and of all professions doing good to their fellow men. Their little acts of kindness and unselfishness exercised a powerful and far reaching influence which none could despise. Great coral reefs stretched miles upon miles in the ocean. They were built little by little. The beaver's dam was built of little things. And those pyramids which tower colossal on the Lybian desert were built by degrees, as were those cathedrals of Europe upon which the eyes of the world gazed with wonder and delight.

In the second part of the sermon he dwelt with the application of the words of the text to the disciples. Jesus referred to the Old Testament prophets and himself as the sowers and the disciples. They had labored and the disciples were now to reap. Even during Jesus' ministry there were comparatively few converts. It was for those that came after to gather the fruit. He went on to speak of what the early Scots did and how much those present owed to them. He gave a brief history of the religions prevailing in Scotland. Christianity flourished in Scotland before the Romish Church sent out her missionaries. The worship was pure and was characterized with primative simplicity. The college at Iona flourished in 563, A.D., and meetings of presbyteries were regularly convened. Anon the place was destroyed by the Norsemen, but it was not until the 13th century that the primative forms of worship were blotted out by Rome. He cited the numerous attempts made by the two Charles and James II, to make the Scots bend to form and ceremony to which attempts they always presented a bold front and won in triumph. They bore their prosecutions to which they were subjected but in the end their cause was upheld. By the struggles of these early heros the pure primative form of worship was restored to Scotland and was practised to this day. This generation owed that of the past inestemable gratitude for, by going to the extent of life sacrifice, handing down to them liberty to worship as their conscience dictated. He urged upon his hearers to see that they handed down a purity what they now enjoyed; to give to their children a heritage worthy the generation.

In conclusion he hoped that all their might be among the sheaves to be gathered at the last great harvest and that both he that soweth and he that reapeth might rejoice to-gether.

FROM THE OTHER SIDE.—We have received from the Toronto News Company the copy of the Canadian copyright edition of 'From the Other Side," by Olive Vareoe, published by the National Publishing Co., Toronto. It is a very interesting book, with a good plot and well-sustained characters, introducing Cornish and Devon folklone. The printing is clear and easily read.

ADRIFT IN THE WILDS.—No. 3 of the "Boys' Home Library" is. "Adrift in the Wilds," by Edward S. Ellis. It is a pleasant story of the adventures of two boys who were left on a wild California shore through the burning of a vessel. The "Home Library" aims at giving interesting and healthy reading for boys at a low price, and in this number it has succeeded well.

ENGLISH ARBITRATION COMMISSIONERS DISCOURTEOUSLY TREATED.

A Discordant Element in an Audience at Chickering Hall in New York on Saturday Night Makes Itself Unpleasantly Felt by its Demonstrations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A large audience gathered at Chickering Hall this evening to listen to the speeches from some members of the deputation from the British Parliament who have come to this country to urge international arbitration. The meeting was presided over by Mayor Hewitt, who expressed his heartiest approval of their visitors' errand. He thought that the time for war had passed, and declared the maintenance of large standing armies the greatest evil of the times. In case of internal dissension, however, he thought that no outside power had any business to interfere, and in case of civil war international interference was simply an impertinence. This opinion was greeted with hearty applause, but some hisses were also heard, and as the meeting wore on the presence of a discordant element became more apparent.

Sir George Campbell was the first speaker After some preliminary remarks he went on to explain the object of his journey, when some one called out: "What about the Alabama?" The question provoked a storm of hisses, but the speaker turned off the interruption very happily, saying that no better illustration of the value of arbitration could have been adduced than the Alabama episode "That experience," said he, "was one calculated to make both parties try again. I think that we Britishers now all admit that our conduct on that occasion was very shabby, and even if we did have to pay rather excessive damages, why a jury is always likely to give swingeing damages where they think there was very great blame."

Referring to the present discussion regarding the fisheries, the speaker mentioned Mr Chamberlain as an honest and satisfactory man, a statement which provoked a storm of hisses. Those in the audience who were not hissing at once began applauding, and this contest lasted for more than a minute. Sir George somewhat mollified the discordant element by remarking that he was in the politics camp opposed to Mr. Chamberlain, but his further statement that for his present mission he considered that gentleman satisfactory, provoked more hisses still. In fact, Sir George was subject to slight interruptions to the end of his address.

Mr. Frederick R. Coudert of this city indorsed the plan proposed, and then Mr. Halley Stewart, M.P., spoke. After speaking of the number of peers and commoners who signed the memorial, he added: "I believe the Irish members would vote for us."

"Not one," shouted a voice from the audience.

"Well, I know the Irish members. Ten of them worked for me recently when I was elected to Parliament—[tremendous applause]—and I know that many of them, and Gladstone also—[applause]—gave us their sympathy And I believe that the Irish people will join with the English and American people in favoring at least an appeal to reason and conscience before resorting to the sword. But I have been asked why we don't favor arbitration in the Irish question, and I ask you if you would have submitted the question that caused your civil war to arbitration by France, or Germany, or England. Even though it should lead to civil war, we cannot tolerate foreign interference in the Irish question. I certainly have done something for Ireland. I am a Home Ruler, and if there was a vote on the question to-day I believe the great majority of the English people would declare for Home Rule." [Applause].

Mr. W. R. Cremer, Member of Parliament and Secretary of the Workingmen's Peace Union, in a brief address, said that quarreling nations always confer, but at the wrong end of the trouble.

Resolutions were adopted appointing a committee of five, with Mayor Hewitt as its chairman, to urge our Government to formulate a treaty with Great Britain pledging both nations to submit their differences to arbitration and to request Congress to take measures to call a convention of the nations of North and South America, and such others as may choose to join, to form an international court of arbitration.

DISTRICT NOTES.

Midland District News Condensed from Contemporaries.

The English Church parsonage at Penitanguishene was burned on Monday.

An English church, that promised to be a neat and beautiful building, is being built at Coldwater.

G. Swantor, fell from the roof of a new shed at Fenelon Falls on Saturday and sustained severe injuries.

Mr. John Conley, of Madoc, while at salmon Lake, deer hunting, killed a very handsome owl, of pecular color, being spotted—white and black.

On the 29th of October, on the North River, Wm. Reid, teamster, skidded thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine feet and built one skidway in eight hours and a half.

A lad had the four fingers of his right hand badly cut by a circular saw in the Box Factory, Waubeshene last week. He was attempting to oil the saw while it was running.

Gilmour and Co's shingle mills at Trenton, was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning, Nov. 20th. The mill had stopped for the season on Saturday night. Loss $8,000.

Government engineers were at Fenelon Falls a few days ago making arrangements for the new railway swing bridge. It is understood that the work is to begin in a few days.

Mrs. Malcolm McArthur, of Beaverton, met with a painful accident the other day by getting a needle run into her hand quite a distance and then broken off.

St. John Presbyterian Church, Belleville, has placed in front of the church a neatly painted sign-board, giving the name of the church, hours of service and the pastor's name.

Frank Taylor was arrested by Constable Clarke of Orellia on Thanksgiving day for stealing a horse from T. Mecham, of New Lowell, and selling it to Neil Buchanan, Medonte. At the Toronto Police Court he was charged with stealing other horses and sent to the Penitentiary for five years.

George R. Gray, the Coldwater athlete, broke the record of putting the shot on the New York Athletic Club grounds on Saturday. He put the shot a distance of forty-three feet eleven inches. The former best record was forty-three feet five inches.

Wm. Magill, son of Mr. James Magill, of Burton, disappeared from home on Wednesday evening, Nov. 15th. Search was made for him by large parties on the following days but their search was in vain until Monday morning, when he was found dead about two miles from Pontypool, close to the C. P. R. It is supposed that he died from weakness, having been without food for several days.

THOMAS MENZIES
AGENT G. T. R., GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"Yes, sir! Lord Montbarry knew me, like all the other members of the family, when I was at school on the estate in Ireland. If he could have done it, he would have protected my poor dear husband. But he was helpless himself in the hands of my lady and the baron—and the only kind thing he could do was to provide for me in my widowhood, like the true nobleman he was!"

"A very pretty explanation!" said Mr. Troy. "What did your visitors from the insurance offices think of it?"

"They asked if I had any proof of my husband's death."

"And what did you say?"

"I said, 'I give you better than proof, gentlemen; I give you my positive opinion.'"

"That satisfied them, of course?"

"They didn't say so in words, sir. They looked at each other—and wished me good morning."

"Well, Mrs. Ferrari, unless you have some more extraordinary news for me, I think I shall wish you good morning, too. I can take a note of your information (very startling information, I own); and, in the absence of proof, I can do no more."

"I can provide you with proof, sir—if that is all you want," said Mrs. Ferrari, with great dignity. "I only want to know, first, whether the law justifies me in doing it. You may have seen in the fashionable intelligence of the newspapers, that Lady Montbarry has arrived in London, at Newbury's hotel. I propose to go and see her."

"The deuce you do! May I ask for what purpose?"

Mrs. Ferrari answered in a mysterious whisper: "For the purpose of catching her in a trap! I shan't send in my name—I shall announce myself as a person on business, and the first words I say to her will be these: 'I come, my lady, to acknowledge the receipt of the money sent to Ferrari's widow.' Ah! you may well start, Mr. Troy! It almost takes you off your guard, doesn't it? Make your mind easy, sir; I shall find the proof that everybody asks me for in her guilty face. Let her only change color by the shadow of a shade—let her eyes only drop for half an instant—I shall discover her! The one thing I want to know is, does the law permit it?"

"The law permits it," Mr. Troy answered, gravely; "but whether her ladyship will permit it, is quite another question. Have you really courage enough, Mrs. Ferrari, to carry out this notable scheme of yours? You have been described to me, by Miss Lockwood, as rather a nervous, timid sort of person—and, if I may trust my own observation, I should say you justify the description."

"If you had lived in the country, sir, instead of living in London," Mrs. Ferrari replied, "you would sometimes have seen even a sheep turn on a dog. I am far from saying that I am a bold woman—quite the reverse. But when I stand in that wretch's presence and think of my murdered husband, the one of us two who is likely to be frightened is not me. I am going there now, sir. You shall hear how it ends. I wish you good morning."

With those brave words the courier's wife gathered her mantle about her and walked out of the room.

Mr. Troy smiled—not satirically, but compassionately. "The little simpleton!" he thought to himself. "If half of what they say of Lady Montbarry is true, Mrs. Ferrari and her trap have but a poor prospect before them. I wonder how it will end!"

All Mr. Troy's experience failed to forewarn him of how it did end.

CHAPTER X.

In the meantime Mrs. Ferrari held to her resolution. She went straight from Mr. Troy's office to Newbury's hotel.

Lady Montbarry was at home, and alone. But the authorities of the hotel hesitated to disturb her when they found that the visitor declined to mention her name. Her ladyship's new maid happened to cross the hall while the matter was still in debate. She was a Frenchwoman, and, on being appealed to, settled the question in the swift, easy, rational French way. "Madame's appearance was perfectly respectable. Madame might have reasons for not mentioning her name which miladi might approve. In any case there being no orders forbidding the introduction of a strange lady, the matter clearly rested between madame and miladi. Would madame, therefore, be good enough to follow miladi's maid upstairs?"

In spite of her resolution, Mrs. Ferrari's heart beat as if it would burst out of her bosom, when her conductress led her into an antercom, and knocked at a door opening into a room beyond. But it is remarkable that persons of sensitively nervous organization are the very persons who are capable of forcing themselves (apparently by the exercise of a spasmodic effort of will) into the performance of acts of the most audacious courage. A low, grave voice from the inner room said, "Come in." The maid, opening the door, announced, "A person to see you, miladi, on business," and immediately retired. In the one instant, while these events passed, timid little Mrs. Ferrari mastered her own throbbing heart; stepped over the threshold, conscious of her clammy hands, dry lips, and burning head; and stood in the presence of Lord Montbarry's widow, to all outward appearance as supremely self possessed as her ladyship herself.

It was still early in the afternoon, but the light in the room was dim. The blinds were drawn down. Lady Montbarry sat with her back to the windows, as if even the subdued daylight were disagreeable to her. She had altered sadly for the worse in her personal appearance, since the memorable day when Dr. Wybrow had seen her in his consulting room. Her beauty was gone—her face had fallen away to mere skin and bone; the contrast between her ghastly complexion and her steely glittering black eyes was more startling than ever. Robed in dismal black, relieved only by the brilliant whiteness of her widow's cap—reclining in a panther like suppleness of attitude on a little green sofa—she looked at the stranger who had intruded on her, with a moment's languid curiosity, then dropped her eyes again to the hand screen which she held between her face and the fire. "I don't know you," she said. "What do you want with me?"

Mrs. Ferrari tried to answer. Her first burst of courage had already worn itself out. The bold words she had determined to speak were living words still in her mind, but they died on her lips.

There was a moment of silence. Lady Montbarry looked round again at the speechless stranger. "Are you deaf?" she asked. There was another pause. Lady Montbarry quietly looked back again at the screen, and put another question, "Do you want money?"

"Money!" That one word roused the sinking spirit of the courier's wife. She recovered her courage; she found her voice. "Look at me, my lady, if you please," she said, with a sudden outbreak of audacity.

Lady Montbarry looked round for the third time. The fatal words passed Mrs. Ferrari's lips.

"I come, my lady, to acknowledge the receipt of the money sent to Ferrari's widow."

Lady Montbarry's glittering black eyes rested with steady attention on the woman who had addressed her in those terms. Not the faintest expression of confusion or alarm, not even a momentary flutter of interest stirred the deadly stillness of her face. She reposed as quietly, she held the screen as composedly as ever. The test had been tried, and had irretrievably, utterly failed.

There was another silence. Lady Montbarry considered with herself. The smile that came slowly and went away suddenly—the smile at once so sad and so cruel—showed itself on her thin lips. She lifted her screen, and pointed with it to a seat at the further end of the room. "Be so good as to take that chair," she said.

Helpless under her first bewildering sense of failure—not knowing what to say or what to do next—Mrs. Ferrari mechanically obeyed. Lady Montbarry, rising on the sofa for the first time, watched her with undisguised scrutiny as she crossed the room—then sank back into a reclining position once more. "No," she said to herself quietly, "the woman walks steadily: she is not intoxicated—the only other possibility is that she may be mad."

She had spoken loud enough to be heard. Stung by the insult, Mrs. Ferrari instantly answered her: "I am no more drunk or mad than you are!"

THE SIGN PAINTER'S WORK.

Interesting Information About the Advertisements We See on Fences.

"That man is a sign painter by trade," remarked a contractor, pointing to a man who was erecting a fence before a building that was to be torn down, "but he finds it pays better to put up fences where building is going on and let out the spaces to advertisers. The big profits in the business have brought about a healthy competition, and everything is now reduced to a fine art. I remember a few years ago this sign painter came to me and offered to put up a new fence free of charge in front of a building I was erecting providing he could use the boards for advertising purposes. I jumped at the offer and thought the man was a fool for making it. The shoe was on the other foot, however, for I should have received several hundred dollars to boot for the privilege.

"This man has brought the business down to a science. He has scores of agents scouring the city for eligible sites, as well as canvassers to drum up advertisements. His fences, which are very neat and attractive, are built in uniform sections and join together on the groove principle. An advertiser can thus have his announcement changed to different localities at will without going to the expense of having a new sign painted. The old method of building a new fence every time made this mode of advertising very expensive, and the lessees often lost money by being unable to let out all the spaces; but the cost is now reduced to a minimum by making the sections to slide in and out like the lid of a box.

"The rates, of course," he continued, "depend upon the location. A sign on Broadway costs the most, but many of the cross streets are nearly as desirable. The big advertisers make contracts by the year. Some of their signs are very elaborate. As soon as one building is finished they are put up elsewhere. The lessee who has a number of these contracts runs no risk in leasing a privilege, because he has his advertisers beforehand, and their signs are ready to slide into position. The first charge is made for the painting of the sign, and then so much per day for its use as an advertisement. The artistic appearance of the signs has improved very much since the introduction of the movable section, for enterprising houses no longer look upon it as extravagant to have trademarks or pictures of specialties correctly painted on a fence. These signs don't remain long in the same place. A building is soon put up in New York."—New York Evening Sun.

Interview on Matters of State.

When Napoleon III was prince president, one day the British ambassador, Lord Normanby, particularly wanted an interview on important business with the president, and was requested by an aide-de-camp to wait—just long enough to announce the visit. The ambassador did wait, grave and solemn in countenance, as became one who had come to talk on matters of state. Five minutes passed; Lord Normanby grew impatient; he heard stifled laughter in the next room, and, cautiously raising the hangings that masked the door, he saw Mrs. Howard, Lady Stanley, the Vicomtesse Pauline de Contades, two or three other ladies, the Duke of Cambridge and the prince president himself playing at blind man's buff, the prince being the blind man. Without a word Normanby advanced on tiptoe, the others keeping silence most discreetly, and tapped the presidential hand. "Oh! this time I've caught you; its Pauline!" exclaimed Louis, and pulling off the handkerchief, stood confronted with the ambassador. There was a general laugh at the incident, and the plenipotentiary joined in the game. Not a word of politics was breathed during the interview, but it lasted a couple of hours, and the quidnuncs of the bourse thought it must have been so important that the French funds that evening dropped 1 per cent.—The Argonaut.

A Few Verbal Snares.

The popularity of Peter Piper's celebrated peck of pickled peppers will probably never wane as a snare to catch the tongue that would fain be agile; but that test has formidable rivals. The following short sentences, as their author maintains, do wonders in baffling the ordinary powers of speech:

Gaze on the gay gray brigade.
The sea ceaseth, and it sufficeth us.
Say, should such a shapely sash shabby stitches show?
Strange strategic statistics.
Cassell's solicitor shyly slashes a sloe.
Give Grimes Jim's great gilt gig whip.
Sarah in a shawl shoveled soft snow slowly.
She sells sea shells.
A cup of coffee in a copper coffee cup.
Smith's spirit flask spilt Philip's sixth sister's fifth squirrel's skull.
The Leith police dismisseth us.
Mr. Fisk wished to whisk whisky.—Youth's Companion.

Russian Demand for Apples.

Montreal trade men have received a cablegram from Russia asking for particulars concerning the Canadian crop of apples. If Russia becomes a buyer of apples in that market it is evident that the varieties she will require must be the best long keepers obtainable, as the journey will be a long one. Russets, Baldwins and Spitz would probably be among the best descriptions for export to Russia.—Boston Budget.

There are in Boston between 800 and 900 negroes who were born subjects of the British crown.

The railroads in southern Illinois are running water trains to meet the demand for water occasioned by the excessive drought.

"Did n't Know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel freaher and stronger to go through the summer."

The Battle Raging. The Great Slaughtering and Cutting of Prices in Dry Goods to be Continued

—AT—

THOS. KELLY'S

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practice to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price alone is no criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

The Canoe Trade.

The Ontario Canoe Company's factory is making good progress in keeping up with orders. At the end of last season the stock was reduced to almost nothing, so great was the demand for the Peterborough canoes. Just now the employees are working on an order from Rotterdam, Holland. The order consists of thirty canoes of nearly every kind made in the factory—Jumpers, Longitudinal, Folding, Decked, Sailing, etc. The consignment will be shipped in January. Prospects for the next season's trade are good. Letters from Victoria, B.C., and Halifax, N. S., and other places promise large orders in the spring.

Personal.

The Stirling News-Argus says that a change has been made in Stations Agents at Stirling, Mr. Wm. Casey, of Peterborough, having been appointed. He comes there it says, highly spoken of. Mr. Casey's friends in Peterborough will be pleased at the recognition of his abilities, by his appointment to this position.

Mr. M. J. O'Leary, nurseryman, has gone to Buffalo on business. He will be absent from town till Christmas.

Mr. J. A. Richardson, the well known railroader, was in town on Saturday.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says:—"The Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., pastor of a Peterborough Methodist Church, has been appointed to a professorship at Victoria College, Cobourg. The rev. gentleman is held in high esteem in this town and vicinity, being at one time pastor of the Division Street Methodist Church."

There is little change in Mr. A. Wilson's condition to-day.

Thomas Casey's Temerity.

When the Mrs. Gorman cake case was being tried this morning Thomas Casey was called. "Were you at Mrs. Gorman's on the night of the 8th?" asked Mr. Wood. "Don't know nuthin about it," said Thomas. "Answer my question, sir," said Mr. Wood. "Don't know nuthin about it." "Were you there on the night in question," mildly enquired the Magistrate. "Don't know nuthin about it." "If you don't answer the question I'll commit you to gaol for contempt of court." said his Worship. "All right, I can go," retorted the witness. The Magistrate explained to the witness that he might decline to answer the question if he thought his reply would be incriminating to himself. He asked the witness if he chose to take that ground. "Don't know nuthin' about it," again was answered and the Magistrate forthwith ordered the witness to be committed. The police officer took him by the arm and walked him out of court. While the warrant was being issued, however, the prisoner came to the conclusion that he would decline to answer on the ground that his answer might incriminate him.

Admission 15c. Children 10c.

TESTIMONIAL.

We the undersigned have seen the artistic works of Rev. J. T. Dowling and heard his explanatory lectures, have pleasure in expressing our high appreciation of his abilities as an artist and speaker, and of his extended knowledge of Biblical antiquities which could only have been gained by a life-long study and research. We have every confidence in recommending his entertainments as worthy the countenance of Christian people everywhere, trusting that a higher moral tone to church and pulpit entertainments may thus be encouraged and fostered in our land.

Forming a New County.

It is not improbable that within a very short period a new county will be added to the map of Ontario, formed out of the municipalities in the Muskoka district This section of country has been for some time attached to the County of Victoria for municipal purposes, while its political connection as far as polling and representation goes has been with the county of Simcoe The feeling has been growing for some time that a change in some respects was desirable, inasmuch as the County of Victoria, while called on to exercise a paternal care over the district, had to bear serious expenses called for in the direction of road, bridges and other conveniences. At the meeting of the Victoria Council, held at Lindsay last week, and closing on Saturday, the matter came up for discussion, representatives from the Muskoka municipalities expressing their views as in favour of the proposed change. As the result of the discussion a deputation was appointed to wait on the Attorney General and Members of the government at Toronto and press for the proposed separation. The deputation will consist of Mr. E.D. McEachern, Warden of the County, Mr. E. H. Hopkins, Deputy Reeve, Ops, Mr. D. Lownsbrough, Deputy Reeve, Mariposa, Mr. N. Heaslip, Reeve of Bexley, Mr. D. Cameron, Reeve of Woodville, and the members of the local house for the north and south Ridings, Messrs. W. Fell, and J. S Cruess. The reasons to be advanced by the deputation are that the Muskoka district is not connected or even adjacent to the County of Victoria and that the people are anxious to be set apart. Some local jealousy has been aroused between villages in the district ambitious to be created the new county town, and Bracebridge, Huntsville, and Gravenhurst are pushing their claims in this respect. No doubt the wishes of the people will be recognized—unless there should be serious obstacles in the way—and that a provisional form of county government will be allotted to the district.

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS.

Teachers of Ashburnham, Lakefield, Otonabee, Douro and Monaghan in Council.

At the last Teachers' Institute for the County of Peterborough a resolution was adopted providing for the holding of township conventions. In accordance with the resolution the townships of Otonabee, Douro and North Monaghan and the villages of Ashburnham and Lakefield, united and held a convention on Saturday, 26th Nov., in the Ashburnham Public School.

The attendance was not so large as it should have been, owing, no doubt, to the fact that this was their first meeting. Those present manifested great interest in the discussion. Mr. K. Mark, of Keene, occupied the chair and Mr. Matchett, of Otonabee, acted as Secretary.

MORNING SESSION.

After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, Mr. G. Rennie, of Allandale, was called upon to introduce to the Convention the subject, "The College of Preceptors." After the outline of the subject by Mr. Rennie an animated discussion took place, in which Messrs. Rooney and Rennie and the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw took part. At the close of the debate it was unanimously resolved to further postpone the discussion before definite action be taken on the scheme.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

"How to use the Readers" was the first subject taken up in the afternoon. The gentleman who was to introduce the subject not being present, Mr. Rooney gave his method of using the Readers, which seemed to meet with general approval. The discussion which took place on the subject showed that reading is not now, as it used to be, a neglected subject.

Perhaps no subject on the programme was more interesting than the third, "Difficulties in the School Room." This subject embraced difficulties between teachers and pupils and difficulties between teachers and parents. From the remarks of the teachers it would appear that every section has its own peculiar local difficulties. The opinions of the teachers on every matter brought up were freely given, and no teacher could leave without having learned something useful. This being the last subject on the programme, a very interesting and instructive meeting was brought to a close by singing "God Save the Queen."

NOTES.

Votes of thanks were tendered the chairman and secretary for the efficient manner in which they performed their duties.

The next meeting is to be held on the first Friday and Saturday in March. The committee to arrange the programme are Messrs. Rooney, of Ashburnham, and Campbell, of Otonabee, and Miss Beckett, of North Monaghan.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw was the only Trustee present. Mr. Bradshaw always takes an active part in any scheme for the advancement of the moral and intellectual welfare of the community.

Mr. J. Coyle Brown, Inspector, was unavoidably absenton account of sickness in his family.

MRS. GORMAN'S CAKE.

Some Naughty Boys Took it out of the Cellar.

Mrs. Mary Gorman had Bert Hudson, Geo. Barrett, John Daly, Tim Cronan, Danny Hoolihan and H. Welsh before the Magistrate this morning. She charged them with having stolen a cake and some preserves out of her cellar on the night of her daughter's wedding.

Bert Hudson was singled out to run the gauntlet first. He pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Mrs. Gorman was heard.

She said: The next morning I went down cellar—

MAGISTRATE—What morning?

Mrs. GORMAN—Why the morning after the wedding, of course.

MAGISTRATE—I don't know anything about this. Was it ten years ago or was it last week?

Mrs. GORMAN (stiffly)—It was on the 8th of November, sir.

The MAGISTRATE.—Well.

Mrs. GORMAN—I went down cellar and I found they had broken the window, sash and all.

The MAGISTRATE—Was the window there.

Mrs. GORMAN—No, sir, they took it away.

The MAGISTRATE—Then you don't know whether they broke it or not?

Mrs. GORMAN—No, sir.

MAGISTRATE—Well, you found your window—gone. Did you find your cake gone too?

Mrs. GORMAN—Yes, sir; and the preserves too.

Here the value of the cake was fixed at $1.50 Mrs. Gorman giving a full description of it. The witness went on to relate that the boys (she could swear it was these boys) were around her house that night blowing horns and tins, and making a noise, and firing off revolvers.

MAGISTRATE—Revolvers?

Mrs. GORMAN—Yes, indeed, sir.

MAGISTRATE—Was it a sort of a charivari?

Mrs. GORMAN—Indeed, sir, I don't know what it was, but they had their faces all blackened.

MAGISTRATE—Did you see them?

Mrs. GORMAN—No, sir, it was dark and I couldn't see them, but I was told so the next morning.

MAGISTRATE—Then you don't know whether it was these boys or whether they had their faces blackened or not?

Mr. GORMON—Well, I didn't see them, of course, but I'm sure it was these boys. And I wouldn't have said a word about it, but the next day Danny Hollihan came up to my door and gave sass and went around and was asking if there was any stray hens around. Indeed, now, it was no good that brought him around and his sass it provoked me.

Other witnesses were examined. It was proved that the boys were all at the charivari and had their faces black, and that they kicked up a noise. It was also proved that some of them said the cake was stale, but none of the boys were proved guilty of stealing it. The case was dismissed, the Magistrate warning the boys to mind their business in the future and not to appear before the court again.

BE SURE AND HEAR the celebrated lecturer, Rev. John E. Lanceley, in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Friday evening, this week, Dec. 2nd. Come in crowds. Silver collection in aid of Sunday School. 3deod127

Assault.

A charge of assault preferred by a boy, John Parker against two other boys, Albert Volois and T. Blodgett was here at the Police Court this morning. It was enlarged till Wednesday.

Marriage Vows.

At St. John's Church at half past seven o'clock this morning Mr. J. E. Sabine, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Miss Annie Perry, fourth daughter of the late Charles Perry, and grand-daughter of the late Hon. E. Perry, of Cobourg. The Rector, the Rev. J. W. B. Beck, performed the ceremony. The marriage was a private one, only the relatives of the contracting parties being present. Mr. and Mrs. Sabinel eft town this forenoon by the Canadian Pacific Railway for their new home in Buffalo, New York.

EACH AND ALL should go and hear "One Another" by the great orator Rev. John E. Lanceley, Friday evening, this week, in the Methodist Church, Charlotte street. 3deod127

A Big Business.

There has been a great boom at Cavanagh's horse market during the past few days. Since Friday there have been fifty-four horses bought and shipped away, the average price paid bein $100. The amount disbursed totals about $5,400. This morning eighteen fine horses were shipped to Mr. Marois, Montreal. Among the dozen and a half was a magnificent pair of heavy draught horses, bought from Mr. J.C. Hope, of Hope's Mills, Lang. They were both a beautiful brown and were one of the handsomest teams ever reared in the county. The price paid was something to encourage the raising of a better class of horses.

BUY "Patent Naps Taned" Buck Gloves from CLARK. Every pair warranted. d122

Brevities.

—Dennis Doherty, a vagrant, was committed to gaol for one month at the Police Court this morning.

—Collector Cummings is doing a better business every day. Up till three o'clock to-day the receipts were $2,229. The ratepayers have two more days to pay their debt to the corporation and save the 5 per cent.

—Cobough Sentinel-Star:—"Mr. Wm. Moyse, of Peterborough, who has been very ill for some months past, has so far recovered as to be able to make his mother and friends a visit in town."

—Mr. T. G. Hazlitt in grading up his property on Water street is using material taken from a lot on London street, near the river, cutting down the land in question and removing a land mark that dates back to the days of the oldest inhabitant.

—Order out the scrapers. The early snow plough leaves us clean sidewalks. It is essential—and likewise comfortable—that slush should be cleaned off the walks as well as snow. Will the S. or B. committee take action? Should they do so no serious charge of being a little too previous will be made.

—This is one of the signs of the times. It is in one of the windows of Bowse's trade palace. The letters on the sign are in constant vibration and the people wonder how it works. It is but another way of calling in the service of electricity. A small battery placed behind the sign does the business.

—Thus quoth an Ashburnham philosopher, when rallied on his prospects of having to foot a share of the Grand Junction bonus in the way of increased taxes: "My boy, we see our way out of the difficulty. Should this tax come on us as a part of the County we'll annex to Peterborough, an escape infliction." A plausible scheme, but mighty poor logic.

—The extension of Stewart street, Ashburnham, has opened up a lot of available property for building. On some lots purchased, Mr. W. Fitzgerald has now built two houses and is arranging to put up two others. Mr. Wm. Wand has put up two good sized dwellings, and on the ground that was for some years used as the public pound, material is being delivered for building purposes. Property in that vicinity is advancing in value, and enterprising people who are looking out for a home are building well upon the side of "Shaws Hill," a portion of the McKellar estate.

A Feat of Legs.

A young German officer, rather new to his work, was drilling a squad of raw recruits, and gave the word of command: "Lift the right leg!" One of the soldiers by mistake raised his left leg, so that it joined closely to the right of that of his neighbor, "What jackanapes has lifted both legs?" exclaimed the officer.—Fliegende Blatter.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

THE COUNCIL FOR 1888.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR.—If the temperance people of Peterborough are desirous of securing a Council favorable to the Scott Act during the ensuing year they will turn their attention to the election of Councillors suitable for that purpose. To elect a temperance Mayor is not going to help them, because the Mayor is but the mouthpiece of the Councillors, who really rule and who really administer the business of the town. The Mayor can do nothing for himself but must wait and carry out the commands of the Councillors, who are the only masters of the situation. If the people would elect such Councillors who would carry out their wishes in respect to the Scott Act they will have done all that is necessary to carry out their wishes, and they will succeed. But if they turn their attention to the election of the Mayor, imagining that if they succeed they will accomplish the object of their desires, they will find themselves very much mistaken, for they will be no nearer success then than they are now. Therefore let them go to work in the right direction. Let them elect a majority of temperance Councillors and then they will have a Council who will see to the proper carrying out of the Scott Act, and the Mayor, as the officer of the Council, will be obliged to obey the orders of the Council. What good can a Scott Act Mayor do against a majority of anti-Scott Act Councillors? Just nothing at all. But a majority of Scott Act Councillors can do a great deal. Let the people think this matter over properly, and I am sure they will agree with me, that all their hopes and all the power to do good, lies in the selection of proper Councillors. And let them remember that by trying for too much, that is, the election of the Mayor and Councillors together, they may lose all. They must not try for too much.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It smoothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, Relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

AFTER THE IRISH EDITORS

THEY WILL BE SUMMONED FOR PUBLISHING ILLEGAL REPORTS.

A Dublin Paper's Comment on the Treatment Accorded Mr. Mandeville in Prison—Why Messrs. Cox and Sheedy, M.P.'s, Have Evaded Arrest.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—After the trial of Lord Mayor Sullivan, editor of The Nation, for printing reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the National League the Government will proscribe a number of editors of other papers for publishing similar reports.

The Freeman's Journal declares that the consigning of Mr. Mandeville in a stinking cell at Tullamore prison for refusing to clean utensils or exercise in company with ordinary criminals is as scandalous as the worst outrages committed in Bombay or Neapolitan prisons.

At Mr. Dillon's Request.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—John Dillon writes that it is owing to his urgent request that Messrs. Cox and Sheehy, members of Parliament, have evaded arrest since the warrants were issued for them. He says both of these gentlemen have given valuable assistance in combining the tenants to demand reduced rents.

KICK ABOUT THE GATE RECEIPTS.

The Philadelphia Affair—Troy Wants to Come Into the Association.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The five pedestrians who remained on the track to the finish in last week's go-as-you-please race were to-day given their share of the gate money. The total amount of the gate receipts was $5337. One half of this amount was divided among the five prize winners, 45 per cent. to the first, 25 per cent. to the second, 15 per cent. to the third, 10 per cent. to the fourth and 5 per cent. to the fifth man. In addition to this the entrance fees of $1300 (each of the thirteen starters having paid in $100) was divided among the first three winners. Of this amount Littlewood received 60 per cent., Albert 30 and Panchot 10.

When the money was divided much dissatisfaction prevailed among the pedestrians as regards the gate receipts. They expressed themselves feelingly, and said they felt assured that the receipts at the gate would far exceed $10,000. Poor old man Elson, who succeeded in making the 500 miles, allowing him to receive a portion of the gate money, is left penniless, foot-sore and broken-hearted. His backer, who paid his entrance fee of $100, took every penny of the $133 allotted to Elson for making the 500 miles, notwithstanding the old man's protest. The backer declared that what Elson earned was not sufficient to reimburse him for what he had expended on the old man.

POWDERLY'S THREAT TO RESIGN.

His Opponents Say that It Is an Old Game of the Master Workman.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—The letter of Mr. Powderly, declaring that he cannot re-consider his resolution to retire from the head of the Knights of Labor at the expiration of his present term, is looked upon by his friends here as a masterly piece of writing and one that ought to put to shame the rebels who are trying to break up the order and oust him and his associates in the General Executive Board. In the camp of the rebels it is looked upon as a trick and a bid for another term and $5000 a year. Charles F. Seib, secretary of the Provincial Committee of the rebels, said that the letter was nothing but an old game of Powderly's. "It's an old trick of his," said he, "this resigning dodge. He wants to call out resolutions urging him to stay, then place himself in the hands of his friends and sacrifice himself another year and draw his salary and serve the masters he is serving now to the injury of the cause of labor."

FIRE IN A MINE.

Several Hundred Men Rescued From a Blazing Colliery.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—An explosion occurred this morning in the Abernant Colliery, Aberdare, while 500 men were in the pit. The winding gear gave way and at first it appeared that none of the miners could make their escape. During the day, however, 220 got out through an old working. The others are still entombed. Search parties have so far been unable to reach them. There are hopes that all are alive.

A later despatch says the entombed miners were all taken out safely this afternoon.

AN ANARCHIST MEETING.

Cooper Union, New York, Crowded with Sympathizers with Lawlessness.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Cooper Union was filled to overflowing to-night with people who sympathized with the Chicago Anarchists who were hanged. The meeting had been called by the Trades' Federation and in behalf of the windows and orphans of the recently executed men. It was an Anarchists' meeting through and through. There were red ribbons on the women, red neckties and hat bands on the men. There was a red and black flag back of the stage and portraits of the hanged Anarchists were displayed draped in black. The police were present in force, but the meeting was not interrupted.

THE CROWN PRINCE.

The Glandular Swelling Decreasing and His Condition More Hopeful.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The weather at San Remo is fine. The Crown Prince took a long drive to-day. A new treatment of the Prince's case is being tried. A part of the regimen is the absolute exclusion of sugar. His condition is now considered hopeful. The submaxillary glandular swelling which formed before the recent attack of œdema of the glottis is now decreasing.

A VARIETY OF EVIDENCE.

YESTERDAY'S SITTING OF THE LABOR COMMISSION.

A Librarian, Physician, Journalist, Blacksmith, Printer and Carriage Builder Heard From—Long Hours and Defective Ventilation—The Cause of Disease in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.

More evidence, and that of a varied kind, was given at yesterday's sittings of the Labor Commission than on any previous day. Librarian, physician, journalist, blacksmith, printer and carriage-builder contributed their quota, and in the evening the public were represented by one or two spectators. There is now a long list of summoned witnesses, and the Commission will have ample work for many days to come.

Mr. James Bain, jr., Public Librarian, was the first witness. The Free Library was established in 1883, and is supported by city rates, rents, fees and fines. All classes patronize the library, and amongst these readers there would be 5000 mechanics. In the library are 15,000 volumes on arts and manufactures and in the reading room a full supply of papers of interest to the various classes of workmen. The reference library contained 1500 standard works and the patent library contained records of all patents taken out in Great Britain and America.

Mr. Bain described the efforts he had made to induce classes of workmen to attend the library in the winter evenings. He classified the trades as far as possible and laid before them the works bearing on their special trade. The attendance was satisfactory and the men were thankful for the privileges afforded them.

Mr. Bain added: I tried to induce some of the unions to work in this respect with the library, but I failed with the exception of the painters. The stationary engineers held meetings last winter in the library. The number of readers was increasing every day, and the technical works were extensively read by mechanics. Proof of this was afforded by the fact that no less than 5000 volumes on arts, industry and manufactures were taken out last year. Painters, masons, carvers and carpenters, to a lesser degree, copied designs from the illustrated works on the trade at the library. Mechanics largely patronized the reading room on Saturday afternoons, and men out of work spent a great deal of time there. If the Saturday half-holiday were more largely adopted more workmen would doubtless come to the library.

Dr. Oldright, ex-chairman of the Provincial Board of Health, deposed to the sanitary condition of workshops. Printing offices are often defective in ventilation. This causes the men to open the windows, the draughts from which and the vitiated air contribute towards consumption which largely exists among printers. Witness explained a feasible means of ventilating printing offices. There should be a funnel over each gas jet, which would act as a reflector and convey the foul air to a central tube carried into the fresh air. In some offices the electric light was used and this was an improvement on gas, so far as health is concerned. Doctors sometimes used the gas jets in hospitals for the purpose of improving ventilation. A similar plan was used at Pullman, Ill., in regard to the fine dust at machinery works. A great deal of zymotic disease was attributable to bad water. He read the provisions of the bylaw as regards closing of impure wells which he said should be rigidly enforced. Bedrooms generally were much too small and lung disease was one consequence of this. He condemned the privy system and gave evidence of the percolation of sewage through sandy soil. Young women in shops were obliged to stand far too long and this was injurious to their health. There was an insufficiency of closet accommodation. For purposes of fresh air and exercise young people should leave work at 6 o'clock each evening. He had personal knowledge of injury to girls through the present system.

The general health of workingmen compares favorably with the other classes, but with shop girls this is not so. Witness testified in favor of the Saturday half-holiday, maintaining that all should have opportunity of relaxation and recreation. Fourteen or fifteen was the average age at which boys and girls should commence work. Witness further advocated an efficient inspection of plumbing, and said that "jerry" building was responsible for many defects. Diphtheria was caused by the effluvia from drains into houses.

Schools had not sufficient air space, and some of them not half as much as health required. Health lectures should be given by authority of some Government body; meat and milk be efficiently inspected.

John H. Lumsden, printer, deposed to having been a journeyman printer, a foreman and an employer of labor. He belonged to the Typographical Union and had been its president and was now vice-president. The number of apprentices was limited. It took a three-fourths vote of the members in good standing to declare a strike. The union wished to have the apprentices indentured, but the employers objected to this. The reason appeared to be that when a boy had been a year or two at the trade another employer was glad to get the youth at a little increase of wages. The union always resorted to arbitration before ordering a strike. He gave particulars of the strike in Toronto which resulted in obtaining nine hours as a day's work. The union had been in existence since 1844, during which time there had been six or seven strikes. There had been a great increase in book and job work in Toronto of late years.

Printers were employed in box factories, and witness spoke of this work, which consisted of printing labels for corset boxes, biscuit boxes, etc. Girls from 9 years of age to 20 were employed in making the boxes. They worked fifty-four hours a week and earned from $3 to $6 a week. Five dollars would be a high average. He had heard these girls say that they did not wish to earn more by piece for fear the masters should cut down the price. There was unsatisfactory sanitary arrangements and not suitable separation of sexes.

By Mr. Freed: The average wage of an average compositor on a morning paper is $15. The day hands are paid $11. He had known of employers refusing to engage union men. All the compositors on the morning papers in Toronto are union men. If the employers wished to employ a non-union man it would lead to a strike if it were carried out. There are fines in connection with the union. He had known members expelled and re-admitted. In some cases a fine was imposed for violation of the rules, but on re-admission it would sometimes be remitted. He had known a fine as low as $5 and as high as $100. The latter was a very flagrant case. He would not have boys apprenticed or put to the printing business at all till they were 16 years of age.

The Commission rose till 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Foundering of a British Steamer.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The British steamer Vortigern has foundered between Sourabaya and Hong Kong. Several of the persons on board were saved. The Vortigern was engaged in trade in eastern waters. She was of 876 tons register.

A later despatch says that everybody aboard the Vortigern was saved.

Havana Cigar Factories Closed.

HAVANA, Nov. 28.—Ninety-five cigar factories shut down to-day owing to the demands of the cigarmakers for an increase in wages.

THE ICE BOUND WEST.

The Upper Mississippi Closed, the Earliest Ever Known.

LACROSSE, Wis., Nov. 28.—The ice stopped running in the Mississippi last night and to-day the river is closed, the earliest ever known. The thermometer marked twenty degrees below zero last night.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—The city awoke this morning to find itself ice bound. At 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered two degrees above zero.

Galena, Ill., reports the mercury to have been ten degrees below zero last night. Springfield, Ill., says the fall of temperature there in twenty-four hours was forty-three degrees, and at Marshall, Ill., it fell forty degrees in the same period of time.

A Cold Dip in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 28.—The minimum temperature in St. Paul last night was 16 degrees below zero. At 7 o'clock the thermometer registered 16 below, and within an hour afterwards had dropped to 22. This was the coldest November morning ever recorded at the St. Paul signal office, excepting one morning in November, 1885, when the thermometer went down to 24 below. The coldest place in the United States last night was Fort Buford, 28 below.

THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE.

The Commissioners Held a Long Session Yesterday—To Meet Again To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 28.—Another long session of the Fishery Convention was held to-day at which all the plenipotentiaries were present. Each of them carried to and from the place of consultation a voluminous parcel of manuscript and appearances indicate that matters are being very thoroughly ventilated. The Canadian Minister of Justice occupies an office adjoining the conference room, where he can be readily consulted as occasion requires, and the whole Canadian staff of officials has worked most assiduously ever since the first formal meeting.

The Government here has courteously granted full access to the libraries and the Canadians appear to avail themselves fully of the privilege in the preparation of the data required. Mr. Courtney, Deputy Minister of Finance, arrived this evening and Hon. Mr. Foster is expected to reach here to-morrow. This acquisition to the staff will greatly expedite the preparation of such material as the Commissioners may require from time to time and thus enable them in that respect to keep abreast of the United States plenipotentiaries, who have their full staff of officials on the spot. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday next.

THE CHAUDIERE LUMBER CUT.

There Will be a Falling Off of About Ten Per Cent. on Last Year's Cut.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—It is now estimated that the lumber cut at the Chaudiere for this season will be about 300,000,000 feet, a falling off of about 10 per cent. from last year's cut, which was the largest for many years. The short supply of logs, owing to the low water in the Ottawa, has caused the lumbermen to use up most of their reserve logs, and there is a possibility of a very short cut next season unless the winter is a good one and the water keeps high long enough in the spring to get down all the logs now stuck at various points and a good share of the winter's logs. The quantity taken out this year will be considerably above the average, unless the weather is unfavorable, as nearly all the lumbermen have sent larger gangs than usual in the woods.

Bishop Cleary Wants a Rest.

KINGSTON, Nov. 28.—The Bishop of Kingston is going to Rome. He is desirous of rest and will spend three months in Europe and present the Holy Father with $6,276.08, the gift of the clergy and laity of the diocese.

P. T. Barnum on Commercial Union.

A prominent Montreal merchant met Mr. P. T. Barnum at the breakfast-table of the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, within the past fortnight and discussed the question of Commercial Union. Mr. Barnum is as sharp and as well-informed as ever. He said he had read a few references to it in the papers and had seen that Mr. Wiman had been talking it up. The great showman's opinion was that it meant annexation, and that the movement of Wiman and Butterworth was to attain that end. "But they are making a mistake," said Mr. Barnum. "I have always believed that Canada and the United States would grow together some day, but any agitation or scheme to assist that end will be a blunder and a block in the way."

News of Stanley's Expedition.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Major Bartlelot, in a letter from the Upper Congo, dated Aug. 17, gives re-assurances that Stanley and all the members of his party were well up to July 8. The major's camp has been revictualled and he was on good terms with the natives. A party of marauding Arabs had arrived in the vicinity. He was not certain whether or not they were the carriers whom Tippo Tib had promised to send. He was ready to follow Stanley as soon as the carriers arrived.

Death by Suffocation.

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 28.—Yesterday a little boy, son of Capt. H. Rowe, aged 8 years, was playing with a copper. He put it in his mouth, and by some means it got to his throat, where it stuck, and before medical aid could be procured he was dead.

The Judge in the Most Case Threatened.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—At the afternoon session of the Most trial Judge Cowing announced that he had received a threatening letter. It was one that he should disregard. The letter read: "If you charge against Herr Most you will die. Death for all officers is their due. Liberty!

A Very Sensitive Man.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 28.—A Russian judge committed suicide by drowning at Taganrog yesterday, because the police suspected him of being concered in political intrigues.

PARIS GREATLY EXCITED.

ROCHEFORT AND THE RADICALS ANXIOUS FOR A ROW.

The Congress of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies Will Meet on Friday at Versailles to Elect a Successor to President Grevy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A Herald's Paris special says: The Grevy crisis is becoming more entangled than ever. Paul de Cassagnac says Grevy should be crucified on the gates of the Elysee and left there to rot as a warning to malefactors. Rochefort and the Radicals seem anxious to have a row, and everybody is intriguing. The city is in a ferment, but it is believed Gen. Saussier is strong enough to put down any rising that may take place.

M. Grevy, in an interview with M. Rouvier on Sunday evening, said: "It will be a regrettable precedent to make the head of the state subordinate to the political incidents, and the ebb and flow of opinion in the Chambers." M. Grevy added: "It means a diminution of Governmental unity. There will yet remain a chief of the Executive power, but the presidency of the Republic disappears with me."

To Elect Grevy's Successor.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The Congress of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies will meet on Friday at Versailles to elect a successor to President Grevy. President Grevy's message of resignation will be short. He will disclaim all responsibility for the consequences of his retirement.

The Chamber Adjourned Until Thursday.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Rouvier moved for an adjournment of the House until Thursday, at the same time stating that the Government would then make an important communication.

An Orleanist Hurrying Home.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—A Cairo despatch says the Duke de Chartres has abandoned his journey to Upper Egypt and will leave Cairo to-morrow for Europe.

If M. Ferry is Elected President.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—M. Deroulde declares that he will convert the Patriotic League into a revolutionary society if M. Ferry is elected President.

An Interview With Clemenceau.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—M. Clemenceau, in an interview with M. Floquet, pointed out the inadvisability of dividing the Radical vote between Floquet and M. De Freycinet. M. Floquet replied that he neither desired to offer himself as a candidate for the presidency nor refused to stand. He left himself, he said, in the hands of his friends, who were entirely responsible. Prominent Orleanists who have just returned from England indignantly deny that the Orleanist party is in any way responsible for the forgeries revealed by The Cologne Gazette.

THE WILSON SCANDAL.

A Paris Correspondent Gives What He Says is the True Story of the Forged Letters.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Post's Paris correspondent asserts that the following is a true story of the forged Wilson letters; "All the documents seized in Mme. Limousin's house were shown to President Grevy, who destroyed two letters because they contained the words 'Grevy et moi.' When the parquette discovered the abstraction a scene occurred at the Elysee palace, and two letters were written to remedy the mischief." It is announced that Baron Selliere is going to Paris to testify against M. Wilson.

Col. Webb, an American resident of Paris, refused, in consequence of recent scandals, to accept the Cross of the Spanish Order of Isabella the Catholic, for which he had promised to pay $700. The man who obtained the decoration thereupon sued the Colonel for the amount named. The case came up for trial on Saturday, and was dismissed, the court holding that the contract was an immoral one.

THE POPE'S TEMPORAL POWER.

The Government Will Not Take Action Against Those Who Favor It.

ROME, Nov. 28.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day Signors Boughi and Sacrehi interpellated the Government regarding the petitions demanding the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope.

Minister Zanaredelli replied that the Crown lawyers were of the opinion that such petitions did not incriminate the signers. It was otherwise, perhaps, with regard to the letters of the bishops who clearly demand that the temporal power of the Pope be restored. He considered it unwise, however, to take the action against them which they desired. No greater service could be rendered them than to bring them into prominence through a public trial. By ignoring them the Government shows the great liberty enjoyed by its enemies and caused their movement to be viewed with indifference.

The Dynamiters Remanded For a Week.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Thomas Callan, formerly of Lowell, Mass., and Michael Harkins of Philadelphia, who were arrested on Nov. 21 on a charge of connection with a dynamite conspiracy, were taken to Bow-street Police Court to-day for trial. They rode in the prison van and were attended by policemen and constables with loaded revolvers, who rode on the outside. Mr. Poland, Solicitor for the Treasury, detailed the facts which have been collected against the prisoners. They were remanded for a week.

AN AGRICULTURAL COUNTRY.

In the Mail's Ottawa correspondence of Monday a paragraph appears that might mislead persons unacquainted with the country referred to it. Is as follows:—

"Mr. L. T. Wade, of Grenville, who has been foreman on Mr. Goodwin's work on the Trent Valley canal for the past four years, arrived in the city yesterday. He says that the work on all the Goodwin contracts, which were the Buckhorn, Lovesick and Burleigh locks, will be completed by Monday next, thus opening up navigation from Lakefield to Port Perry. The locks are 134 feet in length, 56 feet in width and have six feet of water in the mitre sill. All the work is first class. The country through which the canals are constructed is very rough and not at all adapted for agricultural purposes."

In saying that the country was rough, if he did say that, Mr. Wade no doubt referred to the immediate vicinity of the locks. But as the information is given that navigation would be opened between Lakefield and Port Perry the reference might be understood to include that stretch of country. This would not be flattering to Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which contain some of the best agricultural land in the Province. The value of field crops grown in Peterborough in 1886, according to the Ontario Government report, was $3,044,458, and in Victoria over a two million and a half dollars, which was exceeded by very few counties in the Province. The value per acre of the field crops in Victoria was above the average of the Province, and the average in this county was close to it.

The canal will pass through a rich agricultural country, and close to valuable mineral deposits and timbered lands, while on the route are many points admirably adapted for manufacturing, such as at Peterborough, Lakefield, Campbellford and other places. These sections will be benefitted by the canal, while to the country generally it will be an advantage, especially in affording a shorter waterway from the Northwest to Montreal.

The vacancy on the Commission that is to enquire into the important subject of this canal has not yet, we believe, been filled. The proposal that this district through which the canal will pass should be represented on it has been endorsed by newspapers and by prominent men and, we hope, will not be overlooked when the appointment is made. Mr. Carnegie would be able to give valuable aid as a member of the Commission, and his appointment would be favorably received in the district. The vacancy should be filled without delay, in order that the Commission may proceed with its work and that no time may be lost.

THE SHEPPARD CASE.

The Difficulty With the Officers of the 65th Amicably Adjusted.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The Sheppard case has been amicably arranged and a compromise honorable to both sides arrived at. When the Court of Queen's Bench opened this morning it was packed with spectators attracted by the Sheppard case and they were not disappointed. After the disposition of some minor cases the case was called and Donald Macmaster, Q.C., asked permission of the court to read an affidavit by Mr. Sheppard, sworn before the Clerk of the Peace. After reciting the various proceedings in the case, Mr. Sheppard said he had been advised by counsel that he could not be tried twice for the same offence, and that as he had been found guilty in the suit brought by Major Dugas he need not attend in the other suits. Subsequently a subpœna was issued summoning him to give evidence in Montreal on Nov. 2, upon a bill of indictment against Mr. Kribs for writing the article complained of. As Mr. Kribs had already acknowledged the writing of the article in open court and in the presence of many witnesses, he was advised that he could not be regarded as a material witness, and he thought the subpœna must have been issued for the purpose of securing his attendance in Montreal in order that civil and criminal prosecution might be taken against himself. He was confirmed in that belief by the information that no indictment had been found against the said Kribs, which he since knew to be the fact, and being advised that if he should go to Montreal he was liable to arrest and imprisonment under civil process by virtue of the judgment obtained by Major Dugas against him for $1000 damages and costs, he feared, inasmuch as Captains Bauset and Ethier had taken criminal prosecution against him, notwithstanding his previous trial and conviction and the satisfaction of the sentence by the payment of the fine, that possibly every member of the said regiment might take similar prosecution, and that he might thus be worried and harassed by both civil and criminal proceedings on an enormous scale. His health was by no means good, and his physician advised him that the worry and strain to which he would have to submit might entail serious if not fatal consequences. Worried and harassed by legal proceedings against him, and suffering from ill health and financial embarrassments, at last he determined voluntarily to present himself before the court and explain his reasons for not appearing sooner. He then stated his willingness to enter into bonds to appear as a witness whenever called on.

Mr. Sheppard then received permission to make an address to the court, which covered much the same ground as the affidavit, but included a letter which he had written to Col. Ouimet stating that he had surrendered and was awaiting their dictation of the terms of release from further prosecution. He concluded by asking that the suit against Kribs should be abandoned as he took all the responsibility on himself.

Chief Justice Dorion rebuked him severely for his contemp of the court, but said his statement mitigated his offence somewhat and only fined him $10 with $152 costs or 30 days in jail and accepted $800 bail, himself and two sureties, for his appearance when called on in the Kribs case.

In the afternoon the costs and fine were paid, and Mr. Sheppard was bound over to appear at the March term of the court if required.

Subsequently the ex-editor of The News sent the following apology to Col. Ouimet and the officers and men of the 65th batt.:

Gentlemen: I sincerely regret that when proprietor of The Toronto News any article reflecting on your battalion, and more particularly the articles of April 21 and 22, 1885, should have been published in that paper. The articles were published without my personal knowledge, and since my trial in September, 1885, I ascertained that they are untrue, as stated by me in open court to-day.

I, therefore, beg to apologise to you and all the officers and men of your battalion for their publication.

(Signed,) EDMUND E. SHEPPARD.

This was considered so satisfactory that in the evening an agreement was drawn up and signed by C. A. Geoffrion, Q.C., and R. Prefontaine, M.P., representing both parties, which disposes of the case. It declares that all proceedings will be dropped against Mr. Sheppard on his paying the costs to date. If this is done before March 1 next, the judgment of $1000 in favor of Major Dugas will not be pressed and, further, if Mr. Kribs makes an apology similar to the one printed above, the suit against him will be dropped.

Thus the unfortunate affair is settled and everybody concerned breathes more freely.

THE RUSSELL ELECTION CASE.

A Motion to Fix a Date for Hearing—Other Ottawa Matters.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—In the Supreme Court this morning Mr. O'Gara, Q. C., made a motion that a date be fixed for hearing the appeal in the Russell election case on the preliminary objections. The motion was ordered to stand until the papers are printed and then to be renewed.

Hon. Mr. Foster had so far recovered from his recent indisposition as to be able to leave for Washington on this afternoon train.

Hon. J. A. Chapleau is the patron of the movement on the part of the ex-Pontifical Zouaves to make a jubilee gift to Pope Leo. The present, it is understood, will consist of a pontifical flag of silk bearing the Papal coat of arms.

Baron Hirsch's Princely Offer.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Baron Hirsch's offer of £2,000,000 for the benefit of the Jews in Europe was made in a letter to the Czar, his object being the founding of primary schools in Russia. The Czar has accepted the offer. The money has been deposited in the Bank of England. Baron Rothschild and Baron Henry Dewers have been appointed trustees.

Would Our Workingmen Be Benefited?

From La Presse, Montreal.

There are certain people who have undertaken to depreciate Canada to the benefit of the United States. They never lose an opportunity of saying that the American manufacturing industries are doing better than ours, but they are careful not to give any proofs. One thing is certain, the American manufacturers reduce the wages of the workmen oftener than we do here. Several strikes have occurred in the neighboring Republic owing to reduction of wages. In Canada the workmen's pay is seldom reduced, and our manufactures are as prosperous, at least, as those of the United States.

Killed by an Explosion.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 28.—A man named George Carley was killed at Stonebridge this morning by the explosion of a boiler in Messrs. Dunbars' works. He was employed as watchman, and it is supposed he let the water get down in the boiler. His body was found a long distance from the scene of the explosion, nearly torn to pieces. He lived in Humberstone, where he leaves a wife and child.

A Fire at Picton.

PICTON, Nov. 28.—The property known as Commercial Corner, on the corner of Union and Bride streets, was burned early on Sunday morning. It was owned and occupied by C. A. Macdonald as a grocery and liquor store. The building and contents are a total loss. The building was insured for $2000 and the stock for $3000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

He Was a Green Hand.

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 28.—Jas. Hodgens, a Michigan Central brakeman, was caught between two cars while coupling at Harwich on Saturday night and died in the Railroad Hospital this morning. He was 22 years of age and a green hand. The remains were shipped to his father at Kinloss, Ont.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.

The Chicago market was stronger all round with an upward tendency in prices. The visible supply of wheat increased 489,000, while corn decreased 467,000, and oats 28,000.

The report of the receipts of hogs to-day from the Chicago Stock Yards is: Receipts 31,000 official on Saturday 27,381, shipments 6208 left over 8000. Cattle receipts 8500. Market steady.

On call at the Corn Exchange to-day 82c was bid for No. 2 fall, December delivery. For No. 1 red winter 85c was bid, No. 2 red winter offered at 85c and 83c was bid for No. 2 on track. For 10,000 bushels of No. 2 red winter 84½c was bid. For No. 1 barley 75c and 79c was offered. Two cars of No. 2 barley were offered at 73c and 74c, while 72c was bid.

LOCAL STREET MARKET.

The local market was rather dull to-day. About 500 bushels of barley sold at 65c to 76c, one load of goose wheat at 72c, and one of oats at 39c. A few loads of hay at $16 to $17.25, and a load or two of straw at $12. Dressed hogs are quoted at $6.50 to $6.75. Beef $3 to $5 for forequarters, and $5 to $7 for hindquarters. Mutton $6 to $6.50; lamb at $6.50 to $7.50, veal $6.50 to $8.

ST. LAWRENCE MARKET.

The retail market continues quiet, with prices unchanged as follows: Beef 12c to 14c, sirloin steak at 13c to 14c, round steak 10c to 11c. Mutton—Legs and chops 12c to 13c, inferior cuts 8c to 10c. OSWEGO BARLEY MARKET.

Oswego reports barley unchanged at the following prices: No. 2 ex. Can. 87c, No. 1 Can. 89c to 90c, No. 1 bright 93c. Sales, 3400 bush. Can. by sample at 82c, 5000 Can. by sample 86c, 7000 Can. at 85c. Receipts 146,000 bush.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

The Fruit Garden in Early Winter.

December is often a prolongation, as to weather, of November; in fact, of October, also, and work suitable to those months may be continued. However mild in the first days of the month, cold often shuts down with a snap, and we should be prepared at any day for the announcement that "winter is here." Sometimes it is even mild enough to continue tree planting, but if the soil is at all frozen, leave the trees where they are. If well heeled-in, they will be perfectly safe until spring. Young trees should be stiffened by a mound of earth at the base, which will also protect from the attacks of mice; rubbing the trunks with bloody meat, or sprinkling with blood from the slaughter house, to disgust and repel rabbits. A shotgun is very killing, and fat rabbits are good eating. Make surface drains to carry off the water from young orchards. Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

Cotton steeped in a combustible solution is the latest substitute for gas, an exhibition of which was given to capitalists in New York Saturday night. It is the taper of ancient days put through the paces of modern science.

The Gloucester fisheries are expensive in more ways than one. A Boston paper computes that during the year just ended 17 fishing vessels have gone down, 127 fishermen have lost their lives, 60 women have been made widows and 61 children rendered fatherless.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

They had princely ideas in the days when New York merchants were shipowners. Most of these vessels were armed. Samuel G. Ogden, who married a daughter of Francis Lewis, signer of the Declaration of Independence, upon the birth of his first son saluted the arrival of that young merchant prince with 60 guns fired from his own ships.

Vitality and color are restored to weak and gray hair, by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. Through its cleansing and healing qualities, it prevents the accumulation of dandruff, and cures all scalp diseases.

THOMAS MENZIES
AGENT G. T. R., GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH

COUNTESS NARONA.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"No!" said Lady Montbarry. "Then you are only insolent! The ignorant English mind (I have observed) is apt to be insolent in the exercise of unrestrained English This is very noticeable to us foreigners among you people in the streets. Of course I can't be insolent to you, in return. I hardly know what to say to you. My maid is imprudent in admitting you so easily to my room. I suppose your respectable appearance misled her. I wonder who you are! You mentioned the name of a courier who left us very strangely. Was he married, by any chance? Are you his wife? And do you know where he is?"

Mrs. Ferrari's indignation burst its way through all restraints. She advanced to the sofa; she feared nothing, in the fervor and rage of her reply.

"I am his widow—and you know it, you wicked woman! Ah! it was an evil hour when Miss Lockwood recommended my husband to be his lordship's courier"——

Before Mrs. Ferrari could add another word Lady Montbarry sprung from the sofa with the stealthy suddenness of a cat—seized her by both soldiers—and shook her with the strength and frenzy of a mad woman. "You lie! you lie! you lie!" She dropped her hold at the third repetition of the accusation and threw up her hands wildly with a gesture of despair. "Oh, Jesus Maria! is it possible!" she cried. "Can the courier have come to me through that woman!" She turned like lightning on Mrs. Ferrari, and stopped her as she was escaping from the room. "Stay here, you fool—stay here and answer me! If you cry out, as sure as the heavens are above you, I'll strangle you with my own hands. Sit down again—and fear nothing. Wretch! It is I who am frightened—frightened out of my senses. Confess that you lied when you used Miss Lockwood's name just now! No! I don't believe you on your oath! I will believe nobody but Miss Lockwood herself. Where does she live? Tell me that, you noxious, stinging little insect—and you may go." Terrified as she was, Mrs. Ferrari hesitated. Lady Montbarry lifted her hands threateningly, with the long, lean, yellow-white fingers outspread and crooked at the tips. Mrs. Ferrari shrunk at the sight of them, and gave the address. Lady Montbarry pointed contemptuously to the door—then changed her mind. "No! not yet! you will tell Miss Lockwood what has happened, and she may refuse to see me. I will go there at once, and you shall go with me. As far as the house—not inside of it. Sit down again. I am going to ring for my maid. Turn your back to the door; your cowardly face is not fit to be seen!"

She rang the bell. The maid appeared.

"My cloak and bonnet—instantly!"

The maid produced the cloak and bonnet from the bedroom.

"A cab at the door—before I can count ten!"

The maid vanished. Lady Montbarry surveyed herself in the glass, and wheeled round again, with her cat like suddenness, to Mrs. Ferrari.

"I look more than half dead already, don't I?" she said, with a grim burst of irony. "Give me your arm."

She took Mrs. Ferrari's arm and left the room. "You have nothing to fear, so long as you obey," she whispered, on the way downstairs. "You leave me at Miss Lockwood's door and never see me again."

In the hall they were met by the landlady of the hotel. Lady Montbarry graciously presented Mrs. Ferrari as her companion. "My good friend, Mrs. Ferrari, I am so glad to have seen her." The landlady accompanied them to the door. The cab was waiting. "Get in first, good Mrs. Ferrari," said her ladyship, "and tell the man where to go."

They were driven away. Lady Montbarry's variable humor changed again. With a low groan of misery, she threw herself back in the cab. Lost in her own dark thoughts, as careless of the woman whom she had bent to her iron will as if no such person sat by her side, she preserved a sinister silence, until they reached the house where Miss Lockwood lodged. In an instant, she roused herself to action. She opened the door of the cab, and closed it again on Mrs. Ferrari before the driver could get off his box.

"Take that lady a mile further on her way home!" she said, as she paid the man his fare. The next instant she had knocked at the house door. "Is Miss Lockwood at home?"

"Yes, ma'am."

She stepped over the threshold; the door closed on her.

"Which way, ma'am?" asked the driver of the cab.

Mrs. Ferrari put her hand to her head, and tried to collect her thoughts. Could she leave her friend and benefactress helpless at Lady Montbarry's mercy? She was still vainly endeavoring to decide on the course that she ought to follow, when a gentleman, stopping at Miss Lockwood's door, happened to look toward the cab window, and saw her.

"Are you going to call on Miss Agnes too?" he asked.

It was Henry Westwick. Mrs. Ferrari clasped her hands in gratitude as she recognized him.

"Go in, sir!" she cried. "Go in, directly. That dreadful woman is with Miss Agnes. Go and protect her!"

"What woman?" Henry asked.

The answer literally struck him speechless. With amazement and indignation in his face, he looked at Mrs. Ferrari as she pronounced the hated name of "Lady Montbarry." "I'll see to it," was all he said. He knocked at the house door; and he, too, in his turn, was let in.

CHAPTER XI.

"Lady Montbarry, miss."

Agnes was writing a letter, when the servant astonished her by announcing the visitor's name. Her first impulse was to refuse to see the woman who had intruded on her. But Lady Montbarry had taken care to follow close on the servant's heels. Before Agnes could speak she had entered the room.

"I beg to apologize for my intrusion, Miss Lockwood. I have a question to ask you, in which I am very much interested. No one can answer me but yourself." In low, hesitating tones, with her glittering black eyes bent modestly on the ground, Lady Montbarry opened the interview in those words.

ABOUT MESMERISM.

THE CAPITAL EXCITED CONCERNING "SUBJECTS" AND "SENSITIVES."

A Correspondent's Accidental Discovery. Animal Magnetism as an Amusement. Experiments with a "Class" in Hypnotism—An "Operator's" Conclusions.

This letter will be in the nature of a confession. Last spring, discovering by accident that I could mesmerize, I took up mesmerism as a diversion for the amusement of myself and friends. I had long believed in it entirely, and carefully watched its processes, but I wished to study its philosophy and find out, if I could, the cause and the limits of its mysterious phenomena.

I first found that I could, by placing my hand on the forehead of a young acquaintance and accompanying the slight pressure with an imperative command, close his eyes and keep them firmly closed against all efforts of his will. I could compel him to dance or keep him from moving from his tracks; could prevent his rising from his chair; prevent his striking his hands together, and, at last, could prevent him from speaking. In fact I absolutely controlled his voluntary muscles in every respect, and could compel him to do anything that he was physically capable of doing.

Extending the experiments, I obtained the same control over others, both men and women, till I had quite a class of sensitives so responsive that I could control them with ease. Up to this time they were all perfectly conscious and without any hallucinations; they knew who they were, where they were and what they were doing, and they laughed as heartily at the absurd results obtained as any spectator. Up to this time, too, I had no means of ascertaining whether the apparent results were genuine. I might be the dupe of cunning people who were conspiring to fool me, for in these early stages there seems to be no way of scientifically proving it.

It was some time before I was able to carry the experiments further and get control of the consciousness and senses of my class. At last success came. I made them see and hear musquitoes and fight the tormentors with great energy. At this point they became dazed, and it was easy to command their senses in other respects. At a suggestion they heard music, the noises of a riot, a thunder storm, the roaring of lions, a speech by Col. Ingersoll, and they gradually came to see vividly anything to which I directed their attention. In this world of hallucination they lost consciousness—or, rather, they abandoned their real existence and assumed an abnormal existence, as one does in a dream.

VARIOUS EXPERIMENTS.

I am not yet certain whether this strange condition is imposed on them by my will or whether it is self imposed, subjective and the result of expectation on their part. I am inclined to believe the latter theory is true, because when I direct their attention to a horse, for instance, each one sees a different sort of a horse and his head is in different directions.

By a few additional passes I can induce a cataleptic state in which the sensitive becomes perfectly rigid and can be laid out between two chairs, his head on one and his heels on another like a log. They can also be easily made insensible to pain, so that pins are stuck through their hands, teeth drawn and painful but harmless acids put in the eye without extorting a sign of feeling. In this way, and others even more conclusive, I have demonstrated the good faith of my class.

I have given several receptions for the entertainment of my friends and record here some result for the benefit of those in other cities who choose to try similar experiments.

The available class now consists of eight—four gentlemen and four ladies, from 17 to 40 years of age. Two of these (both ladies) I have never been able to take into the region of hallucinations. I can control them physically, can prevent their unclasping their hands, or laying down a fan, or rising from their chairs, or pronouncing their own names; but here my influence stops. I cannot make them think that the room is hot or cold, or that musquitoes are prevalent, or disturb the testimony of their senses in any way.

The other six are lost to the realities of life the instant I touch them. One of them I can put into a sound sleep in a second, and he will sleep until I awaken him.

It should be stated here that these sensitives are above the average of intelligence and mental activity. Three of them are clerks in the departments, one, who took the valedictory in college, being an artist in the Smithsonian. Two are in business for themselves; one of them, a shrewd, sagacious and level headed man as one would meet anywhere, with a sharp commercial turn of mind. This man differs from the others in being keenly incredulous—skeptical of his hallucinations when they seem unreasonable.

SOME CONCLUSIONS.

I know of no other thing in which there is so much entertainment as mesmerism. For the benefit of those who desire to experiment I append certain conclusions from my own experiments here:

1. About one person in ten can be mesmerized.

2. The proportion of people who have the "power" to mesmerize, if it be a power, I do not know.

3. Mesmerism is a trance and seems to me almost identical with somnambulism.

4. It is as harmless as sleep. My sensitives occasionally come to me in the daytime to be put to sleep for the purpose of obtaining rest.

5. Hallucinations that take place under mesmerism are seldom remembered in a subsequent waking state, but are generally recalled with vividness in a subsequent mesmeric state.

6. Mesmerized subjects do not see the objects or people in the room or hear any noise whatever except the voice of the operator.

7. My sensitives could have an arm or a leg amputated, I have no doubt, without suffering any pain.

8. Some of my sensitives are able to tell what goes on behind them, and where they cannot see it, by some occult sense of which I am ignorant. I am at present pursuing study along this line.

Others here are now experimenting, and I think mesmerism is the coming fashionable "fad."—W. A. Croffut in New York Mail and Express.

A "Decoy" Cow.

A farmer living near Dickinson, Dak., has a cow that is used as a decoy in loading cattle in cars. She will "make friends" of the steers in a yard, and at a given signal lead them up the incline that projects from the car toward the yard. Her owner receives more for her services than any two men at the station receive.—Chicago Times.

A Bundle of Letters.

The manager of a Louisville theatre has in his possession a bundle of manuscript that would make a sensation if given to the public. It is composed of over 300 letters written by well known men about town to the fascinating fairies of the footlights.—New York Evening World.

Didn't See the Sarcasm.

Three different waiters at a large hotel asked a professor at dinner, in quick succession, if he would have soup. A little annoyed, he said sarcastically to the last, "Is it compulsory?" "No, sir," answered the man, "I think it is mock turtle."—New York Telegram.

"Did n't Know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

ST. NICHOLAS.

For Young Folks.

SINCE its first issue, in 1873, this magazine has maintained, with undisputed recognition, the position it took at the beginning,—that of being the most excellent juvenile periodical ever printed. The best known names in literature were on its list of contributors from the start,—Bryant, Longfellow, Thomas Hughes, George MacDonald, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Frances Hodgson Burnett, James T. Fields, John G. Whittier; indeed the list is so long that it would be easier to tell the few authors of note who have not contributed to "the world's child magazine."

The Editor, Mary Mapes Dodge,

author of "Hans Brinker; or, The Silver Skates," and other popular books for young folks,—and for grown-up folks,—too, has a remarkable faculty for knowing and entertaining children. Under her skillful leadership ST. NICHOLAS brings to thousands of homes on both sides of the water knowledge and delight.

St. Nicholas in England.

It is not alone in America that ST. NICHOLAS has made its great success. The London Times says:—"It is above anything we produce in the same line." The Scotsman says:—"There is no magazine that can successfully compete with it."

The Coming Year of St. Nicholas.

The fifteenth year begins with the number for November, 1887, and the publishers can announce: Serial and short Stories by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Joel Chandler Harris, J. T. Trowbridge, Col. Richard M. Johnston, Louisa M. Alcott, Professor Alfred Church, William H. Rideing, Washington Gladden, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Amelia E. Barr, Frances Courtenay Baylor, Harriet Upton, and many others. Edmond Alton will write a series of papers on the "Routine of the Republic,"—how the President works at the White House, and how the affairs of the Treasury, the State and War Departments, etc., are conducted; Joseph O'Brien, a well known Australian journalist, will describe "The Great Island Continent"; Elizabeth Robins Pennell will tell of "London Christmas Pantomimes" (Alice in Wonderland, etc.); John Burroughs will write "Meadow and Woodland Talks with Young Folks," etc., etc. Mrs. Burnett's short serial will be, the editor says, a worthy successor to her famous "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which appeared in ST. NICHOLAS.

Why not try St. Nicholas this year for the young people in the house? Be in with the November number. Send us $3.00, or subscribe through booksellers and newsdealers. The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

Art and the Bible.

The Sunday School Room of the George Street Methodist Church was filled to overflowing on Monday night when the Rev. J. T. Dowling presented views of Biblical scenes. A large portion of the audience were Sunday school children, to whom, as well as to older people, the views were very interesting. The scenes, painted in oil by Mr. Dowling, were eight by twelve feet in size, except one, a cartoon of the departure from Egypt, which was twelve by eighteen feet. The paintings were well executed and gave a clear idea of the scenes represented. Three "sections" of the pictures were presented, showing Mount Ararat, ruins of Babel, Memnonian statues and overflow of the Nile, the Red Sea, Mount Sinai, Petrea, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Vale of Hinnom, Mount Olivet, Jerusalem, the marriage procession, the banquet, classic warfare, appeal to the judgment seat, the seige of Jerusulem by Titus, &c. Each scene was accompanied by explanations by Mr. Dowling, places of interest being pointed out and historical references explained. They were very interesting throughout and instructive. During the evening Mr. Bonnett gave a couple of piano solos and Mrs. Hamilton sang a solo in a very acceptable manner.

Genuine Fur Goods.

We draw the attention of the public to the large sale of 10,000 seal skins at the London sales on the 8th November. Prices for large skins ruling high, and smaller skins being abundant at a much lower figure. Raw seal skins sell from $15 to $40, and when dressed and dyed from $20 to $60. Skins avarage from 35 to 55 inches in length and and from 18 to 29 inches in width, and it takes four seal skins to make an average seal sacque. Seal skins of 55 inches and more can be seen at our establishment, as we buy only the best material, although profits rule lower than with buying smaller skins. When will the public profit in buying of reliable houses? We have done the utmost in the 27 year' business to draw attention to dealers in shoddy goods (even in seal). There is shoddy in all classes of fur goods, and it is only on the ignorance of some purchasers that such houses flourish. Their astonishing effrontery goes even so far that Nutria is offered as beaver, muskrat plucked and colored and rabbit shins shorn and colored as Baltic and French seal, and by such a mode of Dealing unwary purchasers are fleeced.

TESTIMONIAL.

We the undersigned have seen the artistic works of Rev. J. T. Dowling and heard his explanatory lectures, have pleasure in expressing our high appreciation of his abilities as an artist and speaker, and of his extended knowledge of Biblical antiquities which could only have been gained by a life-long study and research. We have every confidence in recommending his entertainments as worthy the countenance of Christian people everywhere, trusting that a higher moral tone to church and pulpit entertainments may thus be encouraged and fostered in our land.

MISSIONS.

Interesting Addresses Delivered in St. John's School House.

A fairly attended missionary meeting was held in St. John's Church School House on Monday evening. The speakers were the Rev. Mr. Davidson, and His Lordship the Bishop of Algoma.

A missionary hymn was sung, after which prayers were read by the Rector, the Rev. J. W. B. Beck, from an authorized printed form, another hymn was sung and the Rector introduced the first speaker, the Rev. Mr. Davidson.

The Rev. gentleman in opening his address said His Lordship's remarks would evidently refer more particularly to Algoma, he would, therefore confine himself to the work in this Diocese. He drew a comparison between the Church in England and the Church in Canada. The church in the fatherland was great and glorious, her influence was felt, she wielded a mighty power. She was first and foremost in the missionary cause. On the other hand the Canadian Church had lain dormant—but she was awakening from her sleep. He predicted for the Church here a great future. Everywhere throughout this country they were meeting with men who were alienated from the Church. Why, because the Church had neglected them. It was our duty to try and win them back to the old path. He had seen whole families that were unbaptized, and who did not think it was necessary. He closed his address by appealing to the people to stand by the clergy and help them in the good work.

Another hymn was sung and His Lordship the Bishop of Algoma, then addressed the congregation present.

Some years ago, His Lordship said, a vessel was seen in the Bay of Biscay apparently deserted. A boat was sent from a passing ship and a search made. The men were about leaving when they noticed what they supposed to be a bundle of clothes lying on the deck, more, they undid it and found a man left there to die. They took him to their vessel and revived him, on gaining consciousness he looked around him, seeing himself safe, his first words were spoken in a whisper, "There are others." The duty of every Christian was to think there were others. But men were apt to be indifferent, they thought of themselves. But they should remember as they freely received, so they should freely give. Fourteen years ago Algoma was part of this Diocese, now it was separated. His Lordship traced on a map he brought with him the outline of the diocese of Algoma. In extent it was 800 miles with an area of about 50,000 square miles. He gave the the population of a few of the more prominent places in the district. The inhabitants were very much scattered and comprised small farmers, miners, fishermen and navvies, therefore they were not like the people of this diocese, self-supporting. There were some laymen helping the missionaries here, and some of them travelled (walked) 10 and 15 miles to hold a service They were in bad need of money to help on this work. He could get the men, but it was the money. The men they wanted there were men of strong physical endurance, men who could eat anything and sleep anywhere. People imagined that anyone was good enough for Algoma but it was not so. The language of the Indians in Algoma was difficult to master and clergymen preached through an intrepreter, and grevious errors was often then made. As an instance His Lordship told of a clergyman, who, addressing an Indian audience, began with the words "Red men of the forest" and the intrepretor repeated it to the Indians, "Little men on big sticks." The speaker gave an account of the hardships endured by the missionaries—one Mr. Gilmour's parish covering 250 miles the journey backward and forward being made on foot. This missionary had so endeared himself to the people there, that some of them in one district had clubbed together and given him a handsome gold watch. Mr. Gilmour also went to the Northwest as chaplain during the late rebellion. The speaker spoke of the devoutness of the Indians in the religious services. Roads were badly needed in some districts. He had applied for a road at a certain point. He applied to the Provincial Government, they referred him to the Dominion Government, the Dominion to the Provincial and so forth; it was like a game of battledore and shuttlecock. But he meant to persevere and succeed. These Indians were industrious and deserved this. He had received some light agricultural implements from the Government for them and there was a marked improvement noticeable. He would apply to the people for aid for mission work. He was glad to know that St. John's congregation had contributed largely to this work. It required $18,000 or $20,000 for the work in Algoma. The people of this parish should remember that they owe all they now possess to this missionary principle. He closed his interesting address by appealing to the people to help on this good work to the more diligent and devout in the services of the church.

A collection was taken up. Another hymn sung, the Rector read the closing prayers and the congregation were dismissed with the Bishop's blessing.

Our Premium "Taking"

We have scored a success with our premium, "OUR FAMILY PHYSICIAN." Subscriptions for the paper and book are rolling in. Apart from the good value in the paper the book is one that amply repays the investment.

Here is a sample of what our subscribers are saying.

"BRIGHT, Ont., Nov. 26th.

"I see your offer of a premium with the REVIEW on very liberal terms, so I send you $1.60, although my subscription is paid up to October 1st, 1888. You can send me the book and add another year to my subscription. I enclose 10c to pay postage, Yours, &c., &c., W.B.W."

"OMMEE, Nov. 24, '87.

"Please send me the REVIEW and book (Family Physician) for one year, or as long as the money I send will cover, as well as give me the book. I enclose $1.75. The book is just the kind of thing we have been looking for, and will be of great use, I am confident. J. K."

"ASHBURNHAM, Nov. 28, '87.

"Send me over the Family Physician. I take it to be a good book, and as the wife says, handy to have about the house. The $2.00 I send along with the price of the book settles for this year and next year I wish you success J. A. M."

Evening Entertainment.

A successful evening entertainment was held in the St. Luke's Church school room on Monday evening. The programme consisted of selections from Tom Moor's works, Readings, songs, and instrumental music was given and a short sketch of the poet's life was read.

A FIZZLE.

The Saw and File Works Talk Comes to Nought.

A public meeting was held in the Council Chamber on Monday night for the purpose of discussing the merits of the proposed saw and file works, with a view to having the rest of the stock taken up.

Among those present were: Mayor Stevenson, Councillors Cahill, McNaughton, and Yelland, Messrs. Wm. Hamilton, J. M. Irwin, T. Hurley, Mr. Lindsay, of the Lindsay-Seldon Furniture Co., Wm. Langford, J. McClelland, A. Brodie, T. G. Hazlett, Wm. Walsh, Jas. Kendry, Jas. Carveth, Geo. Stevenson.

The MAYOR took the chair at a little after eight o'clock. He explained the object of the meeting. Some little time negotiations had been going on for the purpose of establishing a saw works here. A meeting had been held, at which the two gentlemen who were promoting the scheme made a statement of the conditions upon which they would come here, which were liberal. At other meetings they tried to get stock taken. They had also made preliminary arrangements. A favourable arrangement had been made with Mr. Lundy for his building on Brock street. The town had offered to exempt the buildings from taxation for ten years and pay $100 towards the rent, which will be $2,000, a fair amount. He dwelt on the profit that the addition of a number of families to the population would be. He was opposed to bonus giving, but would be glad to see the works go on. Whitby had undertaken to give bonuses to a saddlery factory, a tannery and a shoddy factory, but a building without any business was the only thing the citizens got. As for the saw work, $5,000 in stock had been subscribed. They wanted $5,000 more. He might add that the factory was almost sure to be a paying investment. Something had been said as to the town's taking the additional stock, but it would be a long time before they could make the money available. The ratepayers would have to approve of it and the by-law would have to legalized.

Mr. HAMILTON being called on to make a few remarks said that the only thing he could advise was to put down the dust and get it going. He thought those interested in property here should go into it. By reasonably good management works of this kind paid from 9 to 12 per cent dividend. As for a distributing point there was none better than Peterborough.

Mr. BECKETT, one of the promoters of the works, stated that it was at personal loss that he was here making an effort to establish these works here. He sacrificed a good position to come here, but if the works went on he would profit in the end. There was no better place in Canada for building up such works. In addition he might say that he intended to bring a file works already in operation with ten men employed if the project went on.

Mr. HAZLITT knew Mr. Beckett to be an industrious and persevering man and had not the least doubt that if Mr. Beckett went into it he would make it a success if he could. He thought the scheme feasible and would be glad to see it go on. He would like to see it established. He was glad to see the town so liberal and hoped they would extend their liberality to other manufactures. It would be better for the town and the manufacturers both.

The CHAIRMAN said that the stock holders were protected by a building being secured at a low rent.

Mr. HAMILTON came to the conclusion that Peterborough did not want any manufactures.

The CHAIRMAN said that there was nothing more to be done, if no one wished to take stock.

No one evinced a desire to subscribe, except Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, who proposed that the forty citizens who called the meeting should put down their names each for $100. If they would do that he would subscribe $100.

The meeting adjourned without any stock being subscribed.

CANADA'S GREAT NORTHWEST.

What its Fertile Fields Produces—Richness of Native Grasses.

The car in which is stored samples of the products of Manitoba, the Northwest and British Columbia arrived by the Canadian Pacific Railway this morning and, placed on the siding north of the station, was visited by many people to-day.

This trip the car is under the management of Mr. W. M. Wemp, colonization agent, Toronto, assisted by Mr. Aug. Holm. Mr. Wemp was formerly connected with the immigration department on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and has had in that capacity large experience in the work in which he is now engaged.

The car this year is as attractive as ever. It is comfortably heated by a patent hot water heater and lighted by railway lamps. The produce is arranged so as to show off the exhibits to the best possible advantage. The sides are lined with heavy topped bunches of native grasses, wheat, barley, oats and so forth, and along a flange at both sides of the car is spread out to view the diverse products of the great Northwest country. The potatoes of which there are a large number of varieties are uniformly fine in appearance. A lady who visited the car a few days ago played quite a joke on herself. A stone about the size of an ordinary potato was in the collection. She looked at it and picked it up. "Oh my," said she, "what a heavy potato this is, what kind is it?" "That variety" answered the manager solemnly "is what we call the solid rock." Other kinds of fruit are raised besides that of earth. A choice collection of apples is shown both preserved and not preserved. The British Columbia preserved apples are very fine looking specimens, as are also the white grapes and cherries. A fine exhibit of mangolds and turnips is made in an alcove formed of wheat and barley straw. One Greystone turnip weighed 25 pounds and one Swedish turnip 23. A few heads of Egyptian and French spring wheat are shown, also wild hops and wild beans which grow profusely on the open prairie. The Kohl-Rabi, a vegetable midway between turnip and cabbage, vegetable marrows, and cheese pumpkins are among the novelties in vegetables shown.

The climate and soil in which the samples of grain shown was raised seems to have been well adapted to bring it to the full development of perfect plumpness. The hulless barley weighs 57 pounds to the bushel; the Empress barley, 55 pounds to the bushel, the black oats, 39 pounds to the bushel, the Red Fife wheat, from 61 to 66 pounds to the bushel; the two and six rowed barley 54½ pounds to the bushel, and the white oats 46 pounds to the bushel. A ample of white Egyptian oats which yielded 80 bushels to the acre was shown in the head. Among the other exhibits are a field squash weighing 73 pounds and a mammoth squash weighing 117 pounds. Mr. Holm has great difficulty in keeping the people from carrying the latter off in their pockets. But Mr. Holm is a good deal of a philanthropist. He wouldn't like to see anyone get into trouble.

Products of the mine as well as those of the farm are to be seen. A block of soft coal weighing 850 pounds is in the corner of the car. It was got from the Galt mine, Lethbridge. Samples of copper ore from the recently discovered mine at Sudbury, are shown, also a block of limestone from the Selkirk quarry.

The heads of ranche cattle serve to decorate the car. The manager pointed out that one of these cattle at the age of three years costs only $5 for the raising.

The car will be open for the inspection of visitors up till eight o'clock this evening, and to-morrow up till six o'clock in the evening. There is no charge for admission. Messrs. Wemp and Holm will be be pleased to show the people through and give any explanations required.

Brevities.

—To-days receipts at the tax collector's office up till three o'clock this afternoon were over $3,000.

—The was no business done at the Police Court to-day.

—The meeting of the Y. M. C. A. snow shoe club will be held in the Association rooms this evening for further organization.

—(Three fellows on George street). One—Were you at the public meeting in the Council Chamber last night. Another—No; but I saw the people file out and—Shrieks of hit him! mob him!

—Mr. John Cousins is on deck at the Charlotte street rink this season again. He worked all last night at "making" the ice and will put in more work to-night. The ice is forming very satisfactorily. If the frosty weather continues the rink will be soon opened for the season.

—Smart boy—I knew what big buildings are at Ottawa. Admiring father—What? S. B.—The Parliament buildings. A. F.—And what are there Parliament buildings at Ottawa and Toronto both for? S. B. (thoughtfully)—One for the Grits and one for the Tories. A. F.—Well, well, that child's knowledge is wonderful.

SALVATIONISTS IN PERIL.

THE QUEBEC MOB PREPARING TO ASSAIL THEM.

Cardinal Taschereau Refuses to Interfere With His Parishioners—The Right of the Army to Parade Will be Tested in the Courts.

QUEBEC, Nov. 29.—In consequence of the uniting of the French Canadians and a certain class of English-speaking population to oppose the Salvation Army should they parade to-morrow night, it is said that B. Battery and the 8th Royal Rifles have been placed under orders. It is very evident that something serious will occur.

At the meeting last night on the Terrace and at Jacques Cartier-square, the most violent speeches were made. This has helped to incense the Salvation opponents, and adding to this, that Cardinal Taschereau has positively refused to interfere with his parishioners, the crowd is almost frenzied.

On the other hand the friends of the Salvation Army bear a bold and determined front and insist upon the Army coming out to-morrow night and parading. It is said, but the rumor is not authentic, that a number of their friends will arrive here from the west to-morrow and augment their numbers. The mob claim that they can bring together fully 25,000 men and boys to-morrow night.

Several of the private industries here feel the loss of business severely, some of the wholesale dealers state that they have cancelled no less than five substantial orders since Monday last.

The courts are preparing warrants for the arrest of the parties implicated in the late disturbance. Some prominent citizens are among the batch. A test case against the Army will also be tried.

The Attacks on the Salvation Army.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—Mr. L. O. David, M.P.P. for Montreal Centre, has sent a letter to L'Electeur of Quebec, protesting against the attacks made upon the Salvation Army. He says that the conduct of the population of Quebec is as much opposed to Christianity as to its own interests and national honor. He believes that the French Canadians ought to show the superiority of their religion by serious works and not by throwing stones at inoffensive people and especially at women.

Comments of the French Press.

From Le Canadien, Quebec.

No one doubts for a moment but there is as much trade or as many people on the streets of Montreal as in ours. And do we see the inhabitants of the metropolis making fools of themselves in trying to prevent the parades of the Salvation Army. . . . . The Quebec police has the names of those who took part in Saturday's troubles. The law knows no race: English, French and Irish are equal in the eyes of the law.

From Le Monde, Montreal.

The disgraceful scenes which have occurred in Quebec during the last few days are worthy of condemnation and should be stopped immediately, one way or another. If the Salvation Army have the right to parade the streets, let them do so; if not, let them be sent away; but we do not want the spectacle of these popular demonstrations, which are a shame to civilization, and do wrong to everybody without benefit whatever to anybody.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

The Strain is Believed to have Produced Dementia in President Grevy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A Times' London special says: The Parisian situation is becoming more involved by Grevy's vacillation. It is now said that the Chamber will meet on Friday but it is uncertain whether the message when sent will contain the resignation of President Grevy. It is reported that he is saying very strange and inconsequential things to visitors, such as that it is impossible that he should leave the Elysee until his new house has the dining-room furnished, because it is impossible that he should eat with his plate on his knees. These reports give an impression that the strain of the crisis may have turned the old statesman's head.

The Bourse remains singularly quiet through all this trouble. The success of the great national funding transaction at such a period has had the most re-assuring effect on public opinion.

M. Goblet Declined.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Several deputies waited upon M. Goblet to-day and endeavored to induce him to join a Cabinet, with M. Clemenceau as Premier, with the object of retaining M. Grevy in the presidency. M. Goblet declined.

THE SUSPECTED DYNAMITERS.

The U. S. Government to Take Steps Regarding the Arrest of Callan in London.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 29.—In reply to a telegram from Mayor Abbott, that the United States Government take some steps with regard to the arrest in London of Thos. Callan of this city on suspicion of being a dynamiter? Secretary Bayard writes that the State Department has no information about Callan's arrest other than what has already been published, and that the department is wholly without authority to apply for a stay of proceedings pending investigation.

THE UNIONISTS IN DUBLIN.

AN IMMENSE GATHERING GREETS HARRINGTON AND GOSCHEN.

The Leading Dissident Makes a Speech in Which He Points Out That the Peace and Prosperity of Ireland Depend Upon the Preservation of the Union.

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—The great Unionist meeting, for the purpose of addressing which Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen visited this city, was held in Leicester Hall this evening. So many persons were desirous of attending, that an overflow meeting was held in another hall. Both halls were crowded. The audience gave prolonged cheers for the Queen. Mr. Wigham, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, presided over the meeting in Leicester Hall. Hundreds of leading citizens, several bishops and many members of the clergy were present on the platform. Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen were accorded an enthusiastic greeting.

The chairman handed to Lord Hartington an address approving his policy and signed by 1300 members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Lord Hartington, who was loudly cheered, said that never before had he addressed such a large, enthusiastic and influential assembly. The vast gathering clearly prove that the professional and commercial classes of Ireland were opposed to separation. [Cheers.] The importance of this meeting in the heart of Dublin cannot be exaggerated. The power of persistent, unblushing, reiterated assertion is so great and it has been so fully exercised in order to induce Englishmen and Scotchmen to believe that Ireland detests the union and burns to substitute another form of government, that unless contradicted by ocular and tangible proof it is almost impossible that in the course of time these assertions will not exercise some influence on the minds of Unionists." [Hear, hear.]

He paid a tribute to Mr. Chamberlain's services in Ulster, and said that the promoters of to-night's meeting had done no less a service in bringing before the people of Great Britain, in a manner which could not be ignored, the disputed fact that there was, perhaps, a minority, but a large, important and influential minority, which altogether repudiated the assertion that Ireland as a nation was determined to abolish the union. He urged the importance of having all the facts, not merely a superficial view, before them indicating the great and vital questions. He wished especially to look upon the Irish view of the question as affecting the prosperity of the country, apart from the English Imperial view as affecting the future of the Empire. Admitting that a majority of Irishmen were in favor of home rule, he refused to admit that the majority was necessarily as large as appeared from the representation in Parliament, because under the present electoral system it was possible that the Unionist minority, though numerically approaching the separatist majority, might not be represented. The Gladstonians had distinctly stated that they would refuse to grant separation even if demanded by a majority, yet they had never shown that Ireland would be satisfied with the limited Home Rule they offered. On the contrary there was every indication that she would not be satisfied except with entire separation. The struggle was more for the possession of the land than for reform of the system of government and the Gladstonians admitted that the land difficulty must not and could not be left to an Irish Parliament to settle. In fact there was no economic grievance in Ireland that the English Parliament was not equally as ready and capable to deal with as an Irish Parliament.

He could understand Irishmen asking independence or an agrarian revolution, also that there might be distinguished and able politicians who were hopeful that a change of Government would open a road to place and power. But he was unable to understand a nation being enthusiastic for a simple modification of government. The only justification for conceding the demands of the agricultural class alone in Ireland would be that Ireland had become a purely agricultural and therefore, a weak and insignificant country. No patriotic Irishman would be satisfied with this prospect. If, on the other hand, they wished to develop her industries and trade and see Ireland take her proper place in the competition of the world they must allow the minority, which included those classes upon which the future prosperity of Ireland mainly depended, to have a voice in this great question.

He concluded with a repudiation of the charge that he had changed his opinions with regard to the question of local government in Ireland and had ignored the national sentiments of the country.

Evicted With a Fire Engine.

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—An attempt to evict a tenant named Foley from the estate of Col. Chas. Tottenham at Wexford to-day was attended with great difficulty. The house was securely barricaded and the evictors, to effect an entrance, made a breach in the wall with a battering-ram. While doing this boiling water and stones were thrown at them by the tenants. The constables brought up a fire engine and drenched the tenants with water. The occupants yielded after an hour's resistance. Ten arrests were made.

A 30 Per Cent. Reduction Accepted.

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—A conference of delegates from all branches of the league was held on Lord Dillon's extensive estates to-day. Messrs. Crilly and Conway, members of Parliament, were present. The conference decided that Lord Dillon's offer of a reduction of 30 per cent. from the judicial rents should be accepted.

Mandeville Wants Satisfaction.

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—A writ has been sworn out by Mr. Mandeville against the Governor of Tullamore prison for assault. The charge is based upon the treatment he received at the time his clothes were stripped from him.

The CZAR has commuted to degradation to the ranks the sentences of the eighteen young officers who were convicted of engaging in a revolutionary conspiracy and sentenced to exile in Siberia.

The vote of the Hawaiian Legislature ratifying the British loan stood 38 to 13. A further loan of $2,000,000 will be negotiated, if possible, in England.

A LONDON SCANDAL.

A Minister of the Gospel Attempts to Murder His Wife.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The people of London are so accustomed to the rumble and roar of financial sensations that it takes something really startling to wake them up to anything approaching a sense of excitement. That something they have now in the form of a social and religious scandal which has set the city in a whirl.

John Linwood, Baptist minister, came to London about four years ago from Michigan and settled here with his family, three children and a handsome wife. He appeared to be extremely religious and often occupied the pulpits of local Baptist churches, addressed Y.M.C.A. meetings and on several occasions preached in Methodist churches. Lately he opened an insurance agency, but still followed the preaching business on Sundays. A week ago Monday a coal stove in Linwood's house blew up when Mrs. Linwood, who was sitting beside it with her baby, had a miraculous escape. The fire was extinguished and the explosion attributed to gas, but a strong smell of gunpowder in the room was noticed. Mrs. Linwood agreed that the explosion had been caused by gas, but that very night she left Linwood and went to her mother, where she has remained ever since, refusing to go back to her husband or even see him.

On Saturday Rev. John Linwood learned that his brothers-in-law were looking for him and he skipped out, leaving a large number of creditors as well as his family. These mysterious circumstances caused an investigation which revealed that on the evening of the explosion of the stove Linwood placed a shovelful of coal in the stove a few minutes before the explosion. The stove did not need coal and his actions surprised his wife, who asked, "What are you doing to the stove?" Linwood suddenly left the house without saying a word, and a few minutes afterwards the explosion occurred. It was a wonder that both child and mother were not killed. The explosion wrecked half the house.

The above is on testimony of Mrs. Linwood, who, with all her relatives, believes that Linwood put the powder in the stove. Mrs. Linwood also confessed that her husband tried to poison her by giving her a dose of "rough on rats," but she did not take enough. This attempt Linwood confessed to his mother-in-law and brother-in-law, pleading that he was for a short time insane, and to prevent a scandal a reconciliation was effected.

It is currently reported and believed that Linwood has gone to join a girl in the Western States with whom he was in daily correspondence, having met and traveled with her on an evangelizing trip to the Western States. If Linwood can be found he will be arrested on a charge of attempt to murder.

THE FISHERY CONFERENCE.

Secretary Bayard Will Govern His Actions by the Feeling in Congress.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 29.—Hon. Mr. Foster, Minister of Fisheries, arrived this evening to aid Sir Charles Tupper in connection with the fisheries negotiations.

Messrs. Angell and Putnam this evening entertained Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Chamberlain, Judge Thompson and other distinguished visitors at dinner.

Mr. Cunningham Stewart, Superintendent of the Canadian Postal Savings Banks, who has spent the past four months examining the postal systems of Britain, France and the United States, has just concluded his enquiries here and will leave for Ottawa to-morrow.

It is generally believed here that Secretary Bayard will allow the Fishery conference to proceed without conceding any important points or finally agreeing upon any definite basis of settlement until Congress has met, after which he will govern his actions by the trend of public opinion ascertained through contact with his followers in Congress.

THE LABOR COMMISSION.

Proceedings In the Commissioners' Court At Yesterday's Sittings.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.

The Labor Commission was busily engaged yesterday. One of the principal carpenters and builders gave evidence which showed a far better state of things for good workmen than the journeymen had testified. The defects in benivolent societies and suggestions for their remedy was a new topic dealt with at some length. The evening session was principally occupied by half-a-dozen delegates from the Moulders' Society, who represented various branches of moulding. Their testimony was important, there being a unanimity of opinion that wages were too low, hours too long, piece work undesirable and house rent exorbitant. Emigration was also condemned, which flooded an already overstocked market. It is expected that other societies will in like manner send delegations. The list of witnesses is daily increasing.

The Kind of People We Are.

From The Chicago Canadian-American.

Those who suppose that Canada is to-day a suppliant at the feet of the United States make a great mistake. The country to the north of us was never more self-reliant than she is to-day, never better prepared to take care of herself.

THE JUDGESHIPS FILLED.

HUGH MACMAHON AND W. R. STREET RAISED TO THE BENCH.

The Former to the Court of Common Pleas and the Latter to the Court of Queen's Bench—Short Sketches of the New Justices.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—The question of the Ontario Judgeships was settled at to-day's Council meeting by the appointment of Mr. Hugh MacMahon, Q.C., of Toronto, as Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and W. P. R. Street, Q.C., of London, as Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, thus filling all the vacancies on the Superior Court Bench.

Justice MacMahon.

The appointment of Justice MacMahon will meet with the approbation of the Ontario bar, and more particularly of that portion of it practising in Toronto, where Mr. MacMahon has made many warm friends. When his appointment was first mooted it was generally endorsed as a happy choice on the part of the Government, and it was freely admitted that when the dignity had been conferred on Mr. MacMahon the Bench would gain a gentleman in every way qualified to discharge the duties pertaining to it, bringing to the office high qualities of mind and a kindness of manner that make him respected by all.

In 1858 Justice MacMahon began his career in the legal profession under Thos. Robertson, Q.C., then practising in Dundas. He was called to the bar in 1864, when he entered into partnership with his brother, the late Thos. B. MacMahon, Judge of the County of Norfolk. A few years afterwards he began business for himself in London, Ontario, where his ability as a lawyer secured for him a high reputation and a very extensive practice. In 1876 he was created Queen's Council by the Ontario Government and in 1885 the Dominion Ministry conferred upon him a similar honor. In 1877 he represented the Dominion Government in the arbitration between the Federal Government and the Province of Ontario in the dispute over the Western and Northwestern boundaries. In 1884 he was sent to England as one of the counsel for the Dominion when the boundary question was submitted to Her Majesty's Privy Council. As a criminal lawyer Mr. MacMahon distinguished himself in the celebrated Biddulph tragedy case, in which he pleaded successfully for the prisoners, five of whom were arraigned. He twice sought parliamentary honors—in 1872 and again in 1878—but sustained defeat at the hands of Hon. John Carling in London and Mr. Rufus Stephenson in Kent. In 1883 Mr. MacMahon removed to Toronto, where he has since practiced his profession. Mr. MacMahon was married in 1864 to the eldest daughter of Simon Mackenzie of Belleville.

Justice Street.

William Purvis Rochfort Street, LL.B., is just 46 years of age. He took his degree in law at the University of Toronto in 1863, having been admitted to the bar some three or so years before that date. He has always practiced in London and in the west, where he is well and favorably known. He was first a partner of old Mr. Becher; his present partner is young Mr. Becher, the firm's style being Street & Becher. Mr. Street has been best known as an equity and real estate lawyer. He was Chairman of the Northwest Halfbreed Claim Commission of 1885, and as such did good service for the country. Mrs. Street is a cousin of Mrs. Falconbridge.

How the Courts of Ontario Are Now Constituted.

The Ontario courts are now complete. The judges are apportioned thus:

COURT OF APPEAL.

Hagarty, C. J., Patterson, J., Burton, J., Osler, J.

A Smash on the Pennsylvania Railway.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—There was a great crash on the Pennsylvania Railway, Camden branch, near Hightstown, N.J., this morning. Passenger train No. 304, bound to New York, ran into a coal train near the old bridge, making both trains a complete wreck. Engineer Joseph H. Smith of the passenger train was crushed and is believed to have sustained fatal injuries. Charles Hunt, baggagemaster of the passenger train, was also dangerously injured. A number of the passengers were badly hurt, but no one was killed.

Sharp Gets a New Trial.

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 29.—The Court of Appeals has reversed the decison in the Sharp case and ordered a new trial.

Sharp received the news of the reversal of the decision in his case and the ordering of a new trial without any emotion whatever. He seemed to take little interest in the matter. Since his conviction he has fallen into a moody state of indifference to all outward things, from which it seems impossible to rouse him.

COMMERCIAL UNION AT PICTON.

A MEETING was held at Picton last week, at which addresses in favor of Commercial Union were delivered. The first act, after the appointment of a chairman, was the reading of a letter from Mr. G. W. McMullen, in which he advocated the scheme. Mr. McMullen not so long ago had a meeting called in Prince Edward County at which he advocated Annexation.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, of Belleville, must have forgotten himself when he asserted that few deny that Commercial Union would be of advantage. A great many—we believe a large majority of the people—are convinced, and have good reason for believing, that it would decidedly be an injury to Canada.

Mr. Johnson argued that by Commercial Union Canada would not give up control of her tariff. It would, he said, be like a partnership. But would Canada be a partner on equal terms with the United States? It would be more like a joint stock company, and the one with the largest stock (or most population) would have the control. That one would be the United States, and Canada would, if it foolishly adopted the scheme, hand over to the United States control of its customs and inland revenue rates and laws.

Mr. Geo. D. Dickson, Q. C., asserted that the statement that Canada would have to adopt the United States tariff was an untruth. 'Twas Mr. Wiman said it. In a published letter Mr. Wiman said that "the result would that by the operation of a uniform continental tariff, equal in height to that always prevailing in the United States the goods and merchandise of all foreign countries, including Great Britain, would be discriminated against in favor of American manufactures." That certainly would be the result of Commercial Union.

Dr. Platt, M.P., who declared at Toronto that he was prepared to discuss annexation, said at Picton:—

"For his part he did not wish to injure British connection, but he was aiming at continental free trade and he was going to shoot that way. If British connection put itself in range and caught a bullet it would be no fault of his."

Dr. Platt added that he expected to be called a traitor. He may have known what name would suitably describe him, but we propose to flatter him to this extent—he is more honest than some Commercial Unionists who assert that the scheme would strengthen our connection with the Empire.

A resolution was adopted urging the Government to accept free trade with the United States if it was offered by that country. The idea of the resolution will not probably be carried out, because the United States is not likely to propose it and because Canada is not prepared to accept it.

IT is said that the Commercial Unionists are going to send a deputation to Washington so that "the sentiments of the whole people of Canada could be made known." How did the C. U. Club of Toronto, or any of their fellow-laborers in Halifax, receive authority to speak for the people? The spectacle of Prof. Goldwin Smith enlightening Sir Charles Tupper regarding Canadian public opinion would be decidedly rich.

THE New York World says:—"We are keeping up a constantly recurring diplomatic row with England and Canada for the privilege of paying a high price for fish." Well, you brought it on yourselves. You ended the Reciprocity Treaty, and also the fishery clauses of the Washington Treaty. Which of these arrangements do you want renewed?

SENATOR Blackburn, of Kentucky, complains that in the United States the importation of the "St. James" version of the Bible is taxed, while the revised version, "which has not the name 'hell' in it" was admitted free. The Senator may be well versed in customs laws, but he certainly is not in Scripture.

REVIEWS.

THE METHODIST MAGAZINE.—The December number of this Magazine is a special Christmas number, with a Christmas Story by J. Jackson Wray; a Christmas Sermon by Archdeacon Farrar; extracts from John Wesley's Journal, showing how he spent seventeen Christmas days; a beautiful illustrated article by the late Lady Brassey, with 12 fine engravings, full of touching Christmas memories; Memorials of John Wesley, with nine engravings of interesting souvenirs of the founder of Methodism; the British Princes at the Antipodes, with six engravings; a stirring, patriotic paper on "Canada: Its Extent and Resources," by D. E. Cameron, Esq., together with numerous other articles. This successful Magazine, which is now entering on its twenty-seventh volume, makes a highly attractive announcement for 1888. Among other features will be a series of handsome illustrated articles, on "Our own country," by the Editor, "Picturesque Ireland," "Round About England," "Landmarks of History," "Here and There in Europe," "Land of the Pharaohs," "Asia Minor and the Levant," and "Bible Lands," "Life in China," "In the German Fatherland," "Alaska and the North Pacific Coast," "In the High Alps," "Toronto as it Was and as it Is." "Picturesque Niagara," "The English Lakes," "Corea, the Hermit Nation," "Tourist Notes in Cuba," and many other articles. Most of these will include copiously illustrated articles. A Serial Story, "The Lost Silver of Briffault," by the distinguished author, Amelia E. Barr—said to be of remarkable interest—is announced. Also "Dick Curnow," a story of Cornish Methodism and Cornish Smuggling, by Mark Guy Pearse. "Squire Harness of Crowthorpe Hall," by J. Jackson Wray, author of "Nestleton Magna." "A Boycott and Its Consequences," a Land League Irish Story of to-day, and many other features of special interest, including "Daily Life of the Insane," by Dr. Daniel Clarke, Supt. of Toronto Lunatic Asylum. "The Story of Metlakahtla," "Vagabond Vignettes," "Methodism in the Black Country." "The Miseries of a Palace," etc., etc.

OUR FORESTS.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—An advertisement by the Ontario Administration gives notice that certain timber berths will offered by public auction on the 15th of December.

Apart from our interest in this property in common with the rest of the Province, the people of Peterborough have also a special interest in it. A considerable portion of the crown forest thus to be alienated is in our our own back country—in townships of Haliburton, &c. It is almost the only forest land in this district, or indeed in this Province eastward of Algoma, that still remains public property. I very much doubt the expediency of allowing it to be appropriated, and this for several reasons. From the rapidly approaching scarcity of pine timber the property must augment in value, and to sacrifice it now in order to raise ready money seems too much like the reckless expenditure of a spendthrift. Its alienation must lead before long to the destruction of this sole surviving public forest of this region, and to the abandonment of the last chance of maintaining a permanent forest after the system of civilized countries. In view of the acknowledged climatic evils resulting from too closely stripping the woodlands of Ontario, is it not folly to surrender to destruction this last great wind break against northern blasts and to denude the heights from which rise important feeders of our waters, so valuable for purposes of navigation and for the power they afford? As a general rule the land once stript of its trees would be almost valueless, the bulk of it not being well adapted for agricultural settlement. For all these reasons I hold that the sale of these timber berths is a mistake on the part of the Ontario authorities, and I hope it is not yet too late to withdraw them, or at least to put such a high reserve price upon them as to prevent them from being sacrificed unless for something like an adequate compensation.

Apart from a desire to turn a part of our Provincial capital into revenue, the only reason that can be advanced for this sale is the risk of fire. I cannot deem this an adequate reason in Ontario any more than it would be in Germany, France and other civilized countries with their valuable public forests. As is the case there, sufficient fire breaks might be cut and would afford a very efficient safeguard. The greatest source of danger, the clearing fires of settlers, need not be incurred, for the district has not been opened for settlement and it should not be. The Province has still plenty of good land for agricultural settlers and it is mere cruelty to lure them onto the rocks of a stript pine forest, when they might make rich farms elsewhere.

I would regret to see Ontario deprived of the last chance of retaining a public forest worthy of it, and this district of the benefit of a reserve of timber.

If I am not mistaken the very lands in question was among those Mr. Phipps so urgently advised should be reserved for permanent forest. I would much like to know his opinion of this short-sighted devastation, though it would not be fair to ask him to publish it, as it would place him in an awkward position as a government official. It is a pity that his employers have not benefitted by his sensible advice.

Yours truly,
FORESTER.

Care of Frozen Plants.

When by any mishap the plants, whether in parlor or greenhouse, become frozen, either at once remove them (taking care not to touch the leaves) to some place warm enough to be just above the point of freezing; or, if there are too many to do that, get up the fire as rapidly as possible, and raise the temperature. The usual advice is to sprinkle the leaves and shade the plants from the sun. We have never found either remedy of any avail with frozen plants, and the sprinkling is often a serious injury if done before the temperature is above the freezing point. In our experience with thousands of frozen plants, we have tried all manner of expediments, and found no better method than to get them out of the freezing atmosphere as quickly as possible; and we have also found that the damage is in proportion to the succulent condition of the plant and the intensity of the freezing. Just what degree of cold plants in any condition can endure without injury we are unable to state. Plants are often frozen so that the leaves hang down, but when thawed out are found to be not at all injured. At another time the same low temperature acting on the same kind of plants may kill them outright if they happen to be growing more thriftily, and are full of sap. Much depends on the temperature at which plants have been growing. When the frost is penetrating into a greenhouse or room in which plants are kept, and the heating arrangements are inadequate to keep it out, the best thing to do is to cover the plants with paper (newspapers) or sheeting. Thus protected, most plants will be enabled to resist four or five degrees of frost. Paper is better than sheeting for this purpose.—American Agriculturist.

THE FIRST PART.

Without answering Agnes pointed to a chair. She could do this, and, for the time, she could do no more. All that she had read of the hidden and sinister life in the palace at Venice; all that she had heard of Montbarry's melancholy death and burial in a foreign land; all that she knew of the mystery of Ferrari's disappearance, rushed into her mind when the black robed figure confronted her, standing just inside the door. The strange conduct of Lady Montbarry added a new perplexity to the doubts and misgivings that troubled her. There stood the adventuress whose character had left its mark on society all over Europe—the Fury who had terrified Mrs. Ferrari at the hotel—inconceivably transformed into a timid, shrinking woman! Lady Montbarry had not once ventured to look at Agnes since she had made her way into the room. Advancing to take the chair that had been pointed out to her, she hesitated, put her hand on the rail to support herself, and still remained standing. "Please give me a moment to compose myself," she said, faintly. Her head sank on her bosom; she stood before Agnes like a conscious culprit before a merciless judge.

The silence that followed was, literally, the silence of fear on both sides. In the midst of it the door was opened once more, and Henry Westwick appeared.

He looked at Lady Montbarry with a moment's steady attention, bowed to her with formal politeness and passed on in silence. At the sight of her husband's brother the sinking spirit of the woman sprung to life again. Her drooping figure became erect. Her eyes met Westwick's look, brightly defiant. She returned his bow with an icy smile of contempt.

Henry crossed the room to Agnes.

"Is Lady Montbarry here by your invitation?" he asked quietly.

"No."

"Do you wish to see her?"

"It is very painful to me to see her."

He turned and looked at his sister-in-law.

"Do you hear that?" he asked, coldly.

"I hear it," she answered, more coldly still.

"Your visit is, to say the least of it, ill timed."

"Your interference is, to say the least of it, out of place."

With this retort, Lady Montbarry approached Agnes. The presence of Henry Westwick seemed at once to relieve and embolden her. "Permit me to ask my question, Miss Lockwood," she said, with graceful courtesy. "It is nothing to embarrass you. When the Courier Ferrari applied to my late husband for employment, did you"— Her resolution failed her before she could say more. She sunk trembling into the nearest chair, and, after a moment's struggle, composed herself again. "Did you permit Ferrari," she resumed, "to make sure of being chosen for our courier by using your name?"

Agnes did not reply with her customary directness. Trifling as it was, the reference to Montbarry, proceeding from that woman, of all others, confused and agitated her.

"I have known Ferrari's wife for many years," she began. "And I take an interest"—

Lady Montbarry abruptly lifted her hands with a gesture of entreaty. "Ah, Miss Lockwood, don't waste time by talking of his wife. Answer my plain question plainly."

"Let me answer her," Henry whispered. "I will undertake to speak plainly enough."

Agnes refused by a gesture. Lady Montbarry's interruption had roused her sense of what was due to herself. She resumed her reply in plainer terms.

"When Ferrari wrote to the late Lord Montbarry," she said, "he did certainly mention my name."

Even now, she had innocently failed to see the object which her visitor had in view. Lady Montbarry's impatience became ungovernable. She started to her feet and advanced to Agnes.

"Was it with your knowledge and permission that Ferrari used your name?" she asked. "The whole soul of my question is in that. For God's sake, answer me—Yes or No!"

"Yes."

That one word struck Lady Montbarry as a blow might have struck her. The fierce life that had animated her face the instant before faded out of it suddenly and left her like a woman turned to stone. She stood, mechanically confronting Agnes with an stillness so rapt and perfect that not even the breath she drew was perceptible to the two persons who were looking at her.

Henry spoke to her roughly. "Rouse yourself," he said. "You have received your answer."

She looked at him. "I have received my sentence," she rejoined, and turned slowly to leave the room.

To Henry's astonishment, Agnes stopped her. "Wait a moment, Lady Montbarry; I have something to ask on my side."

Lady Montbarry paused on the instant—silently submissive as if she had heard a word of command. Henry drew Agnes away to the other end of the room and remonstrated with her.

"You do wrong to call that person back," he said.

"No," Agnes whispered. "I have had time to remember."

"To remember what?"

"To remember Ferrari's wife; Lady Montbarry may have heard something of the lost man."

"Lady Montbarry may have heard, but she won't tell."

"It may be so, Henry, but for Emily's sake I must try."

"Your kindness is inexhaustible," he said, with his admiration of her kindling in his eyes. "Always thinking of others; never of yourself!"

Meanwhile Lady Montbarry waited with a resignation that could endure any delay. Agnes returned to her, leaving Henry by himself. "Pardon me for keeping you waiting," she said, in her gentle, courteous way. "You have spoken of Ferrari. I wish to speak of him, too."

Lady Montbarry bent her head in silence. Her hand trembled as she took out her handkerchief and passed it over her forehead. Agnes detected the trembling and shrunk back a step. "Is the subject painful to you?" she asked, timidly.

Still silent, Lady Montbarry invited her by a wave of the hand to go on. Henry approached attentively watching his sister-in-law. Agnes went on:

HENRY TAYLOR'S VICTIMS.

THEY MEET AND DISCUSS THE SITUATION OF AFFAIRS.

They Feel Disposed to Have the ex-President in the Criminal Courts and Make a Motion to That Effect, but Action is Deferred for the Present.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The victims of Henry Taylor and his party had a full opportunity of free speech at the meeting of the Ontario Investment Association held this afternoon in the Board of Trade rooms. Violent language was plentiful.

In the absence of President Daniel McFie, the chair was occupied by F. A. Fitzgerald, who opened the proceedings by stating that since the last meeting of the shareholders notice had been sent to all delinquent shareholders to pay their obligations before Dec. 1 or legal proceedings would be taken.

W. R. Meredith reported that this plan had brought several delinquents to time, among whom were Frank Cooper, John Elliott, and John Gurd, these having now secured their stock, while Mr. Hugh McMahon had made a compromise.

In reply to a question asked by A. O. Graydon, W. R. Meredith said that Isaiah Danks, late director of the Bank of London and ex-director of the Ontario Investment Association was debtor to the association for large sums, being responsible for $33,000 and a note for $2700. On neither of these obligations had anything been paid, and nothing was known of the chances for payment. The meeting was also informed that the name held by them for the above amount was not good.

A. O. Graydon and Arthur Wallace held that Isaiah Danks was a party and tool to Henry Taylor's acts, and urged that Danks be proceeded against criminally, Mr. Wallace saying that the charge of obtaining money under false pretences might be proved against Danks.

The meeting was informed that W. P. R. Street had received a cablegram from the English bondholders suggesting that some independent person be appointed to classify and examine the securities of the association in order to show the bondholders they would be safe in waiting for payment. This suggestion was favorably received.

Ven. Archdeacon Marsh held that the first claims on the association were those of the English and Scotch bondholders. They must be paid in full no matter who had to suffer, as that was the only way to save London's credit in the financial markets of the Old Country. These remarks were unanimously concurred in by the meeting, and action was taken accordingly.

A list of shareholders who had borrowed more money on their stock than had been paid in was submitted. It was resolved to withhold the list from publication.

Mr. W. R. Meredith denied the assertion that Daniel MacFie was a defaulter. That person held 5000 shares, on which he paid $25,000 cash, and the balance of his obligations were secured.

Then followed an exciting debate as to the manner of prosecuting Henry Taylor and the other defaulters.

W. R. Meredith said that grave consideration should be given to the matter of criminally prosecuting for various reasons, it being known that others are guilty of almost as much dishonesty as Henry Taylor and further, Taylor was liable to die at any moment.

Mr. R. M. Meredith conscientiously disbelieved the statement that Henry Taylor was any worse than when he stole the money. Justice must not be defeated by such a subterfuge as shamming ill.

M. D. Frazer said Taylor might drop dead at any moment, he was so bad.

A. O. Graydon held that was a reason why prosecution should be prompt.

After a long discussion two resolutions were voted on by the meeting. One to prosecute criminally every director and officer against whom a charge could be proved was lost. The following was carried:

That the matter of criminal prosecution against Henry Taylor and other officers and directors of the Association be deferred, and that Arthur Wallace, H. Thompson, John Johnson, A. O. Graydon and James Griffiths be a committe to examine all books and report on the specific charges.

Many of those present did not wish to waste time by adjourning in order to give the committee a chance to make an investigation, as a five minutes' search would reveal enough. The meeting adjourned, however, for a week.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

A Warrant of Extradition Issued in the Case of Byrne, the Chicago Butcher.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—Contracts for about fifty miles of the Oxford and New Glasgow Railway have been let by the Department of Railways and Canals in four sections, as follows: Sections one and three to J. O'Brien of Renfrew, Ont., and Thomas Cooke of Oxford, N.S.; section two to D. Sutherland of Shubenacadie, N.S.; section four to Archie Stewart and Ralph Jones, of Ottawa. The total cost of the four sections will be about $400,000.

The Deputy Minister of Marine to-day received a telegram from the agent of the Marine Department at Quebec acquainting him of the fact that the steamer Henri Quatre, which had been held pending the result of a suit, had been released from the admiralty court.

The Quarantine service at Grosse Isle, River St. Lawrence, has been discontinued for the season.

This morning the judges met in the Supreme Court and fixed Thursday, Dec. 13, for giving judgment in the cases on the old list and in some on the new. An adjournment was then formally made to that date.

The Conservatives of Hull are waking up and propose not only to form a Liberal Conservative Association, but to build a suitable hall in which to hold meetings.

The rumor is again revived that Mr. Baird, M. P. for Queen's, has forwarded his resignation to the speaker.

A valuable watch has been forwarded for presentation to Capt. George Ritchie of the barque Batchelor, of Yarmouth, N. S., by President Cleveland as a recognition for human services. The presentation will be made in public.

The Department of Justice yesterday issued a warrant for the extradition of M. J. Byrne, in custody at Chatham, Ont., on a charge of arson. Byrne is a Chicago butcher and is wanted there for setting fire to his shop to get the insurance.

There is trouble in the Liberal camp here over the appointment of a license commissioner to succeed Ald. A. C. Larose. Mr. E. H. Bronson, M.P.P., wants Mr. E. P. Leblanche appointed, while Le Club National is urging the appointment of Mr. Cheviere. The trouble in the ranks is causing no little talk among the local Liberals, who, however, expect to see Mr. Bronson's man get there.

Sir Fred Middleton and his A.D.C., Capt. Wise, will leave for Winnipeg to-morrow night, and when there will meet Sir A. P. Caron, who leaves Victoria for the east to-morrow night. Gen. Middleton will inspect the School of Infantry in Winnipeg, but will not visit British Columbia at present. He will probably go there in the spring to inspect "C" Battery.

Hon. W. W. Lynch, Judge Burbidge and Mr. A. C. Bingman, the commissioners to settle the dispute between the Indians and the settlers in Dundee Township, were in the city to-day on business connected with the commission, the sittings of which have been adourned until Tuesday, when argument of council will be held. The trouble arises out of old leases, many of them for very long periods, of land of which the Indians now wish to regain possession and most of which has been very greatly improved. The amount involved is something like half a million dollars.

The value of the Mounted Police Riding School, burnt at Regina yesterday, was $35,000, not $40,000 as stated in the press despatch. The Government has ordered an investigation into the cause of the fire.

The Department of Fisheries has been put in possession of the papers in connection with the seizure of the Onward, engaged in the Behring Sea seal fisheries. They will be transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Commercial Union or Political Annexation.

From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Paper.

Mr. Goldwin Smith's letter to the New York Chamber of Commerce says so much that is true and admirable in favor of Commercial Union between Canada and the United States, that one is compelled to regret that he should have maintained so strict a silence relative to the effect such union would have on Canada's present political union with Great Britain. Commercial Union, as advocated by Goldwin Smith, involves the severance of the political union of Canada and England. The same consequence has been inferred from the same cause by all the British statesmen who have deigned to consider the matter at any time during the last thirty years. Goldwin Smith knows Canada and is a fervent friend of her interests. He is also an intelligent observer of her industrial dependence on American markets. His letter will do great good, but the union it points to is something more than commercial.

The Right of Veto.

From Le Canada, Ottawa.

In the opinion of The Ottawa Free Press, the English minority in the Province of Quebec would have as much guarantee of protection if the Imperial Government was substituted to the Federal Government, in regard to the exercise of the right of veto. This is an error. In Canada the English minority in question is represented in the Federal Parliament, whilst it is not the case in the British Parliament. In Canada it is subjected to a power responsible to the people, its electors, whilst the British Parliament is not responsible to the people of Canada, on whom they do not depend.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 30

The grain market at home was active and prices were strong. In Chicago wheat closed ¼c lower, while corn remained unchanged, having sold up to 61½c, which is the highest this season. Pork, lard and ribs were all very strong, closing 45c, 10c and 22c respectively higher than last night.

The report of receipts of hogs from the Chicago Stock Yards to-day is: Receipts 33,000, Cattle receipts 10,000. Market dull.

On sale at the Corn Exchange to-day:—No. 1 spring wheat was offered at 82c on track. For No. 1 spring 81c was bid, and 85c for No. 1 red winter. No. 2 red winter was offered at 80c, with 83½c bid.

Miss Breezy (of Chicago)—Oh, yes, young Mr. Wabash is immensely wealthy, by inheritance. He was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, you know.

Miss Shawsgarden (of St. Louis)—Was he, indeed? I should imagine from the way he eats that he was born with a knife in his mouth.—Epoch.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat; pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

A Fine Display.

We notice Messrs. Breeze & Bain are making a fine display in cutlery and silver plated ware. d125 has struck the grocery trade, at Elliott & Tierney's, where you can get first-class goods, new, fresh, and sold at lowest prices. See their new Fruits, Peels, &c.

A Big Boom.

Dismissed.

John Bryerson was before the court this morning on the charge of having been disorderly in a public place. He acknowledged that he had a little time, but as it was his first offence he was allowed to go without a fine.

A Fine Number.

Mr. Thos. Menzies has placed on our table the superb Christmas number of the London Illustrated News. It contains many fine illustrations, besides several handsome colored plates, and is altogether an excellent production.

Enlarged.

The Burk's Falls Arrow, which is published by Mr. W. A. Kelsey, formerly of Peterborough, has been enlarged and is now about double its former size. The Arrow is a very good local paper, with a keen eye to the requirements of its district, and we are pleased to see that it is appreciated.

An Explanation.

Some misunderstanding may exist as to the time the last day upon which the taxes may be paid without the extra 5 per cent. The collectors notice reads "on or before the first of December." So that tax payers who have not paid, have to-morrow to pay their bills. Up till 3 o'clock to-day the receipts at the Collector's office were $8,500.

Truth Better than Fiction.

Its an old saying and true that "paper will never refuse ink." It is also true that a great deal of reading matter is fiction The day is past when the public can be deceived on the Dry Goods question. H. S. Griffin & Co. are prepared to show their goods and compare prices and leave the result with the buyer. No house in the trade can buy cheaper or sell at smaller profit. For the balance of the year they intend giving big drives in Dry Goods Mantles and Millinery. 2d123-1w48

The Protestant Home.

The Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home thankfully acknowledge the following donations for November:—Mrs. Fairweather, parcel of clothing; from a Friend, $1.00 worth of bread tickets; Mrs. W. G. Thompson, washstand and sundries; Mrs. J. B. McWilliams, crib and parcel of clothing; Mrs. J. A. Hall, for Daniel Burgess, $5.00; Mrs. Dennistoun, parcel of clothing; Mr. Wallis, bag of apples and cabbage; Y. W. C. T. U., bread; from Cordach, turkey; Mrs. Robert Nicholls, 2 turkeys and a goose; Miss Nicholls, jar of preserves and currant loaf; a Friend, cakes; Ladies of Baptist Church, bread; Mrs. Ferguson, High Park, parcel of clothing; Mr. B. Laurence, 6 pairs of spectacles; Mrs. Jas. Best, potted meat; Mrs. Fowler, bag of turnips; Mrs. Weller, for Daniel Burgess, $2.00.

Would be a Good Appointment.

The Port Hope Times says:—"Mr. John Carnegie, ex-M.P.P., is mentioned as Judge Clark's successor on the Trent Valley Canal Commission. The appointment would be a good one."

Be Sure and Here

the celebrated lecturer, Rev. John E. Lanceley, in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Friday evening, this week, Dec. 2nd. Come in crowds. Silver collection in aid of Sunday School. 3dec127

Evening Entertainment.

A successful evening entertainment was held in the St. Luke's Church school room on Monday evening. The programme consisted of selections from Tom Moor's works, Readings, songs, and instrumental music was given and a short sketch of the poet's life was read.

Farmer's Institute.

A meeting of the farmers of the West Riding of Peterborough was held in the Council Chamber this afternoon, for the purpose of organizing a Farmer's Institute. Officers were elected and several men present made addresses and suggestions. The meeting adjourned at half past three o'clock.

The Smallest Rate.

There is but one efficient way
To publish "WANTS" from day to day,
And that is through the REVIEW, indeed,
That finds for every want and need
A prompt return and quick reply,
That never fails to satisfy,
And what is more, tis well to state
At very far from largest rate.

Panoramic Performance.

The illuminated illustrations given in the George Street Methodist Church school room by the Rev. J. T. Dowling on Tuesday night gave satisfaction to the large audience. The first scene shown was that of the Creation, which was magnificent. About three quarters of the scenes shown were different from those show on the night previous. The receipts at the two exhibitions was about $70.

Dangerous Practice.

On Tuesday evening an employee at Mr. Johnston Carey's store went out to the back door to empty some ashes from the iron ash pan. While in the act of emptying the ashes he was started by a sudden whiz and a sharp noise. He looked at the pan which he held in his hand and found that a hole had been pierced through the sheet iron. It is supposed that someone had been practising with an air gun as no report was heard.

LADIES German made Clouds and Fascinators in new designs and beautiful colors at TURNBULL'S.

Judgment Reserved.

The following local legal cases came up at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday:—

Cox v. Cavanagh.—Moss, Q.C., for the plaintiff, moved absolute an order nisi to set aside the defendant's verdict in an action of ejectment tried at Peterborough before O'Connor, J., and a jury, and to enter judgment for the plaintiff. Watson and Moore (Peterborough), for the defendant, contra. Reserved.

Peterborough Real Estate Co. v. Patterson.—Robinson, Q.C., and Hall (Peterborough) for the plaintiff, McCarthy, Q.C., J. K. Kerr, Q.C., Edminson (Peterborough) and Clute (Belleville) for the several defendants. Appeal by plaintiffs from the judgment of Wilson, C.J., upon a special case submitted for construction of a will. Reserved.

Municipal Election.

Preparations are being made for the approaching municipal elections. Tuesday evening the deputy returning officers were appointed and the polling places fixed. At the mission school, the polling place for No. 1 ward, Mr. Joseph Lundy will be the Deputy Returning Officer and Mr. A. Williams Poll Clerk; at the Council Chamber, the polling place for No. 2 ward, Mr. Chas. Cameron will be the Deputy Returning Officer and Mr. Alex. Graham the Poll Clerk; at Rathbun & Co's. office, the polling place for No. 3 ward, Mr. John Irwin will be the Deputy Returning Officer and Mr. J. G. Macdonald the Poll Clerk; and at Wm. Lee's shop, the polling place for No. 4 ward, Mr. Wm. Lee will be Deputy Returning Officer and Mr. F. Mason the Poll Clerk.

DRESS-MAKING! We are pleased to announce that Miss Johnston, the accomplished Dress-Maker at TURNBULL'S, is delighting everybody with her work. She is introducing many new Styles into Peterborough, is prompt and obliging, and with TURNBULL'S extensive range of Fashionable Dress Goods at her disposal, is prepared to satisfy the most exacting taste on the shortest notice. Prices always right and consistant with First Class Work.

Presentation.

On Tuesday evening the members of the class taught in the Charlotte Street Church Sunday School by Mrs. Geo. A. Cox, waited upon their teacher at her house and presented her with a fine large photograph of the members of the class accompanied by the following address:—

Mrs. Cox.

Dear Friend and Sabbath School Teacher

We, the undersigned members of your Sunday School class, beg that you will accept this picture as a slight token of the regard in which you are held by us.

We take this opportunity of expressing our regret at your departure from amongst us and of wishing you continued happiness.

Signed on behalf of the class

R. Gillespie, S. Rubidge,
J. Allen, J. Gillespie,
J. Alford, W. Battin,
M. Lyle.

Mrs. Cox replied to the address, thanking them for their kind wishes and pretty gift. She hoped that the class would be well attended in the future as in in the past and that its members would reap much good from the seed sown their.

A Peculiar Petition.

A petition was presented at the Council Chamber which somewhat resembles Mark Twain's "beef contract" story. In 1861 John Costello bought Lot No. 6 west of George street and north of Townsend street at a tax sale for the sum of $6.30. The said sum was paid to the Town Treasurer and the purchaser entered into possession of the lot. At his death he willed it to his son Patrick. It since turns out that at the time of the sale of the lot for taxes it was not patented and was therefore not liable to be sold for taxes. This makes the deed which Patrick Costello received from his father null and void. Afterwards the piece of land which John Costello thought he pruchased was transferred, among other property, to the Town Trust Commissioners, who sold it and got the money for it. Patrick Costello now petitions the Council to return the $6.30 paid, together with the interest since the time of payment. At current rates of interest the $6.30 and interest would amount to about $27.00.

THE TOWN'S LEGISLATORS MEET AND DO BUSINESS.

Matters of Finance—A Breeze About Sidewalks — Communications Accounts, Etc.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening. There were present:—His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Hartley, Menzies, Douglass, Telland, McNeil, McNaughton, Davidson, Cahill and Kendry.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were read:—

From E. B. Edwards sending a draft of the bill to legalize the by-law recently passed raising money for bridge building.—Received.

From Mrs. Barrie asking for assistance.—Court of Revision.

From P. Costello asking for the return of $6.30 (and interest), which was paid by his father for lot in 1861 on the understanding that he was purchasing it. It turned out that the sale was illegal and the land was sold by the Town Trust Commissioners.—Finance Committee.

From W. Breckinridge asking for a sidewalk on Chamberlain Street.—Street and Bridge Inspector.

From Geo. G. Brown asking a remission of dog tax. Granted when he takes the statutary declaration.

From Wm. Hamilton Co. asking that some old hose and a hose reel be placed in a building near his factory.—Fire Water and Light Committee.

From the Y.M.C.A., asking for remission of taxes.—Received.

From T. H. Denne and H. C. Lynch asking for a crossing on Charlotte street.—Received.

From Ellen Angelsye, Mrs. Thornton, Margaret Sheehy, Susan Walsh, Mrs. Plunkett and Mrs. Joseph Sabiliere, asking for the remission of taxes.—Court of Revision.

From E. Harris asking a rebate of butcher's license.—Granted.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented:—

|---|---|
| Wm. Snowdon | $ 1 00 |
| John McFarlane, work on fire alarm | 6 00 |
| A. McDonnel, timber | 579 60 |
| Royal Insurance Co., insurance | 7 00 |
| J. P. Hurley, R. R. ticket | 2 00 |
| W. H. Roberts, repairs to police calls | 3 75 |
| Kingan & Co, spikes | 5 50 |
| J. P. Hurley, R. R. ticket for indigent | 2 00 |
| Fitzgerald & Stanger, account | 46 40 |
| Nicholls Hospital, demand for October | 192 41 |
| Mark Curtis, brick | 6 75 |
| E. C. Hill, account | 8 00 |
| E. C. Hill, acount | 15 00 |
| M. H. Halpin, charity orders | 20 00 |
| Times Printing Co. | 40 24 |

The accounts of Wm. Snowden, John McFarlane, Royal Insurance Company, Fitzgerald & Stanger (when certified to) and Mark Curtis were ordered to be paid. The rest were referred to the Finance Committee.

Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Geo. Roger was heard in reference to the application of the Y. M. C. A. for remission of taxes. He said that the Associations was conducted in the interest of the young men of the town. It was non-sectarian and their work was of a purely philanthropic nature. A reading room was kept open to the young men all week. He pointed to exemption enjoyed by similar institutions—the Mechanics' Institute and the Barnardo Homes.

It was agreed that the taxes be remitted less the school tax.

Mr. Roger, on behalf of the Association, returned thanks.

TAXES REMITTED.

Councillor KENDRY moved, seconded by Councillor HARTLY.—That the taxes of John Newton and Alexander McNeil be remitted less school tax.—Carried.

CROSSING.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON.—That a crossing be put down on Charlotte street in front of the Chamberlan block.—Carried.

FINANCE.

Councillor DAVIDSON read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Councillors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend the payment of the following accounts:—

|---|---|
| Little Lake Cemetery Co. | $ 2 00 |
| The Rathbun Co | 59 38 |
| J. P. Hurley, Railway Tickets | 7 55 |
| Fortye & Phelan | 80 79 |
| W. J. Mason | 60 00 |
| Kingan & Co. | 94 73 |
| M. Curtis & Son | 30 52 |

Your committee would also recommend the auditors be paid twenty-five dollars each for additional services.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. S. DAVIDSON,
Chairman.

Peterborough, Nov. 25th, 1887.

Councillor DAVIDSON moved the adoption.

Councillor KENDRY moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor HARTLY.—That the account of Kingan & Co., amounting to $15 be paid.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON took objection to this. This account was for a revolver bought by Chief Cooper, without any instructions. If the officials of this town was going to buy things like that they had a right to pay for what they bought.

Councillor KENDRY said that he had instructed Chief Cooper to buy the revolver. The report, as amended, was adopted.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

Councillor MCNEIL read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report: that they asked for tenders to supply the hose waggon and hook and ladder truck with runners; that they have awarded the contract to Messrs. Mein & Crocker to supply the same, the cost to be fifty dollars.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

ALEXDREW MCNEIL,
Chr. F. W. & L. Committee.

The report was adopted.

SIDEWALK.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to put down a sidewalk on the North side of Chamberlain street.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON upbraided Councillor Cahill for having allowed a long sidewalk in No. Four Ward at the suggestion of a rich man, when the people on Chamberlain street were petitioning.

Councillor CAHILL said that Councillor McNaughton voted in favor of the No. Four Ward sidewalk being put down.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON—No, sir; no no.

Councillor CAHILL—Well, you voted to have it referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with power to act, which amounts to the same thing. If the Council tells the Committee to act, why, they must act, that's all.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON contended that he did not vote for it being referred to the Committee.

Councillor CAHILL—Turn up the minutes Mr. Clerk.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON—Yes; turn up the minutes.

The Clerk turned up the minutes.

Councillor CAHILL.—Did Mr. McNaughton record his vote against it.

The CLERK—No.

There was considerable talk about the tendency of the Councillors to "stand in" with their constituents at this time of the year.

BY-LAW.

A By-law read to appoint Deputy Returning Officers and the fixing of polling places for use at the municipal elections. It was read three times and passed.

Councillor DAVIDSON moved, seconded by Councillor CAHILL—That the Treasurer be instructed to draw his cheque in favor of Mr. Cummings, Tax Collector, for $11.25 for taxes on property used by the Corporation as a wood yard—Carried.

G. P. R.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON asked if the Canadian Pacific Railway had paid what they owed to the Town.

The CLERK answered that they had not.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON—How much is it?

The CLERK—about $200.

The MAYOR said that the company had a contra account for building culverts. He had seen the Engineer about it and he had said that a settlement would be made.

SNOW PLOUGHS.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON—That the Street Inspector be instructed to buy one or more snow ploughs for the sidewalks as may be found necessary for that purpose.—Carried.

The Council adjourned to meet at the call of the Mayor.

A SOCIAL GATHERING.—A social meeting was held at Mr. John Tamblin's in the township of Otonabee on Thursday night, November 14th. There were about one hundred people assembled there, of friends and neighbors, both ladies and gentlemen, from the town and country, and they had a very sociable time. The night was wet and kept about half as many more from coming. His stables, barns and all his outbuildings were full of horses, and the yard between the house and barn was took up with covered hacks and top buggies. The performance commenced at eight o'clock and was kept up till early in the morning. Every person then returned to their own homes quite satisfied, having spent a pleasant night. This social was got up by two gentlemen in the neighborhood, Messrs. Robert Hallaban and John Hunter.

RIOTERS HELD FOR TRIAL.

MR. GRAHAM, M.P., AND MR. BURNS, SOCIALIST, UNDER BONDS.

A London Magistrate Holds that General Sir Charles Warren, Commissioner of Police, was Justified in Prohibiting Meetings in Trafalgar-square.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Mr. Graham, member of Parliament for the Northwest division of Lanarkshire, and Mr. Burns, the Socialist leader, who were arrested during the riots near Trafalgar-square on Sunday, Nov. 13, were arraigned again to-day and were committed for trial. The Magistrate said the action of Gen. Sir Charles Warren, Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police in proclaiming meetings in Trafalgar-square was justified at common law. The right of the crown to prohibit such meetings was fully protected by statute. The defendants were admitted to bail. Their trial was fixed for the next session of the criminal court.

THE PRISONER AT TULLAMORE.

O'Brien Still Clings to His Tweed Suit and Bemoans His Position.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Mr. O'Brien in a letter smuggled from Tullamore jail to a friend in Dublin says: "The substance of Mr. Balfour's statement that I pleaded weak action of the heart and delicate condition of the lungs as an excuse for not being forced to wear criminal clothes is a cruel falsehood. I am not aware of such weakness and certainly never declared it. The medical examiners never referred to this, my only weakness being in my left lung, which does not trouble me at present. If Mr. Balfour is acting on the belief that the state of my health renders the application of brute force dangerous the course he has pursued could not be recommended on the score of humanity. For six days after committal I was subjected to constant threats of force and put on a bread and water diet. When this proved fruitless, I was led to believe that the point would not be insisted on. Thereupon my clothes were stolen. Since securing new clothes I have been unable to change them night or day for fear of their being stolen. No official intimation has yet been given to relieve me of this continued strain. This letter is the only means of vindicating myself against Mr. Balfour's foul and dishonoring imputations. Henceforth I shall not speak concerning my health. I do not take any nourishing food. In the face of intolerable calumnies I leave it to honorable men to judge the chivalry of Balfour's false and heartless insinuations."

A DRUNKARD'S MISTAKE.

The Man He Killed for Robbing Him Found to Have Been Innocent.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 30.—A roll of greenbacks, the loss of which caused a murder, was returned yesterday to the owner by a Catholic priest. Sept. 24, 1881, John Tomney, a tavernkeeper, was shot dead by James Sullivan. The latter had $580 in his possession and went to Tomney's saloon, where, after a night's debauch, he discovered he had been robbed of all his money. Wild with rage he accused the saloonkeeper of the theft, but though Tomney denied the charge Sullivan suddenly shot him dead. The sailor was convicted of murder in the first degree, but a new trial was granted and a plea of manslaughter was accepted. His sentence was fixed at imprisonment for three years. Recently he was released and went to Washington to live. Now the pastor of an uptown church returns Sullivan the $580, which was given up by the penitent thief through the confessional. He stole the money while Sullivan was drunk.

THE FISHERIES CONVENTION.

The Commissioners Have a Four Hours' Session—That Book of "Great Importance."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The Fisheries Convention met to-day at 2 o'clock and continued its deliberations until after 6. As the commissioners were not armed on retiring with the usual supply of manuscript, it was surmised that it was a field day for discussion.

It has been ascertained that the book of great importance which the Washington papers and the Associated Press announced had fallen into the hands of the American plenipotentiaries is simply the fisheries correspondence, which was submitted to the Canadian Parliament by the Minister of Fisheries last session. It is complimentary to the department at Ottawa to know that the American officials did not recognize the papers when presented in a neat and properly indexed volume.

An Unfounded Report.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—There is no truth in the statement published in The Journal to-night that information has been received by the Government here that the Fisheries Commission will finish its labors in Washington on Wednesday next and the commission leave for home. The Government has received no such information. It is thought that the rumor grew out of the fact that the commission adjourned from Monday to Wednesday (to-day).

A KINGSTON VESSEL ASHORE.

The Julia, Barley Laden for Oswego, a Total Loss—No Insurance.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The schooner Julia of Kingston, Ont., loaded with barley for Oswego, went ashore four miles from here in a gale of wind and snow last night. The vessel was three-quarters of a mile from shore, but a torch was seen by a farmer, who ran to this city and notified the life saving crew. The life boat was taken in tow of a tug and after a tempestuous passage got abreast of the vessel and the life crew succeeded in taking off the crew of five and a woman cook. The sailors were landed on the beach and brought to this city. The vessel will probably prove a total loss. No insurance.

Mr. Baird Resigns His Seat.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 30.—George F. Baird, member of the Commons for Queen's over whose occupancy of the seat so much was said last session, stated to-day that he had received a cypher message from Ottawa stating that his resignation was accepted by the Government and a new election would be brought on at once. He further says that he placed his resignation in the hands of the Conservatives nine months ago and it was they who sent it to Ottawa. Mr. Baird will be the Conservative candidate in the new election.

A London Fruiterer Assigns.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Robert W. Cleghorn, wholesale and retail fruit merchant, assigned this afternoon to R. K. Cowan for the benefit of his creditors; assets and liabilities about equal. Heavy business losses are said to be the cause of the failure.

A Steamer Ashore.

GARDEN ISLAND, Ont., Nov. 30.—The steamer John A. Macdonald is ashore at Duffer's lighthouse, near Gananoque. Calvin's wrecker, Capt. O'Brien, has gone to her assistance with steamer Hiram Calvin.

THE QUEBEC SALVATIONISTS.

Their Right to Parade the Streets to be Tested in the Courts.

QUEBEC, Nov. 30.—The presumed riot tonight ended in a complete fiasco. From 7 o'clock crowds could be seen wending their way towards Dufferin Terrace, undoubtedly bent upon mischief. Probably three quarters of an hour had intervened before the local spouters made their appearance upon the band stand. At about 8 o'clock a few juniors presented themselves in front of the platform and harangued the crowd. Their chief object was that the crowd should disperse and not trouble further, because the local authorities intended making a thorough test case of the Salvation Army parades. Notwithstanding the most vehement appeals upon the part of the harangners about 1000 persons assembled and proceeded towards St. Roche. In passing the English barracks on route a number of thoughtless youths in the procession emptied the chambers of their revolvers in the air, hoping to frighten the inmates of the barracks. The police made no endeavors to arrest the criminals. Thence to St. Roche the crowd was momentarily augmented, until their numbers reached fully 6000, when all together they proceeded through the various streets of St. Roche, singing national songs, and then headed towards Upper Town, vowing vengeance on the Salvation Army, and with the full intention of wrecking their barracks.

The crowd in their procession were completely disorganized. One feature which was principally noticed was the absence of the English-speaking classes. After leaving St. Roche the mob wended its way up one of the by streets until they reached St. John street, when almost the whole crowd broke up and not more than 200 proceeded further.

From this time all opposition to the Army completely died out. The crowd gradually dispersed and perfect quietness prevailed.

The fact that the military was not called upon is principally due to the efforts of Mayor Langelier in arranging the whole matter before hand and bringing about a test case between the citizens in general and the Salvation Army. It was also previously arranged that the Army would not walk, and under the circumstances it saved considerable bloodshed.

Capt. Bryce will probably be arrested to-morrow and an action instituted against him to test the legality of the Army. The Salvationists to-night are jubilant over their success and maintain that they have broken the back bone of their opponents. Capt. Bryce was determined to parade to-night, but was finally dissuaded by the Chief of Police, who firmly stated that he could not give the necessary protection.

Capt. Bryce says he will march in the streets even if the Army is pronounced illegal, and when he and his followers are jailed contingents will be sent from Toronto to replace them, and should the worst come to the worst they will still parade, "For the death of their bodies will be life to their souls."

A TRAGIC OCCURRENCE.

A Thief Throws Himself Under a Moving Train at Suspension Bridge.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 30.—A very determined attempt at suicide took place at Suspension Bridge, N. Y., this afternoon. Ratty Sullivan, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., who has been considered somewhat of a tough by the citizens in this neighborhood was arrested, charged with picking the pockets of a customs officer and a stranger of their watches. He had been remanded to Lockport jail to stand his trial by the Police Magistrate. Officer Sullivan undertook to take the prisoner to the N.Y.C. depot to catch the 4 o'clock train. The prisoner had to use a crutch, having lost one of his legs some time ago by being run over on the railway track by a train while escaping from Cleveland Jail.

When the officer and prisoner were crossing the tracks in front of the depot, accompanied by the prisoner's mother, the train they were going on was pulling into the depot in front of them. The prisoner deliberately threw away his crutch, and saying "Good-bye, mother," threw himself under the wheels of the passing train.

After the train had passed it was found that the wheels had passed over his other leg, completely severing the foot just above the ankle and inflicting other injuries. He was taken to Dr. Talbot's office, who cared for him, and at present he is doing well.

GREVY'S RESIGNATION.

A Congress of the Two Chambers Will Elect His Successor on Friday.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—After the reading to-morrow of President Grevy's message of resignation, the Presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies will formally convoke a congress of the two chambers at Versailles on Friday for the purpose of electing a successor to M. Grevy.

The leaders of the Republican groups have summoned a plenary meeting of the party at Versailles on Friday morning to confer regarding the choice of candidate.

A movement is spreading among the members of the Right to propose Vice-Admiral Dompierre D'Herney, who is now a member of the Chamber of Deputies for the department of Zomme, as a candidate for the Presidency.

THE QUEEN TO GO TO SAN REMO.

Her Majesty Will Visit the Crown Prince in January.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The Crown Prince and Princess went walking at San Remo to-day and proceeded until rain began to fall and compelled them to return to their villa.

Queen Victoria's Sympathy.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Queen Victoria will visit San Remo in January for a prolonged stay.

An Eviction in Illinois.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 30.—A child of William Mitchell was found dead by the side of the mother at Mascoutah, Ill., and Coroner Woods of Belleville rendered a verdict of death by starvation. The mother testified that she was evicted by her landlord last week; that she had not tasted food for nearly a week; that her husband had been absent, and that she had walked the streets of Mascoutah with the babe at her exhausted breast.

Herr Bebel Called to Order.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—During the debate on the budget in the Reichstag to-day Herr Bebel described the Corn Bill as a blood tax on the large masses of workmen, who will have to pay it almost exclusively. Herr Bebel was subsequently called to order for proclaiming as hypocritical the constant appeal made to Germany's love of peace.

A Hopeful Anarchist.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Anarchist Most seemed to be quite cheerful this morning. "Of course we shall appeal to the higher courts as in the Sharp case," he said. "My case is somewhat similar to his, and I hope for a reversal of the judgment. It must be so for the sake of free speech.

Masonic Amenities.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Masonic event of the season for this locality occurred this evening, when about fifty members of Strict Observance Lodge, Hamilton, visited St. John's Lodge, 209, here, and conferred the first degree. After the business of the evening had been concluded the visitors and about 200 local guests were banqueted by St. John's Lodge.

A LOYAL FEAST AT DUBLIN

LEADING MEN OF THE CITY HONOR HARTINGTON AND GOSCHEN.

A Brilliant Affair at Which the Toast of the Queen was Received With Enthusiasm, Everybody Rising and Joining in the Singing of "God Save the Queen."

DUBLIN, Nov. 30.—The Unionist banquet in Leinster Hall this evening was a brilliant affair. The leading merchants and professional men and a number of Catholic Unionists were present. Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen were given an ovation. The toast to the Queen was received with enthusiasm, everybody rising and joining in the singing of the National Anthem and "God Bless the Prince of Wales."

Mr. Kenny, an eminent Catholic barrister, in proposing a toast to the Unionist cause denounced Home Rule as an insidious misnomer simply meaning the dismemberment of the Empire and the utter ruin of Ireland. Agitation, he said, had already destroyed Irish trade and ruined Irish credit, but there were more hopeful symptoms that the people were beginning to find out the real tendencies of the agitators' works.

Mr. Goschen, who responded, said that the time for any body being neutral toward the separatists had passed. No truce should be allowed with the party of sedition. These demonstrations, showing that the most important part of Ireland was against Home Rule, would help to convince England and the world that the agitators' claim of representing Irish sentiment was largely delusive.

Mr. Goschen lauded the landlords for having rejected a bribe as gross as was ever offered to a great interest by a statesman who ought to have known better. They had acted nobly, he said, under a strong temptation. The Government appreciated their patriotism. Then they were the only section of the Loyalist party in Ireland. It was cant on the part of the learned professors who adorned the Gladstonian party to throw discredit upon the views, intelligence, learning and literature of this city. It was cant on the part of the educated and wealthy classes of England to say, when their brethren in Ireland expressed the opinion that their wealth and education could not count, that the only qualifications for real authority were to have nothing and to know nothing. [Cheers and laughter.]

"Our opponents," said Mr. Goschen, "consider minds that are blank better receptacles for their doctrines. That is not our view. We prefer men acquainted with history and its lessons, and we are glad to deal with audiences who care more for argument than for declamation, who care more to be informed on questions of the day. We are satisfied to disappoint those who expected that we came here to inflame party or faction."

Referring to the challenge of The Freeman's Journal, he invited the reporters of that paper who were present to note and report carefully his words. Never had he said that O'Brien deserved five years' penal servitude. The story was an invention of The Freeman's Journal. [Laughter and hisses.]

He continued: "We have other matters to occupy our minds than paying attention to sensational paragraphs in the national press which are devised to preoccupy us, or to the incidents of their ridiculous campaign against the executors of the law. Such provocation will not turn us aside from the duty of promoting the prosperity of that Ireland whose fortunes and fate are as dear to us as those of any other part of the kingdom."

Referring to the charge that the Government had broken its pledges concerning the granting of local government to Ireland, he said: "You who live here and who know what passes at national and municipal gatherings will be able to furnish an answer. I consider that a pledge given to a sane man will not hold when the man has become a lunatic. I should be too glad to see established in Ireland a real rival to the political influence of the Central League in Dublin; but it is impossible while municipal privileges are utilized for purposes of revolution and partisan Home Rule bias alone is at the bottom of municipal local government in Ireland. So long as that continues the Imperial party cannot assist in creating vantage ground for operations against the loyalist inhabitants, but when coercion is no longer put upon local opinion we shall be ready to redeem our pledges."

In conclusion he entreated the audience to remember that though they had to bear the brunt the forces behind them were stronger than those in front and that if they stood firm they would be certain to come out victorious.

Lord Hartington, rising after midnight to reply to a toast to the president of the union, said that The Freeman's Journal in criticising him said he showed no emotion upon his reception. He did not know what The Freeman's Journal expected. He could only say that if he possessed the eloquence of the greatest of Irish orators it would not suffice to express the warmth of the gratitude he felt for the welcome accorded him. In his treatment of the local government question he used much the same arguments as had Mr. Goschen. He said that great as was the temptation to rely upon force and exceptional law solely for the maintenance of the Union the sooner the Unionists found themselves in a position to deal on terms of perfect equality with the people of Ireland as compared with those of England the easier would their task become and the more firmly would they secure the maintenance of the Union. But to do this they were powerless without the co-operation of the loyal party in Ireland. We look to you to show England that there is a party in Ireland, which is as deeply attached to our institutions and laws as are Englishmen themselves. We further look to you to prove that you are equally willing to trust to your fellow countrymen and extend to them equal liberties and laws. With your steady assistance our task will be greatly lightened. In conclusion, I would ask the generous assistance of the loyalist press. It is a matter of the deepest regret to many of us that we believe vast portions of the people of this country never have an opportunity of seeing any papers except those advocating disloyalty and separation.

The proceedings ended with three cheers for the Queen.

Dillon on the Dublin Meeting.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Mr. Dillon, speaking at Plymouth to-night, sharply criticised the Unionist meeting in Dublin. He said that that "highly moral statesman," Mr. Goschen, who wanted to teach the people honesty, had promised the impoverished poor-law unions in the west of Ireland further assistance from the exchequer if they would maintain the union. But they would not consent to sell their birthright for a mess of pottage. He would rather starve. The Government sought to crush 4,000,000 in order to support the 900,000 who called themselves the English garrison in Ireland.

Press Comments on the Meeting.

DUBLIN, Nov. 30.—The Irish Times (Conservative) claims that the Unionist meeting last night was an assemblage of intellect, courage and popular feeling to protest, not as a minority, but substantially as an equal portion of the Irish people, against the policy of the Home Rule party.

The Freeman's Journal says the surroundings proved that Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen were avowed enemies of Ireland. Detectives guarded the two Englishmen as if they were a couple of Czars. The meeting was attended by only those who had tickets, and no claim could be made that it was the free expression of public opinion.

The Dublin Express (Conservative) says there never was such a meeting before in Dublin. It asserts that its supporters included peers, ecclesiastics, civil dignitaries and representatives of the railway, shipping, banking and professional interests.

THE KING-STREET SUBWAY.

The Railway Committee Decides on the Conditions of the Work.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—It is said that the Railway Committee of the Privy Council has finally decided upon the conditions under which the subway on King-street west, Toronto, is to be constructed. The subway is to be sixty-six feet wide. The estimated cost is $160,000, and of this the railway companies interested, the Grand Trunk, the Canadian Pacific and the Northern, are to pay one-half less $15,500 to be paid by the municipality of Parkdale. The other half, or $80,000 more or less, is to be paid by the corporation of the City of Toronto. The city is to maintain the masonry and subway and the railway companies will have to keep in good order the superstructure and pillars.

A QUEBEC JUDGE APPOINTED.

The Commissions of Justices MacMahon and Street Issued.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—There was a meeting of council to-day at which it is understood that Judge Taschereau of the Superior Court of Quebec was transferred from the district of Joliette to the district of Terrebonne, and Mr. B. Globensky, Q.C., of Montreal was appointed Judge of the Superior Court for the Joliette district.

Judge Weller of Peterboro has been appointed on the Trent Canal Commission in place of ex-Judge Clark.

The commissions of Justices MacMahon and Street were issued to-day from the office of the Secretary of State and will arrive in Toronto to-morrow.

BOLD CASE OF TILL-TAPPING.

How a Queen-street Store Was Done Up—Two Men Arrested on Suspicion.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly before 1 o'clock, two young men entered the flour and feed store of Messrs. Metcalf & Co., 500 Queen west. One of them enquired the price of hay, and whilst being shown samples his companion managed to tap the till and extract some ten or twelve dollars. No purchase was effected, and together the men left the store. Immediately after Mr. Metcalf discovered the theft, and in hot haste gave pursuit. Finding they were followed one of the men fired two shots from a revolver, which, however, did no harm. The delinquents outran Metcalf and were lost on Markham-street.

The detectives were at work upon the case all afternoon, and last night Detective Cuddy arrested Joseph Rooke of 27 Muter-street and James McCormick, who claims to be a moulder living in Windsor. They answer to the description of the men wanted. Rooke is an ex-convict, having recently been released from the Kingston penitentiary after serving a three years' sentence.

The Boycott on Lehigh Coal.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 30.—The boycott decided upon by the Reading employes on Lehigh coal is being enforced. The coal that now comes from the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company's mines is carried on the Jersey Central Railroad, and as much of it passes over the North Pennsylvania to Philadelphia, the latter company was this morning compelled to refuse to receive it owing to the crews on that road having declined to take out trains from Bethlehem. This action will cause a reduction of crews in the service on the Jersey Central.

The Winter Port of the Allan Line.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—A report in The Gazette this morning states that there is some likelihood of the Allan Line Company making Baltimore its winter terminus, instead of Portland, owing to a disagreement between that company and the Grand Trunk Railroad about the proportion of freight rates which each should receive, the Allan Line Company claiming more than the Grand Trunk Railroad are willing to concede as their fair share. Negotiations between the two companies are in progress.

IN UNITY IS STRENGTH.

THE FARMERS OF THE WEST RIDING FORM A UNION.

Officers Elected—Addresses by Mr. J. C. Brown, Inspector of County Schools—A Public Meeting to be Called.

A meeting of the farmers of West Peterborough was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of forming a Farmers Institute for West Peterborough. There was a representative attendance of farmers.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., explained for what purpose the meeting was called. It would be now necessary to elect officers for the Institute. He asked that a chairman be elected.

The meeting elected Mr. Stratton as Chairman.

Mr. stratton said that he had taken the initiatory in the organization of this Institute at the request of a number of farmers. Farmers Institutes were organizations having for their sole object the benefit of the farming community. As member of the Local Legislature he had been asked to take steps to have an association formed and he had done so. Bills were sent out and this meeting was called. As most o the people present were aware the association was one purely for the discussion of matters affecting agricultural classes and an institution which would be governed by the farmers. On fifty members paying the nominal membership fee, 25 cents, the association would be entitled to a grant of $25 from the Ontario Legislature and $25 from the County Council. These grants were for the purpose of paying the expenses of lecturers who might be brought here or any other way in which they might think fit.

Mr. T. E. BELL asked if it was obligatory for the County Council to make this grant.

Mr. Stratton replied that the law said that "they shall."

The CHAIRMAN called for nominations of persons to fill the offices of the Institute.

The officers were elected as follows:—

PRESIDENT.—T. E. Fitzgerald.

1ST. VICE-PRESIDENT.—T. E. Bell.

2ND. VICE-PRESIDENT.—Jas Riddel.

SECRETARY.—F. J. Bell.

TREASURER.—John Stothart.

DIRECTORS.—J. J. Bennett, M. E. Sanderson, M. Simpson, Wm. Collins, Jas. Tully, T. M. Willan, D. Kennedy, Joseph Barnard and J. Telford.

The Chairman retired in favour of the President elect, remarking as he did so that the Treasurer might now take in the membership fees. The fees were paid in, about 25 joining the Institute.

The PRESIDENT, on taking the chair, said that he would do his utmost to make the Institute a success. It would be his duty now to collect information as to what could be done to further the interests of the farmers and he asked the earnest co-operation of the officers and members. They should strive to add as many to their membership list as possible, and they should at all events lose no time in getting 50 members so that they would be able to draw the grants allowed by law.

Mr. JAS. COTLE BROWN on being called on to speak, said that undoubtedly the society which they were organizing was a most important one. The move was in an important direction and it was to be hoped that it would be carried on successfully and energetically and that the results would prove satisfactory. Farming, he said, was essentially experimental. But one farmer alone could not experiment sufficiently to make it profit him. It needed varied experiments in raising produce, breeding stock, and so forth, and the results of these to be disimenated before the experiments were of practical use. He was glad to see the farmers joining together and appointing fixed places of meeting to discuss the interests of their important calling. Farmers were in this country by far the most important class in the community from an economic point of view, and it was but recently that there was any union amongst them for the purpose of assisting each other to carry on their work with greater success. Any assistance he could give directly or indirectly he would render most cheerfully. He thought that one of the things that this Institute should consider was the education in country schools. A great amount of important information might be gathered by the members and acted upon here. He spoke of the lack of attention paid in giving the sons of farmers a knowledge of the nomenclature of ordinary grains and fruits. He would venture to say that not one boy out of ten in the County of Peterborough could tell a Northern Spy apple from any other if he saw it. While the matter of apples might appear to be of minor import it might nevertheless prove very important. The Canadian apples possessed superiority in flavor over the American apples on account of the influences of climate, and this was why the Canadian apples took precedence at any time they were brought into competition with American apples. The fruit trade might be greatly developed in Canada within the next few years. There were topics upon which he would speak at some other time if he were invited to do so.

The question of appointing committees to bring in reports at the next meeting on cheese, sumer fallowing, and other matters was discussed, but the suggestions that committees be appointed for the purpose were not acted upon.

The meeting adjourned it being agreed that he officers meet on a week from Saturday, to arrange for a public meeting and a man from the Agricultural College or Model Farm to address it.

HASTINGS.

THE EPISCOPAL VISIT.—On Friday, 25th His Lordship Bishop Dowling paid his Episcopal visitation to the Mission of Hastings. Being arrived at the Presbytery and having robed, the prescribed ritual form took place. Two clerks carrying the senser and holy water vase, a second clerk carrying a cross and between two acolytes, next the attendants in surplices went in procession to the entrance of the church, where His Lordship was presented with the cross the aspergillus and censer by the Rev. John Quirk, the pastor, accompanied by the Rev. Father Casey, of Campbellford. The procession advanced to the altar, the prescribed prayers being read by the pastor. The Bishop took his seat and was then addressed by Mr. Timothy Coughlin, who touchingly alluded to the fact that His Lordship was the sixth Bishop who sat before the same altar and how he himself on as many occasions stood as he then did proclaiming on his own part and on that of the parishoners strict allegance to constitued Episcopal authority.

The following address was then read:—

An Address of Congratulation to His Lordship the Bishop of Peterborough.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP.—It is with the most sincere feeling of joy and gratitude that we, your faithful people of Hastings, offer to you our congratulations on the high dignity to which it has pleased our Holy Father the Pope to have raised you—and to convey to you the expression of our lively appreciation of the lasting honor conferred on the Diocese of Peterborough by your Lordship's elevation.

Only a few months ago we were able to have watched with pride your Lordship's energy and zeal in visiting numerous distant Missionary Stations, and we now come together to celebrate, with humble reverence, your visit to this Mission of Hastings. Twenty years ago we may say we were without a church, without a School and without an Altar, and on to-day we can boast of four Separate Schools and four Churches; three of the latter having been entirely erected and the fourth enlarged by the continued efforts of our present pastor, Rev. John Quirk.

Doubly on this occasion have we reason to give way to our feelings of joy, gratitude and hope. We rejoice on account of the Catholic Church herself—we are glad on account of your Lordship's entire worthiness for so high a dignity, and we claim that the Catholic Church prospers, expands and advances notwithstanding worldly opposition.

Your Lordship's elevation has not been ordered by a power rich in the elements of material prosperity. It is no mighty monarch by whose fiat the Catholic Church in these regions have been made to flourish—no, but it is to a prisoner seemingly trodden down that we now bow with reverent obedience, from one who has scarcely a foot of land he can call his own, that the Mitre, the outward sign of the visibility of the church, comes its full eminence and grandeur.

Your Lordship stands forth to-day as a representative of a Church whose vitality has been fiercely attacked, and she can today proclaim her power by the elevation of your Lordship to the Diocese of Peterborough. Rejoicing then as we do, on account of the Church herself, we also in Canada here feel the honor done to us by the Holy Father, in appointing as our Bishop one whose childhood and early memories are associated with that devoted body of tried missionaries, the Bazilian Fathers—whose prescience of a distinctive saintly career singled you out as a child of benediction. On the work of the Bazilian Father, in the person of your Lordship, the Holy Father has now placed the seal of the Fisherman.

Thus humbly congratulating your Lordship upon your elevation, and praying that God may preserve you long for the welfare of His Church, we sign ourselves on the part of the Catholics of Hastings,

Your most faithful and obedient children:

TIMOTHY COUGHLIN, J. P.
JOHN COLLINS, J. P.
PHILLIP KENNEDY.

Hastings, 25th Nov., 1887.

During his visitation, his Lordship, in simple but in eloquent language, epitomized the teaching, the doctrine and miracles of our Divine Lord. He dwelt on the position of the Church, and quoted Scripture to show that the tenets of his Church were correct.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

At Montreal business in grain has continued quiet partly owing to light offerings and slow demand. Through Canada little business has been done.

The foreign grain markets, are, as a general thing, this week reported as firm. At Chicago more wheat is being secured although the delivery is away behind the quotations reported for same period last year. The market is reported stronger

The Situation for Cheese.

The position of the cheese market as reported from Montreal has remained quiet and about steady. The general situation cannot be very unhealthy. The stock question is still the absorbing question, and the various estimates are as conflicting as ever. The highest estimates give the supply at 250,000 boxes, the lowest at about 190,000, and until more definite figures are obtainable about 220,000 to 226,000 boxes may be taken as the basis for calculating for any who are inclined that way.

Montreal Cattle Markets.

Referring to the stock trade at Montreal the Gazette of Tuesday says: At Point St. Charles cattle yards Monday business was quiet in export cattle, owing to the fact that the season is over for shipping from this port, and dealers expect business to rule quiet for a few weeks, when they expect exporters will begin to operate and ship by way of Boston and Portland. The receipts for the past week have been light, but quite large enough for the demand. This morning there was a good local demand for cattle and the market was fairly active at steady prices. A few prime beeves sold at 3¾c@4¼c choice at 3½c, good at 3c, fair at 2½c and common at 2c per lb. live weight. There was a good enquiry for sheep, but owing to the light offerings a number of buyers could not fill their wants and the market was active and firm at 3½c per lb. live weight. The demand for live hogs was slow, on account of the arrivals of dressed hogs, and and the market was quiet with little business doing, but prices were steady at 5¼c per lb.

The British Live Stock Trade.

The Gazette's cable of Monday says:—The British cattle markets have undergone no change and our cables quote steady prices and a fair demand. Ranche cattle have encountered a fair demand in Liverpool and our cable to-day quotes finest at about 10½c, with lower quotations proportionately less. Receipts from the United States and Canada have been light, but supplies from other sources have increased and the markets have been fairly supplied. Demand, however, has continued steady. Prime Canadian steers were at 11c, good to choice at 10½c, poor to medium at 9½c, and inferior and bulls at 7c@8½c. These quotations are calculated on the basis of $4.80 in the £.

By a Large Majority.

"This is all so sudden, Mr. Sampson," she said, with maidenly reserve, "and so unexpected, that although I confess I am not entirely indifferent to you, I hardly know what to say in reply to ——" "If you are in favor of the proposition," suggested Mr. Sampson, who, like Dick Swiveller, is a Perpetual Grand Master, "you will please signify your assent by saying 'Aye.'" "Aye," came softly. "Contrary?" "No!" thundered the old man opening the door. "The noes have it by a large majority," said Mr. Sampson, hastily reaching for his hat.

GENERAL.

There werer recently taken from one of the mounds near the Ohio River two silver crosses and thirty silver shoe buckles, the latter bearing the French crown and date of 1730.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

"Why do you drink so much?" said a clergyman to a hopeless drunkard. "To drown my troubles." "And do you succeed in drowning them?" "No, hang 'em! they can swim."

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

In some parts of Germany perch are caught and carried alive to market, sometimes a distance of 40 or 50 miles, and, if not sold, brought back to their tank or pond to await another occasion for sale.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

"I don't want to destroy all the capitalists," said a French Anarchist the other day, "for if there were no capitalists we Anarchists and Communists could get no work to do, for we would have nobody to denounce."

Some one says that a pocketbook is an awkward thing for a lady to handle. All the same, if the podketbook is full she handles it so vigorously and successfully that it feels mighty weak when she is through with it.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"No trace of Ferrari has been discovered in England," she said. "Have you any news of him? And will you tell me (if you have heard anything), in mercy to his wife?"

Lady Montbarry's thin lips suddenly relaxed into their sad and cruel smile.

"Why do you ask me about the lost courier?" she said. "You will know what has become of him, Miss Lockwood, when the time is ripe for it."

Agnes started. "I don't understand you," she said. "How shall I know? Will some one tell me?"

"Some one will tell you."

Henry could keep silence no longer. "Perhaps your ladyship may be the person," he interrupted, with ironical politeness.

She answered him with contemptuous ease: "You may be right, Mr. Westwick. One day or another I may be the person who tells Miss Lockwood what has become of Ferrari, if"——

She stopped, with her eyes fixed on Agnes. "If what?" Henry asked.

"If Miss Lockwood forces me to it."

Agnes listened in astonishment. "Force you to it?" she repeated. "How can I do that? Do you mean to say my will is stronger than yours?"

"Do you mean to say that the candle doesn't burn the moth when the moth flies into it?" Lady Montbarry rejoined. "Have you ever heard of such a thing as the fascination of terror? I am drawn to you by a fascination of terror. I have no right to visit you. I have no wish to visit you; you are my enemy. For the first time in my life, against my own will, I submit to my enemy. See! I am waiting because you told me to wait; and the fear of you (I swear it) creeps through me while I stand here. Oh, don't let me excite your curiosity or your pity! Follow the example of Mr. Westwick. Be hard and brutal and unforgiving, like him. Grant me my release; tell me to go."

The frank and simple nature of Agnes could discover but one intelligible meaning in this strange outbreak.

"You are mistaken in thinking me your enemy," she said. "The wrong you did me when you gave your hand to Lord Montbarry was not intentionally done. I forgave you my sufferings in his lifetime. I forgive you even more now that he has gone."

Henry heard her with mingled emotions of admiration and distress. "Say no more!" he exclaimed. "You are too good to her; she is not worthy of it."

The interruption passed unheeded by Lady Montbarry. The simple words in which Agnes had replied seemed to have absorbed the whole attention of this strangely changeable woman. As she listened, her face settled slowly into an expression of hard and tearless sorrow. There was a marked change in her voice when she spoke next. It expressed that last, worst resignation which has done with hope.

"You good, innocent creature," she said; "what does your amiable forgiveness matter? What are your poor little wrongs in the reckoning for greater wrongs which is demanded of me? I am not trying to frighten you; I am only miserable about myself. Do you know what it is to have a firm presentiment of calamity that is coming to you, and yet to hope that your own positive conviction will not prove true? When I first met you, before my marriage, and first felt your influence over me, I had that hope. It was a starveling sort of hope that lived a lingering life in me until today. You struck it dead when you answered my question about Ferrari."

"How have I destroyed your hopes?" Agnes asked. "What connection is there between my permitting Ferrari to use my name to Lord Montbarry and the strange and dreadful things you are saying to me now?"

"The time is near, Miss Lockwood, when you will discover that for yourself. In the meanwhile, you shall know what my fear of you is in the plainest words I can find. On the day when I took your hero from you and blighted your life—I am firmly persuaded of it—you were made the instrument of the retribution that my sins of many years had deserved. Oh, such things have happened before today. One person has before now been the means of innocently ripening the growth of evil in another. You have done that already—and you have more to do yet. You have still to bring me to the day of discovery, and to the punishment that is my doom. We shall meet again—here in England or there in Venice, where my husband died, and meet for the last time."

In spite of her better sense, in spite of her natural superiority to superstitions of all kinds, Agnes was impressed by the terrible earnestness with which those words were spoken. She turned pale as she looked at Henry. "Do you understand her?" she asked.

"Nothing is easier than to understand her," he replied, contemptuously; "she knows what has become of Ferrari, and she is confusing you in a cloud of nonsense because she daren't own the truth. Let her go!"

CHAPTER XII.

"Do you think she is mad?" Agnes asked.

"I think she is simply wicked. False, superstitious, inveterately cruel—but not mad. I believe her main motive in coming here was to enjoy the luxury of frightening you."

"She has frightened me. I am ashamed to own it——"

Henry looked at her, hesitated for a moment, and seated himself on the sofa by her side.

"I am very anxious about you, Agnes," he said. "But for the fortunate chance which led me to call here today—who knows what that vile woman might not have said or done, if she had found you alone? My dear, you are leading a sadly unprotected, solitary life. I don't like to think of it; I want to see it changed—especially after what has happened today. No! no! it is useless to tell me that you have your old nurse. She is too old; she is not in your rank of life—there is no sufficient protection in the companionship of such a person for a lady in your position. Don't mistake me, Agnes; what I say, I say in the sincerity of my devotion to you." He paused and took her hand. She made a feeble effort to withdraw it—and yielded. "Will the day never come," he pleaded, "when the privilege of protecting you may be mine? when you will be the pride and joy of my life, as long as my life lasts?" He pressed her hand gently. She made no reply. The color came and went on her face; her eyes were turned away from him. "Have I been so unhappy as to offend you?" he asked.

She answered that—she said, almost in a whisper, "No."

"Have I distressed you?"

"You have made me think of the sad days that are gone." She said no more; she only tried to withdraw her hand from his for the second time. He still held it; he lifted it to his lips.

"Can I never make you think of other days than those—of happier days to come! Or, if you must think of the time that is passed, can you not look back to the time when I first loved you?"

She sighed as he put the question. "Spare me, Henry," she answered sadly. "Say no more!"

The color rose again in her cheeks; her hand trembled in his. She looked lovely, with her eyes cast down and her bosom heaving gently. At that moment he would have given everything he had in the world to take her in his arms and kiss her. Some mysterious sympathy, passing from his hand to hers, seemed to tell her what was in his mind. She snatched her hand away and suddenly looked up at him. The tears were in her eyes. She said nothing; she let her eyes speak for her. They warned him—without anger, without unkindness—but still they warned him to press her no further that day.

"Only tell me that I am forgiven," he said, as he rose from the sofa.

"Yes," she answered, quietly, "you are forgiven."

"I have not lowered myself in your estimation, Agnes?"

"Oh, no!"

"Do you wish me to leave you?"

She rose in her turn from the sofa, and walked to the writing table before she replied. The unfinished letter which she had been writing when Lady Montbarry interrupted her lay open on the blotting book. As she looked at the letter, and then looked at Henry, that smile that charmed everybody showed itself in her face.

"You must not go just yet," she said; "I have something to tell you. I hardly know how to express it. The shortest way, perhaps, will be to let you find it out for yourself. You have been speaking of my lonely, unprotected life here. It is not a very happy life, Henry—I own that." She paused, observing the growing anxiety of his expression as he looked at her with a shy satisfaction that perplexed him. "Do you know that I have anticipated your ideas?" she went on. "I am going to make a great change in my life—if your brother Stephen and his wife will only consent to it." She opened the desk of her writing table while she spoke, took a letter out and handed it to Henry.

He received it from her mechanically. Vague doubts, which he hardly understood himself, kept him silent. It was impossible that the "change in her life," of which she had spoken, could mean that she was about to be married—and yet he was conscious of a perfectly unreasonable reluctance to open the letter. Their eyes met; she smiled again. "Look at the address," she said. "You ought to know the handwriting—but I dare say you don't."

He looked at the address. It was in the large, irregular, uncertain writing of a child. He opened the letter instantly:

"DEAR AUNT AGNES: Our governess is going away. She has had money left to her and a house of her own. We have had cake and wine to drink her health. You promised to be our governess if we wanted another. We want you. Mamma knows nothing about this. Please come before mamma can get another governess. Your loving Lucy who writes this. Clara and Blanche have tried to write, too, but they are too young to do it. They blot the paper."

"Your eldest niece," Agnes explained, as Henry looked at her in amazement. "The children used to call me aunt when I was staying with their mother in Ireland, in the autumn. The three girls were my inseparable companions—they are the most charming children I know. It is quite true that I offered to be their governess, if they ever wanted one, on the day when I left them to return to London. I was writing to propose it to their mother just before you came."

"Not seriously?" Henry exclaimed.

Agnes placed her unfinished letter in his hand. Enough of it had been written to show that she did seriously propose to enter the household of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Westwick as governess to their children. Henry's bewilderment was not to be expressed in words.

"They won't believe you are in earnest," he said.

"Why not?" Agnes asked, quietly.

"You are my brother Stephen's cousin; you are his wife's old friend."

"All the more reason, Henry, for trusting me with the charge of their children."

"But you are their equal; you are not obliged to gain your living by teaching. There is something absurd in your entering their service as a governess."

"What is there absurd in it? The children love me; the mother loves me; the father has shown me immmerable instances of his true friendship and regard. I am the very woman for the place, and as to my education, I must have completely forgotten it, indeed, if I am not fit to teach three children, the eldest of whom is only 11 years old. You say I am their equal. Are there no other women who serve as governess, and who are the equals of the persons whom they serve? Besides, I don't know that I am their equal. Have I not heard that your brother Stephen was the next heir to the title? Will he not be the new lord? Never mind answering me. We won't dispute whether I am right or wrong in turning governess; we will wait the event. I am weary of my lonely, useless existence here, and eager to make my life more happy and more useful in the household of all others in which I should most like to have a place. If you will look again you will see that I have these personal considerations still to urge before I finish my letter. You don't know your brother and his wife as well as I do if you doubt their answer. I believe they have courage enough and heart enough to say yes."

Henry submitted without being convinced.

He was a man who disliked all eccentric departures from custom and routine, and he felt especially suspicious of the change proposed in the life of Agnes. With new interests to occupy her mind she might be less favorably disposed to listen to him on the next occasion when he urged his suit. The influence of the "lonely, useless existence" of which she complained was distinctly an influence in his favor. While her heart was empty, her heart was accessible. But with his nieces in full possession of it, the clouds of doubt overshadowed his prospects. He knew the sex well enough to keep these purely selfish perplexities to himself. The waiting policy was especially the policy to pursue with a woman as sensitive as Agnes. If he once offended her delicacy he was lost. For the moment he wisely controlled himself and changed the subject.

"My little niece's letter has had an effect," he said, "which the child never contemplated in writing it. She has just reminded me of one of the objects that I had in calling on you today."

Agnes looked at the child's letter. "How does Lucy do that?" she asked.

"Lucy's governess is not the only lucky person who has had money left her," Henry answered. "Is your old nurse in the house?"

"You don't mean to say that nurse has got a legacy?"

THE MAYOR AS A WITNESS.

HIS WORSHIP BEFORE THE LABOR COMMISSION YESTERDAY.

Artisans' Dwellings Should be Inspected—Shop Women Ought to be Under the Factory Act—How the Streets are Recruited.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.

Yesterday's proceedings at the Royal Labor Commission were fraught with much interest, Mayor Howland gave his evidence in the form of a statement in preference to deposing to interrogatories. In the course of his talk he made some pertinent suggestions in reference to technical instruction, mechanical education, artisans' dwellings, juvenile delinquents, and particularly the grievances of shop girls and sewing women. Of the latter he gave some sad details and incidentally referred to its reaction on the "social evil." His description of the good work being carried out at Mimico by the Victoria Industrial School was valuable and his opinions on pauper immigration were attentively listened to. A molder gave some witty evidence in the evening, and a carriage builder and a gilder gave testimony. Mr. Frederic Nicholls of The Canadian Manufacturer also gave a mass of technical evidence.

Mayor Howland deposed that he had resided in Toronto for above thirty years. He had very considerable knowledge of the working classes especially the poor. The latter only require assistance in cases of misfortune. This was principally occasioned by two causes—drinking and shiftlessness. The latter was greatly the product of the poor-house system of the Old Country, whence a large number of persons came to Toronto.

His Worship explained the system of immigration, stating that the Government machinery had been diverted from its original intention, which was to send out able-bodied mechanics and competent laborers. Whole colonies of helpless people from the poor-houses in the East of London had been sent out. In Ireland the same thing had been done. He had, when visiting the House of Industry come across numbers of these people who were utterly unsuited for this country. The poor-house system had demoralized them, all the "spring" and "snap" was out of them for regular work.

In the East End of London at the present time they were steadily sending out this class of people. Some were men with large families, as many as eight or ten children. There was a chance for the children in Canada, but the men had no stamina, pluck or courage, and soon dropped into the old groove of looking to others for assistance. They were not bad or dissipated people but they did not know how to help themselves.

In this connection the Mayor gave a detailed account of the Victoria Industrial School at Mimico, which is modelled on the English reformatory system. There were no cells or harsh treatment, but it was a home where education and industrial training were imparted. It had answered its purpose admirably. About a thousand boys came before the Toronto Police Court each year, out of which probably only one hundred were really "bad."

The older houses in this city are deficient in sanitary arrangements. The new ones were much better. Rents were very high for workmen. He spoke of the evil that resulted from more than one family occupying one house, and said that artisans' dwellings for sanitary purposes should be just as much under Government inspection as factories. If a tenant complained he usually got "a short shrift"—his rent would be raised or he would be turned out. Workmen were only monthly tenants.

"Shop girls," said the Mayor, "have certainly grievances. Theirs is a hard lot. They work too long. I have known them break down—drop down behind the counters from exhaustion. They receive poor pay—from $1 a week upwards. From $3 to $6 may be taken as the average. There is a greater supply than demand for such girls. The whole question of female labor should have Government supervision. Men can combine and protect themselves, but women and girls are a helpless class. There should be a limit to the price at which work should be given out. I know particular cases the recital of which would make your blood boil. I have seen women striving and struggling, working during the hours of the night to get a paltry pittance just to enable them to support life and keep respectable."

Mr. Freed: Do you believe that the underpayment of these young women drives them into prostitution?

The Mayor: A good woman would prefer death to prostitution; but there are young girls who have had no good training and are not under supervision, and who can barely make a living do the best they can—I think with them such a course is only too possible.

Witness showed that this class were not harshly dealt with at first. Cautions were given to those who kept bad houses and efforts made to reclaim the inmates. Many had been helped and sent home.

C. E. at Picton.

PICTON, Nov. 28.—On Saturday a meeting was held here in the interest of Commercial Union. Although the town was full of people few persons interested themselves in the matter, about sixty being present and drummed up for the occasion. One condition expressed in the advertisement of the meeting was "that if any person wished to speak in opposition he must give the chairman notice in writing the day before." Mr. Johnson and Mr. Dickson from Belleville were the chief speakers. People who know Mr. Dickson wonder at the interest he takes in this question. He is a man who does not generally give anything for nothing.

Mr. Hart, ex-M.P.P., asked to be allowed to make some remarks, but was shut off. The whole thing was stale, flat and unprofitable, and gave the lie to Dr. Platt's statement "that his constituents were in favor of the fad."

Sharp's Apathetic State.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The favorable decision of the Court of Appeals seems to have produced little effect on Sharp. He still dozes restlessly in his chair during the greater part of the day, partakes of little food, and manifests little interest in anything.

The Melbourne Exhibition.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 30.—The American consul here has applied to the commissioner having charge of the arrangements for the exhibition to be held in Melbourne, for 100,000 square feet of space for American exhibitors.

The Vulcanizer Blew Up.

READING, Pa., Nov. 30.—The blowing off of the top of a vulcanizer in Dr. H. L. Johnson's dental laboratory last evening resulted in injuries to Harry Deininger, a polisher, aged 13, which will prove fatal. The dentist's son Joseph was also injured, but not fatally.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKETS.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.

The receipts on the street to-day were from 3000 to 4000 bushels of barley, at 62c to 72c; 400 bushels of wheat at 81c to 82c for fall, and 70c to 73½c for goose; about 200 bushels of oats at 40c. Hay was offered very freely at $15 to $17 for some 30 loads. Straw was also more plentiful at $12 to $14. Dressed hogs quoted at $6 to $6.25. Beef $3 to $5 for forequarters, and $5 to $7 for hindquarters. Mutton $6 to $6.50; lamb at $6.50 to $7.50; veal, $6.50 to $8.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

ON ST. ANDREW'S NIGHT

CELEBRATION IN HONOR OF SCOTLAND'S PATRON SAINT.

Grand Gathering of Members of the Local Society—Supper at the Grand Central Hotel—Speeches—Presentation to the Bard of the Society.

On Wednesday night Piper Donald McDonald got him his pipes. He filled that Scottish implement of music with wind and blew a "skirl" that of itself would have reminded Scotchmen that something unusual was about to happen, for is not the occasion St. Andrew's Nicht dear to the Scottish heart the world over, and a time when the sons of the heather clad hills get together to recall memories of the land that gave them birth. Locally speaking, members of the Society had determined to celebrate by a grand supper, and Mr. F. J. Daly, of the Grand Central Hotel, had been given instructions to get up a spread worthy of the occasion, and at nine o'clock over fifty Scotchmen besides a sprinkling of Canadians sat down to partake of the good things provided. The bill of fair a generous one, the viands tasty and well served, the surroundings attractive and the large dining room presented a scene of great cheerfulness.

The President, Mr. W. Cummings occupied the chair, having on his right Mayor Stevenson and on his left Mr. T. Menzies and Mr. J. R. Stratton. In the absence of the Vice-President, Mr. Jas. Stewart, Mr. Jos. Tully filled the vice-chair. Taking supper occupied half an hour, after which the President arose and stated that the serious business of the evening would now be taken in hand.

The toast of "the Queen," was proposed by President W. Cummings, and duly honored, the company singing the national anthem.

"The Governor-General" was neatly proposed by the President and the hearty refrain of "He's a jolly good fellow" filled the room.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteer," by the President, was followed by the patriotic song of "Red, White and Blue," Mr. Galletly giving the solo and the company joining in a rousing chorus that almost made the glassware on the tables shake. Mr. D. McLeod and J. Henry were named as fit and proper to reply to this sentiment.

Mr. D. McLEOD deprecated the fact that a retired officer should have been called on to respond to the toast. He referred in general terms to the progress of the English army and navy and to the ability and zeal of the Canadian Volunteers. He had seen some service and heartily endorsed the opinion expressed that the Scottish arm of the service had stood the brunt of England's battles and carried her flag to victory on many a hard won field.

Mr. JAS. HENRY, while maintaining that it was a mistake to call on him for a speech, made a few remarks in praise of both arms of the service, and offered to supplement his words with a song. The offer was accepted and Mr. Henry gave in fine style, "Morick's Fairy Glen."

Mr. D. D. GALLETLY was urged to sing and complied, rendering in good voice, "Scotland Yet."

"The Day and a' Wha Honor It"—was feelingly introduced by the President, and before the company could get seated Mr. Gallettly led off with the stirring melody of "Auld Lang Syne." The spirit of the thing seemed infectious. The company joined hands and sang with enthusiasm, and rolled out the familiar lines with vigor, winding up with a trio of cheers for Scotland and one over for good luck.

Mr. CHAS. CAMERON was called to his feet and expressed the diffidence he felt in replying to the sentiment. It was an important toast and he was unprepared. It required consideration and thought, and well deserved it. It was a toast that loyal Scotchmen, the world over were gathered together in all lands to-night to honor. The sentiment expressed the principles of St. Andrew's Society. It recalled memories of his native land that were dear and cherished and bound to Scottish landmarks the hearts of thousands of her sons at points widely dispersed. The records of history showed that Scotland's sons stood well to the fore on the battle field, the ocean and in the seats of Government. He was proud to honor the day and recollected the day just 30 years ago when the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society was organized.

Just here Piper Donald McDonald fetched his pipes, filled that patriotic and national instrument with wind, and made the round of the room rolling out the air of "Blue Bonnets over the Border."

Mr. J. SPENCE made a good humored speech, and raised roars of laughter during the course of his remarks. He referred to the loyality of Scotchmen to the old land while being faithful to the land of their adoption. The nineteen years spent in Canada by him had been years of prosperity and while he delighted in recalling old associations he was not forgetful of the benefits and privileges here enjoyed.

Mr. D. THOMPSON was called on to speak. Mr. Thompson didn't want to speak, but the company would not relent, so he went at it and made a rattling good effort, all in praise of Scotland and a word for Canada as well.

Mr. W. CROFT was unanimously picked out to make a speech. Mr. Croft concluded to wait and take up a toast further on.

Song by Mr. Gallettly, "A Kiss Ahint the Door."

Mr. JAS. TULLY, from the Vice-Chair, gave "Canada our Home." He hoped that all Scoten-Canadians—or all Canadian Scotchmen throughout the Dominion were celebrating the anniversary of Scotland's patron saint.

The toast was drunk with all honor and the national song "The Maple Leaf" was started by Mr. Gallettly and done full justice to.

Mr. J. R. KIDD, was named to reply. Mr. Kidd simply begged off, promising to practice up for the next year and to then come fully prepared to unload a speech of great eloquence and surprising depth and volume on the assembled company.

Mr. J. R. STRATTON made a capital reply to the sentiment, pointing out that Canada compared very favorably with the old land in many respects. The time had been when a Canadian referred to himself as such with a feeling of diffidence. That time had happily passed away, and now a Canadiancould claim recognition as one of a country that would yet make itself felt in the congress of nations. Canada was broad and liberal in territory. It afforded extensive opportunities to men of all nationalities and the broadest liberality of action. He referred to the question now coming before the country regarding Commercial Union, and said that Americans would find the Canadians a live and energetic people.

The President called on the Bard of the Society to read a poetical reference to the anniversary.

Mr. TELFORD rose and from a manuscript read a poem entitled "Your Mither's Friend."

The reading was concluded amidst applause, at the finish of which the President stated that the Society wished to present Mr. Telford with a slight token of esteem and respect. It was with pleasure that he asked Mr. Telford to accept the handsome plaid and silver brooch which had been selected as the gift of the members. Before Mr. Telford could express his thanks Mr. T. Menzies came along the room with the plaid on his arm and skillfully wrapped the wrap about the bard and finished off by attaching the brooch where it had most needed to complete the equipment.

Secretary Mr. W. Menzies was then called on to read the following address:—

To Wm. Telford, Esq., Bard St. Andrew's Society:

DEAR SIR AND "BRITHER SCOT,"—On behalf of St. Andrew's Society I have much pleasure in welcoming you to this, the 28th annual supper that you have attended in your capacity as Bard of the Society, during which time you have never failed to address us in some stirring words of the Land of the Heather, bringing to our minds the recollection of that which is dear to us all, "Auld Scotia," and reminding us that nature has implanted in our breasts an indissoluble attachment to that country from which we derived our birth and infant nurture.

As a slight token of our appreciation of your services and as a small mark of friendship for you as a man, we beg your acceptance of this plaid and brooch with the sincere wish that you may be spared many, many, happy returns of the present occasion.

Signed in behalf of the Society,
WM. CUMMINGS, President.
WM. MENZIES, Secretary.

Mr. TELFORD replied in feeling terms and heartily thanked the members for their thoughtful and very acceptable gift. He was proud to accept it as a friendly evidence of esteem and respect. His earnest effort always was to write in simple verse of the virtues of the Scotchmen, while he at the same time did not seek to cover their faults.

The "Parliament of Canada," from the Vice-chair, was responded to by Mr. J. Stevenson, M.P. He pleasantly rallied the company on their appreciation of haggis and then devotion to their native land. He knew that of all countries in the world none stood so high in all the walks of civilization as Scotchmen. Referring to parliamentary matters, Mr. Stevenson said that the House was a good loyal institution and thoroughly in earnest to do the best for the country. Canada as a whole was loyal to herself and united she stood as one of the foremost young nations of the world. He hoped that Canadians would always sought to be known as Canadians, and ever proud of their home and country. We were building up a nationality, and we should not look across the line 45, to better our condition. It would cause him sorrow to see a Canadian who was anxious to join the stars and strips and severe the connection with the Mother country. The greatest honor we possessed was to be allied to Great Britain. He was first for Canada but always for Great Britian.—would recognize fair trade with the United States but nothing further.

Mr. J. R. STRATTON replied for the local house of Parliament, complimenting Scotchmen on having fellow countrymen occupying the most prominent positions on the floor of the house, and of bringing a deal of the best debating talent forward.

Mr. E. C. HILL was called on and made a brief speech, referring to old associations and local efforts.

The first of the volunteer toasts was given by Mr. D. D. Gallettly, who proposed "The Agricultural Interests."

To this toast Mr. Wm. Rutherford, North Monaghan, President of the West Riding Agricultural Society, made a brief reply. Mr. Jos. Tully covered some points of general interest in his reply, during which he referred to the newly organized "Farmers Institute" and its objects.

"The Mayor and Corporation of Peterborough," from the Vice-Chair, was ably spoken to by Mayor Stevenson. He had—of course, he said—a good opinion of his fellows at the council board and felt that the public affairs of the town were in good hands. Mr. Thos. Menzies, one of the thirteen local aldermen, also gave, in reply, some facts of a retrospective character and briefly ran over the financial position of the town, and claimed that its credit was unusually good. The Council was—he believed—composed of good men, who were striving to practice due economy in all municipal expenditure.

Mr. D. McLEOD proposed the health of four of the oldest members of the Society, Messrs. D. Millar, A. Davidson, Thos Telford and Chas. Thompson, early pioneers of the country.

This toast was drank with alacrity and cheered with vigor, and in turn the gentlemen named made suitable replies.

"The Ladies," was neatly spoken to by Mr. Sanderson, Mr. Allison, and Mr. Jos. Tully, who poked some fun at previous speakers for their diffidence.

The Press was proposed and replied to by Mr. Stratton, of the Examiner, Mr. Dobbin, of the REVIEW, and Mr. Allison, of the Examiner.

Debating Club.

A meeting of the Literary and Debating Club in connection with St. Peter's Cathedral congregation was held on Wednesday evening. The subject of debate was, "Resolved: that Canada would be better as a British Colony than as an independent nation." Dr. Brennan led the affirmative, being supported by Mr. A. Hoolihan. Mr. J. O'Meara led the negative and was supported by Dr. Collins. Mr. J. D. McIlmoyle after summing up, decided in favor of the negative. Songs were sung by Miss Mahoney and Dr. Collins, readings were given by Messrs. A. E. Hurley and Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. D. O'Brien gave a recitation. There was a large audience. The subject for the next meeting is "Resolved: that the Crusades were a benefit to mankind."

THEY DO NOT WANT ADVICE

THE FISHERY COMMISSION WILL NOT RECEIVE DEPUTATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The new tariff bill is outlined in the papers to-night. The most important part as far as Canada is concerned is the addition to the free list of salt, copper, anthracite and bituminous coal, iron ore, lead ore, wool, timber and lumber.

Secretary Bayard has intimated to the parties connected with the fishing interests that the Plenipotentiaries can receive no deputation on the subject at issue during the progress of the negotiations. This would seem to indicate that the presence of Messrs. Cartwright, Davies, and Fielding would not contribute greatly to the information at present possessed by the Commissioners.

RUSSIAN ENMITY TO GERMANY.

Hostile Comments on the Meeting of the Czar and Bismarck.

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.—Despite the order to the press of Russia not to attack Germany the newspapers continue to print hostile criticisms on the disclosures made regarding the interview between the Czar and Prince Bismarck. They say that if Bismarck is correct in stating that Russian officials misled the Czar all such officials should be dismissed, and, on the other hand, if the statement is untrue or is not proved, the German Ambassador ought to immediately receive his passports.

Bismarck Sought the Interview.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The North German Gazette confirms the report that Prince Bismarck wrote to Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, asking for an audience with the Czar, and adds: "That is the customary procedure. The Chancellor would have laid himself open to a charge of neglect had he omitted seeking an audience with an honored guest of the Emperor in the usual manner. He had to fulfil a duty of honor, while the Czar was at liberty to grant or refuse an audience."

The Forged Documents.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Cologne Gazette to-day returns to its forgery revelations. It states that a letter purporting to have been written by Prince Henry of Reuss, the German Ambassador at Vienna, is a forgery. The letter, it says, was among the documents which Count Schouvaloff, by order of the Czar, submitted for the inspection of Prince Bismarck. The Prince of Reuss denies having any knowledge of the letter.

The North German Gazette in the course of a political review says: "By reproducing verbatim characteristic passages of articles in the Russian press we enable Germans to see that up to the present time not even a transitory effect of the recent admonition to observe moderation is perceptible in one of the Russian papers."

THE LEAGUERS' STUBBORN FIGHT.

Lord Mayor Sullivan not Named in the Assize Court Commission.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—At a meeting of the corporation to-day Lord Mayor Sullivan stated that his name had been omitted in the commission which is to open the assizes to-morrow. He believed the omission to be illegal, and he intended to accompany the judges to court.

Mr. Sexton, High Sheriff of Dublin, said he would also accompany the judges, and if Mr. Sullivan was refused a seat on the bench he (Sexton) would leave the court and would decline to recognize the court's authority or any orders it might issue.

Mr. Sexton was unanimously elected Lord Mayor to succeed Mr. Sullivan. In a speech thanking the corporation for the honor conferred upon him, he said that every day developed new attacks upon the lives and liberties of the Irish people. The Lord Mayor ought to be the unflinching organ of prevalent public opinion.

Sullivan to be Tried To-Day.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—Lord Mayor Sullivan has applied for an adjournment until Monday of his second trial for printing reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the league in The Nation. When the case was called an adjournment was granted until to-morrow.

Harrington, M.P., Arrested.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—Commoner Edward Harrington was arrested to-day at Tvales for publishing in his newspaper reports of the proceedings of suppressed branches of the league throughout Kerry. He was taken before the magistrate and gave bail for trial.

The Queen Congratulates the Pope.

VIENNA, Dec. 1.—The Political Correspondence referring to the statement that the visit of the Duke of Norfolk to Rome is for the purpose of bearing the personal congratulations of the Queen and the Marquis of Salisbury to the Pope on his jubilee, says the Vatican appreciates the visit as a courteous return of Mgr. Scilla's jubilee mission to England. The Pope, it says, is occupied with the welfare of Ireland equally with that of England. He desires to act as peacemaker and eventually as mediator between the two countries.

No Bidders for the Great Sparkler.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Great Orange Diamond, which was found at the Cape of Good Hope, and which is ten karats heavier than the famous stone known as the Koh-i-Noor, now in possession of Queen Victoria, was offered for sale at auction in London to-day, but was withdrawn, there being no bidders.

The German Cereal Duties Bill.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Reichstag to-day began the debate on the Cereal Duties Bill. Dr. Von Lucius, Minister of Agriculture, defended the measure on the ground of increasing depression in agriculture. He said that the present duties did not afford sufficient protection, and that consumers would not suffer in consequence of the new duties. In the event of a bad harvest, resulting in higher prices, a reduction of the duties would always be possible. The debate was adjourned.

The Archbishop of Armagh Dying.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—The Most Rev. Daniel McGettigar, D.D., Roman Catholic Archbishop of the Diocese of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, is dying at Armagh.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CRISIS

PRESIDENT GREVY WILL BE FORCED TO RESIGN.

Paris in a State of Wild Excitement—Fears of a Revolution—Rouvier Enraged by the Conduct of the President.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—A council was held at the Elysee Palace after the second sitting of the Chamber. M. Rouvier having explained the bearing of the vote, M. Grevy turned to each minister and asked his opinion. All told him that his immediate resignation appeared peremptory.

M. Grevy replied that it was the Chamber that had brought about the existing situation, and that the Chamber must bear the responsibility before the judgment seat of history.

A discussion ensued on the terms of the Ministerial declaration to be made in Parliament.

M. Grevy begged M. Rouvier not to pronounce the word "resignation" from the tribune. The use of the word, he said, would be unconstitutional, because Congress ought to be summoned immediately on the President's resignation, which was only to be announced to-morrow. He authorized M. Rouvier, however, to informally acquaint the individual deputies that his resolution was taken, and that in the presence of the votes taken in the Senate and Chamber it was irrevocable.

The Senate adjourned until 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. No doubt is now entertained that the President will resign. Congress meets on Saturday.

The plenary meeting of Republicans will be held at Versailles on Saturday morning.

When M. De Roulde left the chamber he proceeded to the Hotel De Ville, followed by a large crowd of people whom he harangued, calling for cheers for M. Grevy. The only responses to his appeal were cries of "A bas Ferry," and "Demission!" "Demission!" M. De Roulde and the crowd moved toward the Senate, when the crowd was dispersed by the police. De Roulde, however, refused to go, and he was arrested and taken to the nearest station. There he strongly protested to the commissary against his incarceration, saying "you have no right to arrest me." The cry "A bas Ferry" is constitutional and legal. He was released an hour later and went immediately to the office of The Intransigeant to draw up a protest against the action of the police.

There was a good deal of rough skirmishing during the evening. Several persons sustained contusions and twenty were arrested, the crowds in the meantime vigorously denouncing the police.

All Quiet at Midnight.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—(Midnight)—The boulevards are calm. The Municipal Council is sitting with closed doors.

In the Senate this afternoon Minister Barbey made an announcement similar to that of M. Rouvier in the Chamber of Deputies. The senators loudly applauded on hearing that the Cabinet had resigned. At the adjourned sitting at 4 p.m., M. Forges' motion that while waiting for the promised message the House pass to the order of the day was adopted by a vote of 264 to 8. The sitting was suspended until 8 p.m. One senator suggested that M. Grevy be impeached.

The crowds in the streets to-day were due partly to the decision of the revolutionary meeting of the previous evening to assemble at the Palais Bourbon.

Gen. Saussier has informed President Grevy that he has taken all requisite measures to preserve order.

When the members of the Cabinet visited the Elysee in the morning M. Grevy said: "I thought we were to say "farewell" to each other, but it will only be "au revoir." If the Chamber and Senate really wish me to resign they must acquaint me with their wish by some clear and unmistakable demonstration. The events of the past few days convince me that in the interests of the Republic I am bound not to resign. I have received from various Parliamentary quarters communications asking me to remain in office, and until the wish of the Deputies and Senate is unmistakably clear that my resignation is desired I shall remain in office. I believe that very soon I shall be able to form a Cabinet."

M. Rouvier appeared to be greatly irritated and remonstrated with M. Grevy for sending him to the Chamber without the promised message.

The aspect of the Chamber of Deputies was the same as on all grand occasions. At each sitting the galleries were crowded to excess with diplomats and aristocrats, the latter including many ladies. M. Floquet, President of the Chamber, had the utmost difficulty in persuading the deputies to cease their excited discussions.

The Royalists tried to keep the result of their councils secret, but it transpired that Bishop Freppel had, at a meeting of his party, read a note from the Vatican in which the Pope instructed the deputies of the Right to vote for M. Ferry. It is reported that several of them declared they would not respect the request of the Pope.

Numerous revolutionary leaders have been busy all day. Gonille, late editor of The Cri Du Peuple, harangued the workmen, calling on them to rise and resist the authorities. The military will remain in force at the Elysee throughout the night.

The Gladstone Candidate Beaten.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—In the parliamentary election at Dulwich to-day Maple, Conservative candidate, received 4021 votes, and Henderson, Gladstonian, 2690.

Apology to M. Grevy.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Paul de Roulede had an interview with President Grevy yesterday, in the course of which he disclosed the nature of the alleged Russian objections to M. Ferry becoming President. He said the grave and critical position of home affairs required that M. Grevy should retain his post. There was sure to be an insurrection if Ferry was elected. M. de Roulede apologized for his recent hostility to President Grevy, which, he said, was occasioned by the expulsion of Gen. Boulanger from the War Office. M. Grevy denied that he had manœuvred against Gen. Boulanger.

The Journal des Debats advocates the election of M. Ferry to the presidency. The party of the Right has resolved not to support any Republican candidate. Gen. Farron, Minister of War in the Rouvier Cabinet, has been appointed a grand officer of the Legion of Honor. Threats have been made of a revolutionary demonstration in front of the Chamber of Deputies to-day, but they are not regarded as serious. Extensive military and police precautions have been taken, however, to guard against an outbreak.

THE TWO NEW JUDGES.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.

MR. JUSTICE MACMAHON

Mr. Justice MacMahon, recently appointed to a seat on the Bench of the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice of Ontario, was formally sworn in at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Registrar of the court read the three commissions, and Mr. Chancellor Boyd, as President of the High Court of Justice, administered the oaths. There were present Chief Justice Galt and Mr. Justice Rose of the Common Pleas Division and Mr. Justice Falconbridge of the Queen's Bench Division. There was a large attendance of the Bar but no speeches were made, and the ordinary business of the court was proceeded with, the new judge taking the seat to the left of the Chief Justice and looking every inch a judge. It is expected that Mr. Justice Street, appointed to the Queen's Bench, will be sworn in to-morrow.

MR. JUSTICE STREET.

THE CROWN PRINCE IMPROVING.

He Experiences No Difficulty in Respiration or in Swallowing.

SAN REMO, Dec. 1.—The Crown Prince and Princess went for a drive this morning. A German squadron, consisting of three frigates, passed close in shore at noon, and when opposite the Crown Prince's villa the yards were manned, a twenty-gun salute was fired and the bands played the national anthem.

An official bulletin issued to-day says the local affection in the Crown Prince's throat does not at the present time appear to be extending. There is no difficulty in respiration or in swallowing, and the general functions of he body continue perfect.

Denied by the Foreign Office.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Foreign Office contradicts the statement that the Queen intends to visit San Remo.

No Proof of the Existence of Cancer.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Dr. Mackenzie receives highly satisfactory advices concerning the condition of the German Crown Prince. In view of the fact there is no actual microscopical proof of the existence of cancer, the diminution of the swelling is not without a certain degree of clinical importance.

THE SPANISH CORTES.

The Speech From the Throne Expresses Gratification at the People's Loyalty.

MADRID, Dec. 1.—The speech from the throne at the opening of the Cortes referred to the loyal demonstrations of the people during the recent visit of the Queen Regent to the northern provinces, testifying to the adhesion of the people to the monarchy, and said: "Internal peace is assured. The Government thus aided in executing its program of recognizing individual rights will extend the electoral suffrage and effect economic and social measures for the benefit of trade and agriculture. Foreign relations continue cordial. Under the request of the Sultan of Morocco the Spanish Government is arranging another conference of the Powers' signatory to the treaty of 1880. The rising in the Sooloo Islands has been happily quelled and the natives are now submissive to Spanish authority."

A Burglary at Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 1.—The post office at the Grand Trunk Railway depot was burglarized during last night. W. G. Henderson is the postmaster and keeps a general store as well. Silk handkerchiefs, underclothing, purses, pipes and tobacco were carried away, and also postage stamps to the value of $1.50.

John Richards, who had been employed about the office, was subsequently arrested with some of the stolen property in his possession. He pleaded guilty at the Police Court to-day and was remanded for sentence.

An Earthquake in Lancashire.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A shock of earthquake was felt at Chorley, in Lancashire, at 1 o'clock this morning. A rumbling noise accompanied the shock. Buildings shook and the people left their houses greatly frightened. No serious damage was done.

The Czar Looks for Peace.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 1.—The Ministry have asked the Czar whether, in view of the political situation, it would be desirable to hold an educational congress in 1888, or to postpone it to 1890. The Czar replied that it could be held next year. He said the political outlook was satisfactory, and there was no fear of new complications.

AFFAIRS AT THE CAPITAL

WORK ON THE ST. MARTIN RAILWAY BEING RAPIDLY PUSHED.

The Fine of $400 Imposed on the Owner of the Steamer C. W. Chamberlain of Windsor Reduced to $50—The Bridge Over the St. John River.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—There was another meeting of Council this afternoon at which it is understood only routine business was transacted.

Assistant-General Manager Wainwright of the Grand Trunk had an interview with the Minister of Railways and Canals to-day with reference to sending an engineer to inspect the St. Martin Railway, so that the company may draw the subsidy for the first ten miles. The road is completed to Beauharnois and will be pushed through to Valleyfield as rapidly as possible. Mr. Wainright says that the branch railway from the Montreal and Champlain Junction road to Messina Springs in New York State is rapidly approaching completion.

With regard to the Grenville and Carillon loop line he says that if the promoters of the road will submit their plans to him he will consider the advisability of organizing a company to build it. The Grand Trunk company will also ask for assistance shortly to extend their Midland Railway eastward to Ottawa.

The Minister of Customs, after considering the matter, has reduced the $400 fine inflicted in June last upon the owner of the steamer C. W. Chamberlain of Windsor, Ont., to $50. The offence consisted in the vessel leaving Parry Sound without having first obtained the permission of the customs officer.

The steam tug Bob Anderson of Detroit, seized by the Collector of Customs at Amherstburg for towing vessels in Canadian waters and for failing to report to the customs either inwards or outwards, has been released on payment of a deposit of $400 pending the decision of the Minister of Customs.

A meeting of the directors of the Canada Central Exhibition Association was held in the City Hall this afternoon when it was decided to apply to the Local Legislature for an act of incorporation and to call up 25 per cent. of the subscription which amounts to over $9000.

Mr. Thos. Temple, M.P. for Fredericton, N.B., who was in the city to-day, says that the piers and abutments of the Fredericton and St. Mary's Railway bridge over the St. John River, which were commenced in August last, are almost finished, but there has yet to go on the "one course" of bridge seats on the top. The superstructure of the bridge will be put on during the winter. The bridge will run for 2000 feet across the river to St. Marys and will cost $350,000. Before it can be opened another mile of railroad has to be laid, and when this is done it will connect with the whole railway system of the United States.

ON THE VERGE OF REVOLUTION.

Paris Wildly Excited Over the Conflicts of the Political Parties.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The adjournment of the Chamber of Deputies until 6 o'clock was the result of a conference between the four Republican groups, who unanimously agreed to adopt an order of the day declaring that the Chamber, awaiting the communication promised from the President, would adjourn until 6 o'clock. When the session was resumed at 4 o'clock the order was submitted, and met with applause from both the Left and the Centre. It was carried by a vote of 531 against 3.

M. Rouvier then returned to the palace to communicate to M. Grevy the result of the vote. M. Rouvier has freely expressed the opinion that the President will only resign under pressure of a hostile manifestation by the Chambers.

The excitement in the city is intense. A mob has gathered in front of the palace of the Elysee and is crying for the President to resign. Troops guard the entrance to the palace. The crowds in front of the Palace Bourbon became so demonstrative that cavalry were obliged to charge them.

A number of members of the Chamber of Deputies are in favor of impeaching M. Grevy if his resignation is not announced when the sitting is resumed.

The sitting of the Chamber of Deputies was resumed at 6.30.

M. Rouvier ascended the tribune and announced that he had communicated to M. Grevy the vote of the Chamber on the order of the day. This communication, said M. Rouvier, caused the President to modify his resolution. He had never intended to enter upon a conflict with Parliament and would, therefore, send a message to the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate to-morrow informing them of his decision. M. Rouvier added that the President declined to accept the resignation of the Cabinet which, therefore, retained its functions. M. Rouvier's statement was greeted with cheers and at its conclusion the Chamber adjourned till 2 p.m. to-morrow.

M. Paul De Roulde and Louise Michel have been arrested. Crowds continued to flock to the Elysee and a revolutionary demonstration is expected.

TRENT VALLEY NAVIGATION.

The appointment of Judge Weller as a member of the Trent Valley Canal Commission in place of Judge Clarke, who had resigned, is a good one. It being thought advisable to have a member of the Commission versed in the law, the Government could not easily have made a better selection or one that would have been more satisfactory to the people. As a resident of Peterborough, Judge Weller will bring to the Commission a knowledge of the localities as well as good judgment and ability.

Those who have done so much to direct attention to the advantages of this route should now prepare to lay before the Commission such evidence as will establish the necessity of completing the whole work with as much speed as possible.

THE UNITED STATES TARIFF.

Tariff rates are a standard subject for discussion across the lines and at the present time they are receiving considerable attention. The large surplus in the United States treasury, which is increasing, is being used by the tariff reformers as an argument to force a reduction in the customs taxes. A section of the Democratic party is strongly in favor of a reduction, but a portion of that party, led by Mr. Randall, are strong protectionists and with the Republicans are able to frustrate the efforts of the free traders, as as they are called.

Mr. Randall has held, as an appointment from the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives, the chairmanship of an important committee, and it has been urged that he should be removed from that position to a less important one or reduced to the ranks. But the indications are that the party will not risk a move, even in the interest of "tariff reform," that would create dissension at a time when the ranks should be united for the Presidential contest.

The tariff reform Democrats would, however, not be considered free traders by the disciples of Cobden. While they demand a reduction of the taxes with some vigor and dub their opponents protectionists and monopolists, they carefully guard their demands with a view to conciliating the workingmen, who are protectionists. Thus they ask for a reduction of the taxes on raw materials entering into domestic industry, which, they explain, would "promote manufacturing, increase the demand for labor and sustain or advance wages while diminishing the cost of manufactured products." The same authority from which we have quoted further says that such a policy would "extend our markets abroad without in any way limiting our command of the home market."

From a free trade point of view this is rank heresy. In fact, the policy outlined embodies the principle of the National Policy of Canada, which is that the taxes should be imposed on those articles which can be produced in the country, while the importation of raw material and articles which cannot be produced here should be as free as the necessities of revenue will permit.

Other United States politicians, admitting that the revenue is larger than is necessary, advocate a reduction of the inland revenue taxes on tobacco and some kinds of liquors, but a sweeping reduction of the tariff rates on importations, especially on manufactured articles, does not seem to be proposed by any section of politicians.

If a change in the tariff is made it will probably be in the direction of a reduction of the duty on raw materials and what are termed neccessaries. Such an alteration would go a long way to satisfy the free trade Democrats, and if it is effected it will allow more of the productions of Canada to enter free. The question will most probably be discussed at the coming session of Congress, and may play a part in the Presidential contest, but a declaration from any party in favor of free trade need not be looked for.

Commercial Union News from Ottawa.

The Chicago Times (Nov. 30) has the following from its correspondent at Ottawa:

Commercial Unionists from all parts of the Dominion are demanding Commercial Union as the only equitable basis for settlement of the fisheries difficulty. This feeling probably finds the largest number of followers in the maritime provinces, although Ontario is strongly in sympathy with the movement. An organization is being formed with that object in view, and their claims will be at once laid before the Dominion Government. In the meantime they propose to send delegates of Liberal leaders to Washington immediately as unofficial embassadors of the Canadian people to demand a hearing before the Commission and advocate Commercial Union. If the Commission refuse to hear them they will appeal to Congress. The names of Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. Mr. Davies and Premier Fielding are mentioned as delegates. This will tend to embarrass the negotiations at present pending and to lessen the popularity of Sir Charles Tupper and Minister of Justice Thompson in the maritime sections, where little faith is placed in their sincerity in looking after the interests of the provinces by the sea.

Ex-Commissioner of Fisheries Whitcher, who took a prominent part in the official work in connection with the Halifax award, said to-day that he believed all the Canadians would secure in return for allowing transhipment of cargoes would be the placing of some few Canadian exports on the free list, such as coal, etc., by the United States Government. Mr. Whitcher has been asked to attend at Washington during the sitting of the Commission, and will probably leave for there in a few days.

The Central Bank Redeeming Its Notes.

Toronto, Dec. 2.

Yesterday morning the doors of the Central Bank were opened, as per announcement, for the payment of the bank's notes so far as possible. The full staff of clerks was busily at work, and during the day there were many callers who exchanged their Central notes for good "stuff." At no time was there a rush. Manager Allen told The World that about $70,000 had been paid out and that the redemption of the notes would be continued from day to day so far as possible. Because of a scare article in an evening paper of Wednesday several merchants, whose deposits are at present tied up, were considering the advisability of selling at a discount, but the general opinion, backed up by Manager Allen's statement, is that the depositors as well as bill holders will get 100 cents on the dollar.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKETS.

Toronto, Dec. 2.

Barley, sold at 69c to 77c on the street today for 3000 bushels. Other grain receipts were 600 bushels of wheat at 82c to 83c for fall, and 72c to 73c for goose; and 200 bushels of oats at 40c. Beets, per bush. 50c to 75c. Onions, bushel $1.50 to $1.80. Celery 60c to 90c a doz. Turnips, bag 40c to 50c. Carrots, bag 50c to 60c.

LISTOWEL CHEESE MARKET.

Listowel, Dec. 1.—At the cheese fair held here to-day 24 factories registered 6311 boxes of pale and 6687 boxes colored, making a total of 13,998. Sales were 725 pale at 11½c, 300 colored at 11c. Seven buyers were present. The market was dull.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

THOMAS MENZIES
AGENT G. T. R., GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

"one has got a hundred pounds. Send for her, Agnes, while I show you the letter."

He took a handful of letters from his pocket and looked through them, while Agnes rang the bell. Returning to him, she noticed a printed letter among the rest which lay upon the table. It was a "prospectus," and the title of it was "Palace Hotel Company of Venice (Limited)." The two words, "Palace" and "Venice," instantly recalled her mind to the unwelcome visit of Lady Montbarry. "What is that?" she asked, pointing to the title.

Henry suspended his search and glanced at the prospectus. "A really promising speculation," he said. "Large hotels always pay well if they are well managed. I know the man who is appointed to be manager of this hotel when it is opened to the public, and I have such entire confidence in him that I have become one of the shareholders of the company."

The reply did not appear to satisfy Agnes. "Why is the hotel called the 'Palace hotel?'" she inquired.

Henry looked at her, and at once penetrated her motive for asking the question. "Yes," he said, "it is the palace that Montbarry hired at Venice, and it has been purchased by the company to be changed into an hotel."

Agnes turned away in silence and took a chair at the further end of the room. Henry had disappointed her. His income as a younger son stood in need, as she well knew, of all the additions he could make to it by successful speculation. But she was unreasonable enough, nevertheless, to disapprove of his attempting to make money already out of the house in which his brother had died. Incapable of understanding this purely sentimental view of a plain matter of business, Henry returned to his papers, in some perplexity at the sudden change in the manner of Agnes toward him. Just as he found the letter of which he was in search the nurse made her appearance. He glanced at Agnes, expecting that she should speak first. She never even looked up when the nurse came in. It was left to Henry to tell the old woman why the bell had summoned her to the drawing room.

"Well, nurse," he said, "you have had a windfall of luck. You have had a legacy left you of £100."

The nurse showed no outward signs of exultation. She waited a little to get the announcement of the legacy settled in her mind—and then she said, quietly: "Master Henry, who gives me that money, if you please?"

"My late brother, Lord Montbarry, gives it to you." (Agnes instantly looked up, interested in the matter for the first time. Henry went on.) "His will leaves legacies to the surviving old servants of the family. There is a letter from his lawyers, authorizing you to apply to them for the money."

In every class of society gratitude is the rarest of all human virtues. In the nurse's class it is especially rare. Her opinion of the man who had deceived and deserted her mistress remained the same opinion still, perfectly undisturbed by the passing circumstance of the legacy.

"I wonder who reminded my lord of the old servants!" she said. "He would never have had heart enough to remember them himself."

Agnes suddenly interposed. Nature, always abhorring monotony, institutes reserves of temper as elements in the composition of the gentlest woman living. Even Agnes could, on rare occasions, be angry. The nurse's view of Montbarry's character seemed to have provoked her beyond endurance.

"If you have any sense of shame in you," she broke out, "you ought to be ashamed of what you have just said! Your ingratitude disgusts me. I leave you to speak with her, Henry—you won't mind it?" With this insignificant intimation that he too had dropped out of his customary place in her good opinion, she left the room.

The nurse received the smart reproof administered to her with every appearance of feeling rather amused at it than not. When the door had closed, this female philosopher winked at Henry.

"There's a power of obstinacy in young women," she remarked. "Miss Agnes wouldn't give my lord up as a bad one, even when he jilted her. And now she's sweet on him after he's dead. Say a word against him and she fires up, as you see. All obstinacy! It will wear out with time. Stick to her, Master Henry—stick to her!"

"She doesn't seem to have offended you," said Henry.

"She!" the nurse repeated, in amazement—"she offend me! I like her in her tantrums; it reminds me of her when she was a baby. Lord bless you! when I go to bid her good night, she'll give me a big kiss, poor dear—and say, 'Nurse, I didn't mean it!' About this money, Master Henry! If I was younger, I should spend it in dress and jewelry. But I'm too old for that. What shall I do with my legacy when I have got it?"

"Put it out at interest," Henry suggested. "Get so much a year for it, you know."

"How much shall I get?" the nurse asked.

"If you put your £100 into the funds, you will get between £3 and £4 a year."

The nurse shook her head. "Three or four pounds a year! That won't do! I want more than that. Look here, Master Henry, I don't care about this bit of money—I never did like the man who has left it to me, though he was your brother. If I lost it all to-morrow I shouldn't break my heart; I'm well enough off, as it is, for the rest of my days. They say you're a speculator. Put me in for a good thing, there's a dear! Neck-or-nothing—and that for the funds!" She snapped her fingers to express her contempt for security of investment at 3 per cent.

Henry produced the prospectus of the Venetian Hotel company. "You're a funny old woman," he said. "There, you dashing speculator—there is neck-or-nothing for you! You must keep it a secret from Miss Agnes, mind. I'm not at all sure that she would approve of my helping you to this investment."

The nurse took out her spectacles. "'Six per cent. guaranteed,' she read, 'and the directors have every reason to believe that 10 per cent. or more will be ultimately realized to the shareholders by the hotel.' Put me into that, Master Henry! And, wherever you go, for Heaven's sake recommend the hotel to your friends!"

PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

CRITICAL NOTES BY REV. GEORGE P. HAYS, D. D., LL. D.

Lesson X of the International Series for Sunday, Dec. 4, 1887—Text of Lesson, Matt. xiii, 1-9; Golden Text, Luke viii, 11.

This chapter of parables is quite as conspicuous as the chapters containing the Sermon on the Mount. These parables may not all have been spoken at one sitting, but are here given in one group. The Saviour had been traveling through Galilee and was now back at his permanent residence at Capernaum. Crowds gathered around. The ship made a convenient pulpit, high enough above the shore to bring the Saviour easily in sight of the multitude of people.

It is to be noticed here that the Saviour gives no description of this sower, nor does he authorize the sower to pick the ground on which he is to sow. Neither is there any description of the seed. The sower does not make the seed he was to sow. It was given to him to sow, and he has no right to try to modify it or change it. "Go, preach the preaching that I bid thee" was God's command to Jonah, as to all his other servants. Neither does the sower understand the nature of the growth of this seed. The seed is sown in us, but we also are sown in the world, and the result is not merely in the ground but also in the seed sown. The responsibility is not altogether on the sower, or on the seed which is the word of God, but the difference of results is in the hearer.

Wayside hearers.—The wayside was once as soft as any part of the field; it is now beaten hard by much treading. The seed exposed on this hard ground is to the birds a special opportunity and invitation, and so they come and light in flocks, taking away every seed and all possibility of growth. That wayside, if it is ever to bring forth fruit, must be plowed and harrowed. This will be hard work and require rough handling. Without this plowing and breaking up of this hard ground, not only will the seed not enter, but the rain will pass away without softening it, and the sunshine that ought to have produced growth will only make dust. There seems not much chance for any good result from sowing seed in such a place. But the sower is simply told to sow, and sow everywhere.

Stony ground.—The rain that falls on it is soon evaporated, and the soil becomes dry and vegetation dies. This rocky ground, however, may be cleared up and become fruitful. This can only be done by blasting the big, deep rocks and gathering out the little stones one by one. This will take vigorous work and strong resolution and patient labor on the part of the farmer.

Thorny ground.—Thorns are still a different kind of thing from either rocks or birds or clods. The roots of the thorns are not part of the ground as the rocks are, nor are they the result of much treading as is the hardness of the wayside. Like the wheat they are themselves things of growth, and the soil wherein they will grow well would also grow wheat well if the thorns were out of the way. In such soil it is a question of competition which shall occupy the ground. In the case of the soil supplied with thorns but sowed with grain, one or the other will be choked. "No man can serve two masters." No ground can raise a good crop both of thorns and of grain.

Good ground.—When the good ground is described, it is said to belong to those who have an honest and good heart. There is to be no trifling with the importance of religion. These begin to cultivate it with care. The crop will depend very much on the nature of the soil and the exposure to the sun, and other favorable circumstances. This growth in the good ground is a steady progress, and not a growth by fits and jerks. The amount of fruit, however, will vary very much even in good ground. It is sometimes asked whether a hundred fold is not a very unreasonable and extraordinary crop. It must be remembered, however, that in wheat each seed brings forth many stalks, and each stalk a head; so a hundred fold is not very unusual. I have myself, while preparing these lesson notes, counted the grains on an ear of corn, and not an especially large one. There were on it 765 grains. Many a stalk of corn has two or three ears on it. The estimate, therefore, of the crop in an especially good field is not unreasonable—thirty, sixty or a hundred fold.

SUGGESTIVE APPLICATIONS.

BY THE REV. EDWIN W. RICE, D. D.

The wayside seed (see vs. 4 and 19). You find a particularly inattentive scholar in your class who is listless, has no desire nor interest for religious truth, and upon whose heart it seems as difficult to make an impression as if you were working upon granite or upon polished steel. Whatever good truth drops there, stays on the outside, and the next wind or the next companion who comes along brushes it aside; or some agents of the evil one in other ways snatch it away. This hearer is the most discouraging and the most hopeless one in your class.

Seed upon rocky ground (see vs. 5, 20 and 21). There are hearers and scholars who are mercurial, impulsive, governed more by passion than by principle, who gladly receive an earnest call to obey the truth; they comply with it promptly and passionately; for a few days there seems no bound to their zeal; they are quite ready to find fault with older Christians for their coldness, for their lack of ardor, and they seem at one bound to have gone from worldliness to the very height of spiritual ecstasy. But they have no abiding principle of Christianity; it is simply a surface feeling and impulse, which passes away like the morning dew.

Seed among the thorns (see vs. 7 and 22).—There are hearers and scholars, full of the cares of this world and its pleasures, crowded with worldly ambitions and worldly desires, who are ready, with the multitude of other things, to take in some of the teachings of God's word. They suppose that they can go to church, unite themselves with God's people on Sunday and busy themselves with the cares of the world and its delights, without a thought of Christ or of their duty to God all the week; nay, they can mingle in all the frivolities of life, they see no harm in operas or theatres, in dancing or card playing or games of chance, unless indeed that they should fall into "open and extensive gambling," and so while pretending to receive God's word they really choke it out, and there is no spirituality in them and no vitality or power in their assumed Christian profession.

The seed in the good ground (see vs. 8 and 23). There is a like difference in the fruit produced by the sowing of the spiritual seed. It is due to the greater care in preparing the heart for it, or the greater natural capacity and ability for religious work, the greater spirituality of the receiver. These give increased fruitfulness in the harvest.

It is well for the discouraged preacher and teacher to notice some of the general characteristics of this parable, in its application to spiritual fields, seed and harvests. There is no difference in the seed; there is no difference in the sower. And yet three-fourths of the seed came to nothing; apparently it was wasted. Only one-fourth of the seed brought any harvest, and that in different degrees of fruitfulness; some very high, some very moderate, and some in a very low degree. As a spiritual sower you need not be discouraged if every effort of yours does not produce an abundant harvest; indeed you may be highly encouraged if barely one-fourth of the good seed which you sow from God's word produces any good result.

ST. NICHOLAS.
For Young Folks.

SINCE its first issue, in 1873, this magazine has maintained, with undisputed recognition, the position it took at the beginning,—that of being the most excellent juvenile periodical ever printed. The best known names in literature were on its list of contributors from the start,—Bryant, Longfellow, Thomas Hughes, George MacDonald, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Frances Hodgson Burnett, James T. Fields, John G. Whittier; indeed the list is so long that it would be easier to tell the few authors of note who have not contributed to "the world's child magazine."

The Editor, Mary Mapes Dodge, author of "Hans Brinker; or, The Silver Skates," and other popular books for young folks,—and for grown-up folks,—too, has a remarkable faculty for knowing and entertaining children. Under her skillful leadership ST. NICHOLAS brings to thousands of homes on both sides of the water knowledge and delight.

St. Nicholas in England.

It is not alone in America that ST. NICHOLAS has made its great success. The London Times says:—"It is above anything we produce in the same line." The Scotsman says:—"There is no magazine that can successfully compete with it."

The Coming Year of St. Nicholas.

The fifteenth year begins with the number for November, 1887, and the publishers can announce: Serial and short Stories by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Joel Chandler Harris, J. T. Trowbridge, Col. Richard M. Johnston, Louisa M. Alcott, Professor Alfred Church, William H. Rideing, Washington Gladden, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Amelia E. Barr, Frances Courtenay Baylor, Harriet Upton, and many others. Edmund Alton will write a series of papers on the "Routine of the Republic,"—how the President works at the White House, and how the affairs of the Treasury, the State and War Departments, etc., are conducted; Joseph O'Brien, a well known Australian journalist, will describe "The Great Island Continent"; Elizabeth Robins Pennell will tell of "London Christmas Pantomimes" (Alice in Wonderland, etc.); John Burroughs will write "Meadow and Woodland Talks with Young Folk," etc., etc. Mrs. Burnett's short serial will be, the editor says, a worthy successor to her famous "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which appeared in ST. NICHOLAS.

Why not try St. Nicholas this year for the young people in the house? Begin with the November number. Send us $3.00, or subscribe through booksellers and newsdealers. The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

The subject was: "Early Manhood—Some of its Dangers." The doctor spoke to a fair sized audience. He discussed the subject fully. He dwelt more especially of men coming to a complete development physically, mentally and spiritually. He gave instances of conduct that would retard this development and of that which would conduce to it.

THE BISHOP AT ST. LUKE'S.

The Needs of Algoma—How His Lordship Traverses the Diocese.

On Wednesday evening the Lord Bishop of Algoma addressed a meeting in St. Luke's Church on the subject of missions, touching more particularly the needs of his own diocese.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Rector of Ashburnham, read the missionary report and made a few introductory remarks. He then introduced the speaker of the evening.

His LORDSHIP said that no day in the year was more suitable than this—St. Andrew's Day—for discussing the question of missions, as in the action of St. Andrew, when he received that light which supplied all the necessities, and illumed the darkness of his own heart, embodied the true spirit of missionary work. He found the light, and then sought someone to impart the glad tidings to. He dwelt on the great debt which the people now owed to the missionary spirit and urged that they should arrive at a fuller consciousness of that great debt. If they came to a full knowledge of what they owed to it they would endeavour to repay a part of it and wonders would be worked. He then gave some information about his diocese, going over the same ground as he did on Monday night at St. John's. He gave a statement of the "Evangeline" affair. It had been stated on the floor of the Toronto Synod last summer that the Bishop of Algoma was enjoying himself yachting among the beautiful islands in the Georgian Bay. He would explain. In 1882 when he went to Algoma he found that there was many scattered settlements along the shore on the Bay and Lake Superior. There was no railway communication with them and the only way they were to be reached was by boat. The first summer he travelled by the ordinary steamers but this was extremely unsatisfactory. Some times he would be left at a place for days together while he should be going on, sometimes he would not have near the time necessary, and sometimes the whistle of the steamer would compel him in the midst of service to doff his robes and retire as quickly as possible. Besides, there were a great many stations not touched at by the steamer. The next season he tried a Mackinaw boat, but he was buffetted about by adverse winds and often he and his companion would have to row long distances to reach a station at an appointed time. He found it absolutely necessary to have a proper conveyance and being fortunate enough to raise the money in England, purchased the Evangeline for £600. Since the boat was launched she was one of the most valuable adjuncts to the missionary work. He spoke of the faithfulness of both the laity and clergy of the Diocese of Algoma, and showed that the three clergy at work in the diocese in 1873 had grown now to 36. He also announced that, by his setting his face against it there was hardly such a thing known in his diocese as church debt. He gave an intesesting description of the habits, traits of character, and social improvement of the Indians, of whom there were 7,000 in the Diocese of Algoma. He closed with an appeal for help to carry on the missionary work in a diocesse 800 miles in length and 50,000 suuare miles in extent, having a population 80,000 people, many of whom were still in great darkness.

The meeting closed in the usual way.

A KNOWING THIEF.

Opens the Safe at the Grand Central Hotel and Gets $170.

When Mr. F. J. Daly, proprietor of the Grand Central Hotel, went into his office and opened the safe this morning he was silent with amazement. The cash drawer had been taken out of the safe and with it the sum of about $170. Information was taken to the police station and after looking around for some time Acting Chief Adams, who attended to the matter, found the cash drawer—empty—in the back yard.

Mr. Daly usually banks his cash every afternoon, but neglected doing so on Thursafternoon. Early in the evening he had occasion to open the safe and he then counted the bills deposited in the drawer. There mas $125 and the balance, about $35, in silver made up the amount. He turned the lock a little back, intending before going to bed to give it the double lock.

"Come into the office and I'll show you," he said to the reporters who bore down upon him this forenoon. And going into the office he proceeded to demonstrate.

"You see—oh, the double lock is on now that there's no money in the safe. Now here's the way it was," said he closing the safe door which he just opened and turned the register at the 100 mark. "Now, if I turn it back a little the safe is locked, but it only needs to be turned forward to the hundred to allow it to be opened. I leave the safe this way during the day for the sake of convenience. At night I put on the double lock. Then it requires a knowledge of the whole combination to get it open. But last night I went to bed without uptting on the double lock and the thief has just turned the register and taken the money."

Mr. Daly has no suspicion of who took the cash. The night watchman heard no one at the safe, and as yet there is no clue as to who the person is.

This morning Mr. Daly issued his cheque for $43, which amount was deposited by Mr. Wm. Glover, a commercial traveller, the night before and was taken with the rest of the money. It was fortunate that the drawer under the cash drawer was left as it contained a number of gold watches and chains.

Each and All.

should go and hear "One Another" by the great orator Rev. John E. Lanceley, Friday evening, this week, in the Methodist Church, Charlotte street. 3deod127

Easy Times.

The prompt manner in which the taxes have been paid this year may be taken as an index of ease in money affairs. Out of the total $47,936.17 on the collector's roll, $39,899.75 has been paid in. There will be about $1,000 off the roll on the account of rebates, statute labor, income, etc., so that all of the taxes except about $5,000 are paid in. The town's running expenses this year is a little over $56,000, but the extra $10,000 of revenue is derived from Scott Act fines, local licenses, and other sources.

The Conversazione

to be given by Otonabeen Lodge, No. 18, I. O. Oddfellows, on Friday evening, the 9th Dec., promises to be a very brilliant and successful affair. The committee have decided not to issue invitations. Instead each member will receive four tickets for distribution among his friends. If the limited number of tickets (300) is not thus disposed of within a few days before Dec. 9th, the balance will be available for use of members desiring additional tickets. The committee decided on this plan so as to avoid the possibility of offence in the issuing of tickets. The seating capacity of the hall is only 300, while there is accommodation for 500 promenaders, hence the necessity of limiting the number of tickets and adopting the above plan.

Mr. Roddy Seeaks.

At this morning's session of the Police Court Mr. R. N. Roddy, of the C.P.R. Hotel, was charged with an infraction of the Scott Act. He pleaded guilty and the Magistrate imposed a fine of $100 and costs. On the court's pronouncing judgment Mr. Roddy spoke. He said: "Well, I think its hard for me to be used this way. I'm as law abiding a citizen as there is in Peterborough and yet I'm brought up here day after day while there's a hundred places in this town,—yes two hundred, breaking the law right along. Now there's no earthly way I know to get out of this thing. My business is hurt by sneaks prying around. Boarders will not come into the house because sneaks—(and here he looked meaningly at Detective Rossiter)—lurk around to drag them as witnesses in the Police Court." With this Mr. Roddy walked out of the Court.

DRESS-MAKING! We are pleased to announce that Miss Johnston, the accomplished Dress-Maker at TURNBULL'S, is delighting everybody with her work. Now Located in Peterborough.

At the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets will be found the shop and warerooms of Messrs. Jackson & Co., who are engaging in the manufacture of pipe organs and pianofortes. They are both practical men, Mr. R. H. Jackson being an experienced man with regard to pianos while Mr. R. Burfield has spent many years in the manufacture of pipe organs and musical instruments. The firm has secured a lease of the property together with the right of purchase and propose to add another to the long list of local industries. They are well acquainted with the business in hand, having spent many years at it in London, York and Liverpool, Eng. Supplies of material and furnishings are being arranged for and people will have the opportunity of patronizing a home institution and getting a good article. A general repairing business will be carried on, which will be an advantage to the town as well as a facility that will be appreciated. The firm's advertisement in another column states additional particulars.

Brevities.

—The cheese on a bar in town will be entitled to a vote at the next election, if age is a proper qualification.

—The skating on the Little Lake and Spaulding's Bay is good. Large numbers are out every day and evening doing the graceful curves.

—The meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Irish National League which was to have taken place on Thursday evening was postponed till Monday evening.

—The Police Court has been supplied with half a dozen arm chairs. They are painted black and are ornamented with elegant yellow stripe all over.

—Weather probabilities:—Fresh to strong south-east and south winds; partly cloudy or cloudy weather with light snow or rain; higher temperatures.

—Mr. Bewell, of Norwood, a member of the Canadian team in the recent international football match with the United States, returned home on Tuesday. At Newark the Canadians defeated their opponents by 5 goals to 0.

—Lindsay Post:—"Mr. Arch. Moffat of Peterborough, head book-keeper for M. M. Boyd & Co. at the depot, Gelert, for some season's past, passed through Lindsay on Monday to again take up and wield the 'mighty pen.' His many friends in town were pleased to see him looking so well and light-hearted and jolly as usual."

—The Mayor's little joke at the St. Andrew's dinner. Meets traveller on train in route for Ottawa. Conversation ensues regarding Peterborough.

"How many people are there in that town of yours?"

"About nine thousand," replied the Mayor.

"Thunder! I supposed there was about fifty thousand by the noise they make up there."

YOUR MITHER'S FIRESIDE.

Lines Addressed to the St. Andrew's Society Peterborough.

Scot, you will not remember the mirth and the glee
When you first slip't doon fra' your kind Mither's knee,
How she lauched when she caught at your trembling hand
To steady you while you was learning to stand,
You may now have forgot all your fears and your falls
When you learned to walk round the auld cottage walls,
When you fell, on your hands and your knees you would glide
And sit on the hearthstone—at your Mither's fireside.

From the floor to your feet, then outside took your way
With heart light and joyfull you joined in the play
Obedience was taught you and with speed you wad ren
Whenever your Mither did call on you in.
In the midst of you play, in your frolic and fun
If your play-mates abused you, you instantly run
To the house, all your griefs you to one did confide,
And that was your Mither—at her ain fireside.

Between gloamin' and bed-time, in the bright ingle nook
You was set with your carritch, your slate or a book,
On the deep rule, there you would sulka'la sit,
And the ten strict commandments unto memory commit.
Your Father sat reading humbly searching for grace,
Your Mither sat knitting with bright smiles on her face,
And perhaps a young sister, your fond Mither's pride.
Sitting sowing and singing at your Mither's fireside.

The joys and delight your auld hame did impart
I trust are still chirished, and swells in your heart.
Happy years in your childhood and in manhood you found,
When your dear family circle unbroken sat round,
Enjoying sweet intercourse, laughter and mirth,
Love and friendship seemed blended round your Auld Scottish hearth,
At the word all was silent while your faither presides
And you knelt with that circle at your Mither's fireside.

Time, ever progressive, passed swiftly along.
With your years home attachments entwined you more strong,
With the germs of affection rooted deep in your breast,
Harmonized your endearments, set dissensions at rest,
Home enjoyments, like shadows, from your view disappears,
Changing joy into grief, and your laughter to tears,
Death reduces your number, your loved circle divide,
Causing mourning and sorrow at your Mither's fireside.

Yes, the dearest of circles must all sever their ties,
Though hearts ache with sorrow and tears dim their eyes.
As the bird when fullfledged takes to wing from its nest,
So you left your auld hame with bright hopes in your breast,
Your prospects in Scotia seemed clouded and dark,
While the promptings of fortune urged you on to embark,
With your mither's best blessing, you left to part with the tide,
Said guid bye to Auld Scotia and your mither's fireside.

All the rules to guide life your fond parents taught you,
I hope the salt ocean had not power to subdue,
Still supreme in your heart, as you stepped from the deck
With a Scot's resolution as you stood in Quebec,
Hove you kept them intact since the first day you came,
And does wealth with strict honesty honor your name?
Or stand you an object for all men to deride,
Bringing shame and contempt on your mither's fireside?

Could I place you this nicht in your mither's auld cot,
To behold the great change time and absence has wrought,
Imigration and death must have scattered that band,
While your mither's auld chair unoccupied stands.
Scot, I trust her instructions you have never forgot,
Nor on her brought disgrace, nor the name of a Scot,
While you sit at this board, tell with honour and pride,
What is good was instilled at your mither's fireside.

MAYOR SULLIVAN JAILED.

THE PRINTED REPORTS OF SUPPRESSED LEAGUE MEETINGS.

The Chief Magistrate of Dublin While in Prison Will be Treated as a First-class Misdemeanant—He Will Not Appeal From the Decision.

DUBLIN, Dec. 2.—The second trial of Lord Mayor Sullivan for printing in his paper reports of suppressed branches of the National League took place to-day and resulted in a conviction. Mr. Sullivan was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, but without hard labor.

After leaving court Mr. Sullivan was conveyed to Richmond prison. Immense crowds were gathered in the streets and the Lord Mayor was cheered along the whole route. There was a number of conflicts between the police and people.

Lord Mayor Sullivan will be treated in prison as a first-class misdemeanant. Mr. Sullivan has announced that he will not appeal from the decision, but will suffer his punishment proudly, as he would if it were ten times greater.

Dillon to Become the Leader.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A London despatch to The Times says John Dillon's splendid reception at Plymouth, coming on the heels of the great ovation given him at Manchester, excites interest even more personal than political. He will come back to Parliament in February, as a very close rival to Parnell in point of distinction and popular backing, and if the latter's health should prevent his regular attendance Dillon will be easily the foremost of his lieutenants and the leader of the party. The English Liberals do not look forward to this prospect with complete equanimity.

The result of the Dulwich election is a moral victory for home rule. In 1885, before the home rule question was raised, the Tories had a majority of 1694. Now, after it has become the issue more or less dividing the Liberal party, they win by 1412.

The Other Harrington Arrested.

DUBLIN, Dec. 2.—Timothy Harrington, M.P. for the harbor division of Dublin, was arrested to-day in this city. He is a brother of Edward Harrington, M.P., who was arrested at Tralee.

BORLASE AND HIS MISTRESS.

He Borrowed Money from Her, but Says it Was Money He Had Given Her.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The examination of Mr. Borlase, ex-Under Secretary of the Local Government Board, was continued in the Bankruptcy Court to-day. He admitted having borrowed £1000 from Madame De Quiros, who was formerly his mistress, but said that the money was his own and had been simply restored to him. He had never promised to settle £1500 upon her. She asked him, he said, for £500 down and £1500 a year, saying that she was going to get the same amounts out of another man. He dined at her house after borrowing the £1000, when she tried to murder him. After getting the sum mentioned he borrowed £2700 from her, giving his acceptance for that amount. He heard afterward that this money had been given her by another man.

Mr. Borlase said that his average income was £2000, and that his money had been largely expended in political life for elections, dinner parties, etc. Ever since he entered Parliament he had been involved in financial troubles. The further hearing of the case was adjourned.

SALVATIONISTS ARRESTED.

The Army in Quebec to be Charged as a Public Nuisance.

QUEBEC, Dec. 2.—The following officers and soldiers of the Salvation Army have been arrested and bail furnished for their appearance at the Police Court to-morrow morning: Capt. Brice, Lieut. Felix, Fannie Copeman, Maggie McHarg, Thomas Law, James McHarg and Alfred Jaques. Messrs. Amyot, Pelletier and Fontaine will appear for the Quebec corporation, and Mr. Dunbar, Q.C., will defend the Salvationists. The general charge is a public nuisance, beating drums, playing brass instruments, carrying a flag, and impeding traffic. The army will plead that the charge against them discloses no offence known to the law, as they are a religious body. The case will be tried before Judge Chaveau. The officers of the army say that they have suffered financially from the threats of the mob, the people being afraid to attend their meetings, and trust their friends at a distance will not forget them in this their time of trial.

The Massachusetts Fisheries.

BOSTON, Dec. 2.—The story that the fishery business was operated largely in Massachusetts by foreigners is dispelled by statistics that will shortly be published. Of the 15,435 persons employed in this industry in the State, 11,743 are resident fishermen, 993 are non-residents, 472 are shore laborers, 149 factory laborers and 138 are packers. The nationality of the resident fishermen is as follows: American 7543, English 896, Irish 547, Canadian 786, Spanish 2, French 153, Swedish 421, German 34, Greek 2, unknown 768. Of the non-resident fishermen 998 were Americans, 104 English, 172 Irish and 824 Canadian.

AT LAST GREVY RESIGNS.

HIS MESSAGE OF RESIGNATION TO THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

The Police Have Considerable Trouble in Keeping Mobs From Invading the Chamber, But no Open Conflict With the Police Occurred.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—President Grevy's message, resigning the presidency of the Republic, was read in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. The text was as follows:

"So long as I had only to contend with the difficulties that have accumulated in my paths, the attacks of the press, the abstention of the men whom the public voice called to my side, and the increasing impossibility to form a ministry, I struggled on and remained where duty bade me, but at the moment when public opinion better informed marked a change which gave me hope of forming a government, the Senate and Chamber of Deputies voted a double resolution, which, under the form of an adjournment to a fixed hour to await the President's promised message, is tantamount to summoning the President to resign. It would be my duty and right to resist, but under the circumstances within which we are placed a conflict between the Executive and Parliament might entail consequences which restrain me. Wisdom and patriotism command me to yield.

"I leave to those who assume it the responsibility for such a precedent and for the events that may ensue. I relinquish without regret, but not without sadness, the dignity to which I have been twice raised without solicitation and in the exercising of which I feel conscious I have done my duty. To this I call France to witness. France will say that for nine years my Government has secured to the country peace, order and liberty; has made France respected throughout the world, has worked unremittingly to raise her, and in the midst of an armed Europe leaves her in a condition to defend her honor and rights. Further, that it has been able to keep the Republic in a wise internal course, marked out by the interests and wishes of the country. France will say that in return for this I have been removed from the post where her confidence placed me. In leaving political life I form but one wish. It is that the Republic may not be struck blows aimed at myself, but that it may issue triumphant from the dangers it is made to incur. I place on the bureau of the Chamber of Deputies my resignation of the functions of President of the French Republic."

The deputies received the message with profound silence. M. Floquet read a letter from the President of the Senate summoning a congress of the two Chambers at Versailles to-morrow for the purpose of electing a new president. The sitting then closed amid cries of "Vive la Republique."

Louise Michel Again Arrested.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—At 4.30 p.m. groups of people had begun to assemble in front of the Palais Bourbon. Louise Michel attempted to force an entrance into the building and was again placed under arrest.

A number of Radicals went to the Hotel de Ville to request the Municipal Council to join a deputation which will call upon the leaders of the Extreme Left to protest against the election of Ferry to the presidency.

In pursuance of the order to generals to rejoin their commands, Gen. Boulanger has returned to Clermont-Ferrand, his headquarters. His departure from Paris was unnoticed. The general aspect of Paris at 4.30 o'clock was quiet.

Mobs Around the Hotel de Ville.

PARIS, Dec. 2, night.—On a pretext that the Republic was threatened hundreds of Revolutionists and Socialists, followed by a big crowd, composed of all elements, started for the Hotel de Ville. Police and cavalry charged the mob, which retaliated with a volley of stones. A number of persons were wounded. The mob was dispersed. The Municipal Council has decided to continue in permanent session.

MM. Camilinat and D'Uquercy, Extremist Deputies, with Ernest Roche of The Intransigeant, tried to harangue a crowd in front of the Palais Bourbon but were prevented by the police. Afterwards they proceeded to the Hotel De Ville followed by a mob. The guards dispersed the crowd but permitted the two deputies to enter. The Municipal Council was then discussing a proposal to proceed to the Palais Bourbon to-morrow to demand that the Chamber save the Republic.

M. Camilinat obtained a fervent hearing. The Municipal Council agreed by a vote of 54 to 18 to ask an audience with the Chamber of Deputies.

Prices on the bourse closed strong to-day.

The City Quiet.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—There was much less excitement in the city to-night than last night. Knots of curious people collected from time to time, but were easily dispersed. A few persons received slight injuries in scuffles with the police. Louise Michel was forcibly removed from the entrance of the Palais Bourbon and was then liberated.

M. Grevy has gone to his home, Montsous-Vaudrey. He left Paris on the 7 o'clock express train last night. M. Rouvier expressed himself last evening to the effect that if M. Ferry was elected President it would be his duty to see him safely housed in the Elysee Palace. He was confident he would be able to do it although it would be no easy task. M. Pelletan and other Radicals are credited with saying that M. Ferry would have to wade through blood to reach the Elysee.

Four Men Burned to Death.

BROOKVILLE, Kan., Dec. 2.—The Lawrence Hotel, six business houses and three dwellings were burned here yesterday. Four firemen, Brimer of Wamego, Brakeman Harrigan of Wamego, William Farnsworth of Lincoln, and an unknown man, were burned to death. Charles Moss of Lower Springs, Kan., was badly burned and will probably die. Total loss $22,000.

Accidentally Shot.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—While a dental student in Dr. Alloway's office named Thurber was playing with a loaded rifle in the kitchen this afternoon it went off, killing a little 5-year-old son of the doctor's almost immediately.

A Steamer Ashore.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 2.—The British steamship Kimberly from New Orleans to Liverpool with a cargo of cotton and grain went ashore last night off Currituck Light. The Life Saving Corps took the crew off. The ship may be saved, although she is leaking.

PLACED ON THE FREE LIST.

Anthracite Coal Dust to Rank the Same as Anthracite Coal.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—When the duty on anthracite coal was taken off the section in the Customs Act, imposing a duty of 20 per cent. on anthracite coal dust, was by an oversight not repealed, and consequently anthracite coal dust has been subject to duty, while anthracite coal was free. This has now been remedied by the passing of an order-in-council on the recommendation of the Minister of Customs placing anthracite coal dust on the free list. This does not affect bituminous coal or bituminous coal dust, which still remain subject to duty.

Mr. W. B. Pockington, Indian Agent at Fort McLeod, who is in the city and who has charge of about 3000 Blood and Piegan Indians, reports everything very quiet. Horse stealing is dying out among the Indians and is only practiced by the young bucks. He says that the treaty made last year between the American and Canadian Indians for a cessation of raids and return of horse stealing is working splendidly and there is no danger of collision between the tribes.

Mr. N. F. Davin, M.P., interviewed the Minister of Inland Revenue to-day about the closing of the hop beer breweries in the Northwest. It was represented that permission to establish breweries had been duly given and that the suspension of operations would result in a loss to heavy investors. Hon. Mr. Costigan will consider the matter.

Messrs. Howland, Arnoldi & Bristol, solicitors, Toronto, give notice in the matter of the winding up of the Alpha Oil Gas and Mining Company, that an application will be made in chambers of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, Toronto, on Dec. 12 for the appointment of a liquidator.

The Secretary of State gives notice that information is wanted about William Clerk, who died intestate in Canada about 1842; of George Frederick Platsegraf, who emigrated to America in 1820 or 1830, and is supposed to have settled in British Columbia; of Frederick Sabin, butcher, who came to Canada about eight years ago, and of the parentage, birth place, date and place of death of John Kenneally, formerly sergeant in the Sixty-eighth Regiment, who came to Canada in 1830 and died about 1839.

Parliament has been further prorogued to Jan. 14.

Notices of application to Parliament are given by the Grand Trunk, Georgian Bay and Lake Erie Railway Company for forms to purchase, acquire or amalgamate with the South Norfolk Railway Company; by the Ontario and Qu'Appelle Land Company for an act empowering the company to accept fully paid-up stock of the company on account of purchase money for lands hereafter sold by the company, and providing for the extinguishment of the shares so paid and for other purposes; for an act to incorporate the New York, St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway Company, to construct a railway from a point in or near the Town of Brockville to a point in or near the City of Ottawa, with power to amalgamate with any other companies, and all other powers heretofore granted to any railway company; by the Ontario and Quebec Railway Company, for an act to confirm and establish, and if expedient to alter, the location of its line along the Esplanade in the City of Toronto, and for other purposes; for an act to amend the act incorporating the Shuswap and Okanagon Railway Company by extending the time for the commencement and completion of the said railway, and by increasing the amount to which the company is authorized to issue bonds.

AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON.

THE WORK OF THE COMMISSION SAID TO BE NEARLY OVER.

The President's Message Will Probably Announce That the Commission Has Agreed Upon an Interpretation of the Treaty of 1818.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The Tribune's Washington special says: There is an impression prevailing that the Fisheries Commission will sit for the last night on Saturday next. It is based on the report that one of the Canadian Commissioners asserted at one of the dinners recently given to them that all of the Commissioners would eat their Christmas dinners at home. It indicates too that the negotiation of a new treaty has been found impracticable, a result said to be favored by Mr. Bayard, who is said to be despairing of getting a treaty acted upon by the Senate in its present temper. What the President will probably be able to announce in his message is that the commission has agreed upon an interpretation of the Treaty of 1818.

The ratification of the Extradition Treaty with Great Britain is to be urged by the President. A revision of the naturalization laws, the establishment of a central bureau for registration of naturalized citizens, and a hint as to the advisability of restricting by Federal statute immigration of an undesirable kind are among the topics discussed by the President in view of the recent Anarchist demonstrations in various parts of the country. A letter received from George William Curtis is said to have insured the insertion of a forcible argument in the President's message in behalf of the adoption of some measure covering the copyright question. The abolition of the tax on works of art aga inurged.

In a general and very guarded way the President recommends, it is understood, a liberal enlargement of the free list, mentioning, however by name none of the articles which in his opinion ought to be placed there. It is well known though that wool, salt and lumber are among the articles which in his opinion ought to be on the list. He will again ask Congress to repeal the act making the coinage of silver dollars compulsory and recommend instead that discretionary powers be given to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The President will in a cautious way recommend a liberal system of appropriation for the improvement of the Mississippi River. A good part of the message is devoted to the Indian question, and suggestions are made for a modification of the Severalty Act, in conformity with the experience of last summer. The appeal of the Pre-emption and Timber Culture Acts is urged in the strongest terms. The necessity of preserving the national forest is also pointed out.

The President will allude to the desirability of a restoration of American commerce on the high seas by the adoption of a more liberal policy towards neighboring nations. The President does not agree with the General of the army in recommending an increase of the present force. He urges the reorganization of the army on a modern footing, the abolition of the regimental system and the adoption of the three-battalion formation. He draws attention to the defenceless condition of the coasts, and points out what has been done in the matter of building new ships for the navy.

THE FINANCIAL POSITION.

One of the methods adopted to try to make the people of Canada discontented and to frighten them into Commercial Union or annexation is to enlarge on the alleged heavy and increasing burden of the public debt. The effort, however, has not been successful to any great extent, and the people do not manifest a yearning for a closer political relationship with Uncle Sam or an overpowering desire to resign their markets and their principal business as a nation into his care.

The "burden of debt" is alleged to have have increased alarmingly under the present Dominion Government, and it will not be amiss to enquire a little into the statement. The debt has been increased, but for the debts Canada has valuable assets to show. A large portion of the debt was simply transferred from Provincial to Dominion account and does not represent an increase, the change actually being for the benefit of the people, as the Dominion was able to borrow at a smaller rate of interest than the Province would have had to pay. The remainder of the debt does not amount to as much as has been expended on public works of great utility and national importance, principally railways and canals.

But while sums have been expended on public works in recent years the burden caused by the increase of debt has been but very slightly increased. The debt bears on the people in proportion to the amount they have to pay to carry it. The net interest paid per head of the population was first five cents greater in 1886 than it was in 1878, and for that five cents a year all the benefits of the public works are received. It is not probable that any considerable number of the people would wish to withold the five cents and deprive the country of the improvements upon which it has been expended.

The increase in taxation, apart from the separate item of the debt, is also used as a bugbear. But the fact is that the taxation per head last year was the same as it was in 1874 and eight cents less than it was in 1875, notwithstanding that the Provincial treasuries have received larger sums, thus avoiding direct taxation, and that great improvements have been made. The taxation per head in Canada in 1886 was $5.26, while in the United Kingdom it was $9.93, in South Australia $11.41, and in the United States, although the States receive no aid from the federal treasury, it was $5.28.

These facts are far from being discouraging. The large public works that have been constructed will not have to be built again, and the debt, instead of increasing will probably be decreased. During the month of October it was reduced by over $256,000.

Canada is in a good financial position. The country is progressing and enjoys a large degree of prosperity. Instead of being despondent, as the croakers would have them be, Canadians have reason to be proud of their magnificent country and its achievements. The people will not throw away the benefits of these achievements nor the opportunity of becoming greater without dependence on a foreign nation. They will not sell their birthright for less than a mess of pottage.

THE EGG TRADE.

A recent issue of the American Dairyman contains a report of the Egg Committee of the N. B. C. & E. Association held at Manchester, Iowa. The chairman stated that he had corresponded with all the members of the committee in order to get their views He regrets to repeat that the "same discontent and dissatisfaction between the shipper and receiver and the complaining farmer or producer prevails yet, and the rebellious consumer has still the same grievance in an intensified form." The cause of all this complaining is that in many cases the producer holds eggs, by salting or mealing them, and sells them for fresh laid eggs, and that they are sometimes similarly held by shipper, receiver, or jobber, and are not fresh when they reach the consumer.

The complaint on this part of the dealers and consumers is that when eggs are kept in salt or bran, they shrink and are not so good as fresh eggs. They become light in weight and lose the flavor of the fresh product, yet as they are clear they are sold for fresh, and the dealer is either deceived or joins in practicing a deception which the consumer resents, and the consequence is that the trade is injured. Mr. Anderson, the Chairman of the Committee, proposed as a remedy that all eggs be bought by weight and that twenty-four ounces for ten eggs be made the standard. The suggestion is an old one, which has been frequently made but never put into practice. It is one that it would be difficult to act on. But the facts pointed out in regard to the holding and packing of eggs in bran, meal or salt should be remembered. Pickled eggs do not shrink and lose their flavor as do packed eggs. Northern eggs are better than those produced in the south and the Canadian farmers, by carefully attending to the matter, can continue to do a large and profitable business in this trade.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

Had Heard it Before.

The proud teacher of the infant department of a small Sunday school of this city had a brother of the pastorof the church to visit her at her labor of love last Sunday, and, of course, she wanted to show the ability of her young Bible students.

She always reviewed her charges when a stranger came knowing, of course, that she would receive perfect answers.

"Now, Bobby," pointing to an 8-year-old boy on the back seat, "who made you?"

Bobby—Chestnuts.

This proud teacher now confines herself exclusively to the questions on the lessons of the day.—Philadelphia Press.

For Rickets, Marasmus, and all Wasting Disorders of Children

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is unequaled. The rapidity with which children gain flesh and strength upon it is very wonderful. ### End of a Boom.

First Easterner—I guess you remember me. We met in Los Angeles.

Second Easterner—I remember you perfectly. You are the good angel who sold me a corner lot on which I made a small fortune. I sold that lot for $30,000. You know I only paid you $30,000 for it.

"Yes, and as you did so well, I don't mind confessing that nearly all that $30,000 was clear profit. I bought that lot for a couple of hundred dollars. By the way, what became of the man you sold to?"

"The last I heard of him he was in the almshouse."—Omaha World.

Last week while Mrs. Hamilton Collins of Madoc, was about her work in the cellar the lamp by some means fell from her hand, spilling the oil on herself and child. The clothes of both took fire from the burning lamp, burning the child so severely that it died shorthy after. Mrs. Collins was also badly burned.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

COUNTESS NARONA.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FIRST PART.

So the nurse, following Henry's mercenary example, had her pecuniary interest, too, in the house in which Lord Montbarry had died.

Three days passed before Henry was able to visit Agnes again. In that time the little cloud between them had entirely passed away. Agnes received him with even more than her customary kindness. She was in better spirits than usual. Her letter to Mrs. Stephen Westwick had been answered by return of post, and her proposal had been joyfully accepted, with one modification. She was to visit the Westwicks for a month—and, if she really liked teaching the children, she was then to be governess, aunt and cousin, all in one—and was only to go away in an event which her friends in Ireland persisted in contemplating, the event of her marriage.

"You see I was right," she said to Henry.

He was still incredulous. "Are you really going?" he asked.

"I am going next week."

"When shall I see you again?"

"You know you are always welcome at your brother's house. You can see me when you like." She held out her hand. "Pardon me for leaving you—I am beginning to pack up already."

Henry tried to kiss her at parting. She drew back directly.

"Why not? I am your cousin," he said.

"I don't like it," she answered.

Henry looked at her and submitted. Her refusal to grant him his privilege as a cousin was a good sign—it was indirectly an act of encouragement to him in the character of her lover.

On the first day in the week Agnes left London on her way to Ireland. As the event proved, this was not destined to be the end of her journey. The way to Ireland was only the first stage on her way to the palace at Venice.

THE THIRD PART.

CHAPTER XIII.

In the spring of the year 1881 Agnes was established at the country seat of her good friends—now promoted (on the death of the first lord, without offspring) to be the new Lord and Lady Montbarry. The old nurse was not separated from her mistress. A place suited to her time of life had been found for her in the pleasant Irish household. She was perfectly happy in her new sphere; and she spent her first half year's dividend from the Venice Hotel company, with characteristic prodigality, in presents for the children.

Early in the year, also, the directors of the life insurance offices submitted to circumstances and paid the £10,000. Immediately afterward the widow of the first Lord Montbarry (otherwise the dowager Lady Montbarry) left England with Baron Rivar for the United States. The baron's object was announced in the scientific columns of the newspapers to be investigation into the present state of experimental chemistry in the great American republic. His sister informed inquiring friends that she accompanied him in the hope of finding consolation in change of scene after the bereavement that had fallen on her. Hearing this news from Henry Westwick (then paying a visit at his brother's house), Agnes was conscious of a certain sense of relief. "With the Atlantic between us," she said, "surely I have done with that terrible woman now!"

Barely a week passed after those words had been spoken before an event happened which reminded Agnes of the "terrible woman" once more.

On that day Henry's engagements had obliged him to return to London. He had ventured on the morning of his departure to press his suit once more on Agnes; and the children, as he had anticipated, proved to be the innocent obstacles in the way of his success. On the other hand, he had privately secured a firm ally in his sister-in-law. "Have a little patience," the new Lady Montbarry had said, "and leave me to turn the influence of the children in the right direction; they can persuade her to listen to you, and they shall!"

The two ladies had accompanied Henry and some other guests who went away at the same time to the railway station, and had just driven back to the house when the servant announced that "a person of the name Rolland was waiting to see her ladyship."

"Is it a woman?"

"Yes, my lady."

Young Lady Montbarry turned to Agnes. "This is the very person," she said, "whom your lawyer thought likely to help when he was trying to trace the lost courier."

"You don't mean the English maid who was with Lady Montbarry at Venice!"

"My dear! don't speak of Montbarry's horrid widow by the name which is my name now. Stephen and I have arranged to call her by her foreign title before she was married. I am 'Lady Montbarry,' and she is the 'countess.' In that way there will be no confusion. Yes, Mrs. Rolland was in my service before she became the countess' maid. She was a perfectly trustworthy person, with one defect that obliged me to send her away—a sullen temper which led to perpetual complaints of her in the servants' hall. Would you like to see her?"

Agnes accepted the proposal in the faint hope of getting some information for the courier's wife. The complete defeat of every attempt to trace the lost man had been accepted as final by Mrs. Ferrari. She had deliberately arrayed herself in widow's mourning, and was earning her livelihood in any employment which the unwearied kindness of Agnes had procured for her in London. The last chance of penetrating the mystery of Ferrari's disappearance seemed to rest now on what Ferrari's former fellow servant might be able to tell. With highly wrought expectations, Agnes followed her friend into the room in which Mrs. Rolland was waiting.

A tall, bony woman, in the autumn of life, with sunken eyes and iron gray hair, rose stiffly from her chair and saluted the ladies with stern submission as they opened the door. A person of unblemished character, evidently—but not without visible drawbacks. Big bushy eyebrows, an awfully deep and solemn voice, a harsh, unbending manner, a complete absence in her figure of the undulating lines characteristic of the sex, presented virtue in this excellent person under its least alluring aspect. Strangers on a first introduction to her were accustomed to wonder why she was not a man.

"Are you pretty well, Mrs. Rolland?"

"I am as well as I can expect to be, my lady, at my time of life."

"Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Your ladyship can do me a great favor if you will please speak to my character while I was in your service. I am offered a place to wait on an invalid lady who has lately come to live in this neighborhood."

"Ah, yes—I have heard of her. A Mrs. Carbury, with a very pretty niece, I am told. But, Mrs. Rolland, you left my service some time ago. Mrs. Carbury will surely expect you to refer to the last mistress by whom you were employed."

A flash of virtuous indignation irradiated Mrs. Rolland's sunken eyes. She coughed before she answered, as if her "last mistress" stuck in her throat.

"I have explained to Mrs. Carbury, my lady, that the person I last served—I really cannot give her title in your ladyship's presence!—has left England for America. Mrs. Carbury knows that I quitted the person of my own free will and knows why, and approves of my conduct so far. A word from your ladyship will be amply sufficient to get me the situation."

"Very well, Mrs. Rolland, I have no objection to be your reference, under the circumstances. Mrs. Carbury will find me at home to-morrow until 2 o'clock."

"Mrs. Carbury is not well enough to leave the house, my lady. Her niece, Miss Haldane, will call and make the inquiries, if your ladyship has no objection."

"I have not the least objection. The pretty niece carries her own welcome with her. Wait a minute, Mrs. Rolland. This lady is Miss Lockwood—my husband's cousin, and my friend. She is anxious to speak to you about the courier who was in the late Lord Montbarry's service at Venice."

Mrs. Rolland's bushy eyebrows frowned in stern disapproval of the new topic of conversation. "I regret to hear it, my lady," was all she said.

PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

CRITICAL NOTES BY REV. GEORGE P. HAYS, D. D., LL. D.

Lesson X of the International Series for Sunday, Dec. 4, 1887—Text of Lesson, Matt. xiii, 1-9; Golden Text, Luke viii, 11.

HINTS FOR PRIMARY CLASSES.

BY ALICE W. KNOX.

Golden text: "The seed is the word of God."

It is God's word we study, this seed we sow. Teachers are laborers on the great farm, or in the garden of the Lord. The reaping will be according to the sowing. How is it, fellow laborers, with us? Are we sowing the good seed of the word, or are we sowing our own thoughts, illustrations and seeds of self making? Does every child in our classes get one gospel seed verse implanted in the young heart every Sunday, so that the Spirit will find it there ready for his influences? or are we so anxious to show our ingenuity in manufacturing pictures and original illustrations that there is no time to plant the seed? Pictures are excellent when they aptly illustrate the subject, but they can never take the place of the gospel seed verse that should be well planted in the child's mind. Stories are good when they explain the truth contained in the seed verse, but they must always be helps and not the main lesson.

Jesus Christ could talk in parables and convey exactly the truth he wished to communicate; but he spake as never man spake. In trying to imitate him, the greatest care should be taken not to mistake the story for the truth. Hence let young children memorize the Scriptures. Better far to go back to the old system of a verse a day and take all the Sunday school hour in hearing them recited individually, and have no time for explanations, pictures, illustrations, than to give the hour to these explanations, pictures and illustrations, with no memoriter exercises. The Bible words are God's words; the others are human. The Bible words are the good seed, the others the tillage. First get the seed into the heart soil which God has already prepared for it, and then let the best possible explanations be given. Appeal to eye, to ear, to heart, to memory; then with earnest prayer submit the case to God, pleading for the Sun of righteousness to shine on it and the dews of the divine Spirit to fructify it, when a glorious harvest may be confidently expected.

In China the scholars commit entire chapters and whole books to memory. In a few instances the entire New Testament has been correctly recited from beginning to end. This may, of course, be a parrot like recitation, the pupil not understanding one verse with its true meaning; but it should be thoroughly understood that this is not what is here recommended. The memorizing of at least one seed verse weekly is urged as indispensable to good gospel teaching; then add the rest as time permits, but by no means neglect the first. A concert recitation of the verses is not sufficient. As all teachers know, young children mistake and misunderstand words, like the little boy who told his mother the verse taught in Sunday school was, "Hold a grater to Solomon's ear" (for "Behold, a greater than Solomon is here"). How much gospel did that child get that day? Each child should recite the verse separately, carefully, and then be questioned about it, and receive explanations of words new to it. When twenty, thirty, 100 or 1,000 young children are packed on crowded seats, and all recite together, personal care and instruction are simply impossible. The school may be very attractive, the children may like to attend, but the trut. that very few of them are much benefited. The younger the children the more personal instructions they need. Adults may crowd together under one good teacher and receive benefit, because they know how to read, how to study, how to pay attention, how to think. Little children know none of these things. The very meaning and pronunciation of the words they do not know. What folly to try to teach them en masse! They may be amused, they may be interested, by a skillful teacher, but a book might be written filled with the mistaken ideas and words they obtain. These views are the result of long experience and close observation, and are recommended to primary teachers for their serious consideration. In short, to sow the good seed of the word of God is to plant it in the memory, where the Spirit may find it ready for his use. This is our first work, and let no teacher feel discouraged who finds time for little else.

Remember—"The seed is the word of God."—Sunday School World.

There is no doubt about the honest worth of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Thousands, who have been benefitted by its use, will attest its virtues. This remedy cures liver and kidney complaint, and eradicates every trace of disease from the system.

TRAINING FOR MECHANICS.

LIBRARIAN HOUSTON BEFORE THE LABOR COMMISSION.

Defects of the Present System of Education—Too Many Young Men Go Into Professional and Commercial Life—Carpenters Heard From.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.

The only witness before the Labor Commission yesterday at their afternoon session was Mr. Wm. Houston, librarian of the Provincial Legislature. In the course of a long statement he pointed out the defects of the present system of education, which had a marked tendency to professionalism and commercial life to the detriment of the artisan. He pointed out how technical education could be promoted, and advocated the establishment of a thoroughly equipped Technological College with practical professors in all departments of technical study. In the evening a delegation from the Carpenters' Union gave their version of the recent strike and controverted several statements of the employers' association.

Mr. William Houston, Librarian of the Ontario Legislature, made an interesting statement on industrial education in this Province. The general aim of our educational system was to give a good physical, intellectual, esthetic and moral education. In advocating industrial training he took the ground that if this involved any loss of intellectual education he should not espouse it.

The general tendency of the educational system of Ontario was towards professionalism and commercial life. It did little towards inclining a young man or woman to industrial pursuits. This was not the intention either of the founders of the system or of its managers, all of whom he believed would deprecate this tendency. This was injurious to the best interests of the country, the great productive classes of which were farmers and artisans. If our educational system was not doing something to keep these classes amply recruited the whole material structure of the country must suffer. The great secret of the dislike of young people to farm and artisan life and household labor was that it was drudgery—uninteresting, unintelligent work.

Culture, Mr. Houston maintained, depended not so much on the subjects taught as on the methods of teaching those subjects. The latter was all-important and if it were not so but a mere obtaining of dry facts he should have very little hope for the future of the industrial classes. The fact was hand and mind should be trained together. Witness enlarged on this topic and spoke of the advantages of physical education. Knowledge could be better taught by instructions as occasions afforded than from books. He was strongly in favor of object lessons.

"Our mistake in Ontario," said Mr. Houston, "is that we have depended far too much on the selection of subjects to teach instead of considering the best methods of teaching them. This has been the great blunder of education in modern times. Teachers have simply perpetuated a bad system—that of stuffing children with a mass of facts, a large proportion of which are of not the slightest practical use to them in after life. Now, we are making some progress in the right direction, but not nearly so rapidly as we should."

Every mechanic ought to have received the best practical training at school. "Teach a boy what he will have to practice when he becomes a man," was the good old dictum of Aristotle, and it is true yet. The duty of practical training had never been better put. A boy should not commence work until he is 14 years of age.

Mr. Houston then described the public educational institutions and their working—the Kindergarten system, the primary public school, the secondary public school, and the provincial university. The Kindergarten principle and method was almost perfection. It is the best combination of mental and manual training. He would like to see it enlarged and adopted in the primary schools, which would then be more practical and useful. He believed we were coming to this, and it was needful, for there was not a scintilla of industrial training in connection with them.

Nothing demanded more intellectual work than farming, and yet very few farmers carried on their work on a scientific or intelligent principle but by rule of thumb. "The material welfare of the country," Mr. Houston added, "depends more on the farmers and artisans than on the doctors, lawyers and parsons."

Witness next enlarged on industrial competition all over the world, which was going to leave Canada commercially and financially behind in the race if she did not put herself into a proper condition to compete with the productions of other nations. Germany had to an enormous extent gone into the work of educating their operatives, France and England to a less extent, and America least of the four. Twenty years hence, he believed, the United States would be at the head.

In the remainder of his evidence Mr. Houston spoke of the decay of the apprenticeship system, and said that the most valuable feature of trades unionism was that it tended to supply the place of the Middle Ages "guild" spirit. More machinery would be yearly introduced, large establishments would swallow up smaller ones, and if we wished workingmen to be less amenable to such ideas as had been preached at Chicago, and had had such dire consequences, there must be a better system of training them and improving their

About forty boys met in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Friday evening for Bible study. The lessons were taken from the Book of Joshua and the class, under the direction of the Secretary, Mr. Stevens, spent a pleasant and profitable evening. The boys class was organized on the 1st of October with a membership of eleven. It grows in popularity as the time goes on.

Beef for the Shanties.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—"Mr. Wainright, of Peterborough, took a fine drove of beef cattle through on Thursday, for delivery to the shanties of M. Boyd & Co., on the Monck road. There were a hundred and twenty-five, chiefly steers. Mr Wainright completed last week a contract with Messrs. Gilmour & Co., having dressed seven tons of beef."

THE COUNTY'S VICTORY

THE FINAL DECISION GIVEN IN THE GREAT SUIT.

Nine Years Before the Courts—The Second Action Carried to the Last Court of Appeal—Judgment in the County's Favor.

After fighting the Grand Junction Railway Company for nearly nine years the County of Peterborough's contentions have been upheld by the highest Court of Law in the Empire.

The following cablegram which explains itself was received at Mr. E. B. Edwards law office to-day from Messrs. Robinson, Pool & Robinson, of London:—

"London, Eng., Dec. 2, 1887.

"Victory! Appeal dismissed with costs on points that railway not begun in time and want of engineer's certificate."

HISTORY OF THE CASE.

In the year 1870 a number of prominent citizens of Belleville came up to Peterborough to try to induce the County Council to put a by-law before the people favouring the granting of a bonus of $75,000 to the Grand Junction Railway, which the Belleville people were then endeavouring to have built. The county councillors were opposed to the proposition. After considerable talking and discussion a by-law was presented granting $75,000 to the Grand Junction Railway and $25,000 towards building a railway to run from Peterborough to Haliburton, to be called the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway. The latter grant of $25,000 was worked into the by-law by Mr. S. S. Peck, then the Warden, and his friends. As it was then near the end of the session the council without paying much attention to it, viewing the proposition as one which the people would vote down at any rate, gave it the first and second readings and adjourned. The clerk furnished the copy of the by-laws to the printers, but in the proof the warden made several alterations without the consent or sanction of the council, in favor of the Haliburton road. He also changed the date upon which the voting was to take place, after such date having been advertised. When the day came the votes polled were comparatively few in the present County of Peterborough, while in the present County of Haliburton, in which the Warden was largely interested, the vote was large. Haliburton declared in favor of the by-law by 115 of a majority and Peterborough rejected it by 41 of a majority. When the railway officials came before the council and asked that the by-law be given its third reading the council refused to accede, claiming that the by-law was not properly placed before the people. Still the railway was built on toward Peterborouhh, and in 1872 to give them further notice of Peterborough's intention, Mr. John Walton, then Warden, sent a communication at the direction of the Council—without admitting the by-law was ever binding on them—that the County would contest the matter in the courts in the event o fthe railway company attempting to force them to pay over the money granted by the alleged by-law. The by-law was invalid, as it was not read the third time. This, however, was got over by the company's prevailing on the Ontario Government to legalize the by-law in 1871. A committee was forthwith appointed to go to Ottawa to request the Dominion Government to veto the Provincial Act legalizing the by-law. The Dominion Government did not do so, however. In that event the County still refused to issue the debentures, and in 1879, the road in the meantime being sold out to Mr. E. O. Bickford, an action was taken to compel them to do so.

THE LEGAL COURSE.

The Court of Queen's bench, which it was brought before, decided in favor of Mr. Bickford. The County appealed and the Courtot Appeal confirmed the decision of the court of Queen's Beach. The County then took the case to the Supreme Court of Canada and that court decided that if the company had any claim against the County it would be by entering an action for the amount, not compel the County by mandamus to issue the debentures. Accordingly the company entered an action to recover the $75,000. It was brought before Judge Galt, and was dismissed. The Court of Appeal, to which it was taken, sustained the decisision of the lower court. The case was then taken to the highest court in the Empire and there the decisions of the Canadian Courts were upheld.

POINTS RAISED.

The county gave among other reasons for not paying the bonus. That the extension of time granted by the Ontario Legislature to the company to complete the road was of no effect as the road was chartered by the Dominion Government and that the Ontario Government had no jurisdiction over it.

That it was not built to the town of Peterborough as agreed in the alleged by-law.

That it was not completed within the time specified.

That there was no engineer's certificate given as to the road being built as agreed to.

That the alleged by-law was invalid.

That there was no Grand Junction Railway Company.

The plaintiff claimed that the by-law was good and valid, that the railway was built and that the County was now enjoying its benefits.

That the terms of the by-law binding on the plaintiff had all been complied with.

LEGAL ABILITY.

In carrying the case to the Privy Council Mr. Bickford made every preparation which the bar affords to bring it to a successful issue in his behalf. He retained in his service the Hon. Edward Blake and Mr. Christopher Robinson, Q. C., of Canada, and Sir Horace Davey, of England. Messrs. Blake and Davey argued the case before the Privy Council. The County left it in the hands of Mr. E. B. Edwards, their solicitor, to choose their counsel, and Sir Richard Webster and Mr. Jeane were chosen The people of the county have every reason to feel relieved at the final decision of the case, as had the decision gave against them the amount which they would have had to pay owing to long litigation, would not have been far short of $150,000.

"ONE ANOTHER."

A Lecture Given by the Rev. John E Lanceley.

On Friday evening a lecture was given in the Charlotte Street Church on the subject of "One Another." There was a fairly large attendance. During the progress of the lecture the enthusiasm was with difficulty kept from bursting every five minutes. As it was the applause was frequent and the lecturer kept the audience in good humour throughout the evening. The main point dwelt on was the relation and obligations of people toward each other. The chief study of mankind was man. He discussed the origin of man and his ultimate possibilities. He gave a very interesting talk on capital and labor, showing that, not wealth, but contentment was the source of real happiness. He compared wealth in this regard to poetry. People might as well try to make the world happy by making all men poets as by making all men wealthy. What a world it would be if the 900,000,000 people were devoted to poetic interests all the time! He made the startling announcement that he was a very wealthy man and, the people smiling doubtfully, went on to prove it. He said that he owned any number of railways, street cars, newspapers and innumerable other things. He owned four newspapers. The copies were brought to his house by his carrier boys. Of course the newspapers were his. He got the product of the labor of newspaper men and what did he want more. So with railways. When he wanted to go anywhere all he had to do was to go out of his house and he found his servants all waiting to receive him with the car nice and comfortable. And on the trains he found his servants attentive to him from one end of the journey to the other. All he had to do was to pay a small amount to keep these interests in good running order. He finished this part of the lecture by presenting a picture of life in a very happy manner. The obligation we owed to each other was—first of all—to think; to be thinkers. There were comparatively few thinkers. Most people were contented to exist on other people's thoughts. If people would all endeavor to think, and think hard, inventions and good of a thousand kinds would be the abundant product. All should toil. They should be laborers by hand as well as by brain. There should be no such thing as exemption from toil. When a man got to such a stage as to say "the world owes me a living," everybody should leave him to himself. The butcher should leave him alone, the baker, the doctor, and yes, the undertaker; let him rot. He spoke of the deadly effect of slander and how abhored a thing it was. He gave a cutting description of the adventurer who, too lazy to provide himself a home, sought to marry some rich girl so that she could support him. He was almost forced into the conviction that there was a missing link between the ape and the man when he saw this specimen of humanity. In conclusion he dwelt on the power of love and the importance of following out the divine command, "Love one another."

The Rev. Mr. Tovell rose and stated that it was the rule of the church that no votes of thanks be given. But the pastor made amends by giving a glowing eulogy of the lecture and lecturer. The audience supported his remarks with hearty applause

MINORE'S BISCUIT WORKS.

The Factory in Operation—Doing a Good Business.

The biscuit and confectionery works conducted by Mr. G. W. Hall for the past four years and previously to that time by Messrs. Hall & Ostrom, and which recently were bought out by Mr. W. J. Minore, are now in full running order again.

Mr. Minore has been busy since he took charge of the business in getting things into shape and has succeeded in doing so. Mr. John Watt, a man of much ability and long experience in his department, is in charge of the confectionery part of the business. Mr. Watt is capable of turning out the very finest kinds of confectionery as well as the staple grades. The biscuit department is under the superintendance of Mr. F. Minore, and it is pleasing to note that this department during the last few weeks, since it has been under his control is giving unusual satisfaction. The factory is represented on the road by Mr. H. Cochrane. He is an old hand and well known throughout the district, and the number of orders which he is putting in to be filled show that his services are of value. Mr. Minore, is the superintendent of the business and the management of financial affairs, has a task which he is well qualified to perform. Just now extra efforts are being put forward to make a great display for the Christmas trade.

DRESS-MAKING! We are pleased to announce that Miss Johnston, the accomplished Dress-Maker at TURNBULL'S, is delighting everybody with her work. McFARLANE WILSON,

Obituary.

Mr. Andrew Wilson, of the firm of Wilson & Morrison, managers for Eastern Ontario of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, died at his residence at about six o'clock this morning. Mr. Wilson was taken ill while on a business visit to Belleville on November 1st and returned home, when it was found that he was suffering from typhoid fever and congestion of the kidneys. He was very ill from the first, on the Saturday previous to his death was very low, but on Monday he rallied and his friends had more hope of his recovery all week. On Friday he was conscious at times, and at six o'clock this morning he said he felt quite well. Immediately afterwards he complained of a pain and in a few minutes expired, the action of the heart failing. Mr. Wilson was thirty-three years old. He was born in Cobourg and for fifteen years he was a resident of Peterborough. Soon after coming here he entered into partnership with A. L. Davis in the book and stationery business, which business was carried on by the firm of Wilson & Davis for several years. After retiring from the partnership, Mr. Wilson was in the grocery business for a short time, and then took up insurance, acting as agent for various companies. In July last he established a partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Geo. A. Morrison, to manage the business of the Manufacturers' Life in Eastern Ontario. Mr. Wilson was married about ten years ago to Miss Louisa Morrison, daughter of the late Robert Morrison, of Dummer, who survives him. He also leaves one child, and a mother who is well up in years and feeble, to mourn his death. Mr. Wilson was well and favourably known, and his family and friends have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

The Otonabee Lodge Conversazione.

The arrangements for this event which takes place on Friday evening next, December 9th, are nearly completed. A splendid orchestra will be one of the features of the programme. Refreshments will be served in the large new dining hall, during the intermission in the programme. The committee have decided not to issue invitations. Instead each member will receive four tickets for distribution among his friends. If this limited number of tickets (300) is not then disposed of within a few days before Dec. 9th, the balance will be available for those members desiring additional tickets. The committee decided on this plan so as to avoid the possibility of offence by the issuing of invitations. The seating capacity of the hall is only 300, while there is accommodation for 500 promenaders, hence the necessity of limiting the number of tickets and adopting the above plan.

FRANCE'S NEW PRESIDENT

SADI-CARNOT ELECTED BY THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

The Choice Gives Satisfaction in Paris—At Berlin the President Is Looked Upon as a Weak Man—The Vatican Sends Its Congratulations.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The congress of senators and deputies to elect a successor to President Grevy was opened at 2 o'clock by M. Lesoyer, President of the Senate.

Deputy Michelin, an Irreconcilable, asked leave to make a motion, but the President refused to allow him to do so, declaring that the Assembly was an electoral college.

Paul de Cassagnac observed that the Assembly was sovereign.

M. Gautier contested the competency of the President to limit the Assembly's rights.

President Leroyer replied: "I take my stand on the constitution."

Deputy Michelin wished to propose to revise the constitution.

The President again declined to allow M. Michelin's proposal to be made and the latter entered a protest. The matter was then dropped.

The balloting for election of a President began at 2.15 p.m. At 4.15 p.m. the ballot closed, and after it had been counted the result was announced as follows: Sadi-Carnot 303, Ferry 212, Saussier 148, De Freycinet 78, Appert 72, Brisson 26, other candidates 26.

De Freycinet and Ferry withdrew in favor of Sadi-Carnot.

On the second ballot Sadi-Carnot received 600 votes. The announcement of his election was received with cries of "Vive la Republique."

After signing the Proces-Verbal of the decisions of the Congress and despatching the necessary official notifications of the result of the election, President Leroyer, attended by ushers and followed by the Ministers, proceeded to his private apartment, where M. Sadi-Carnot was waiting. M. Leroyer addressed the newly-elected President as follows: "I have the honor to inform you that the National Assembly has just elected you to the Presidency. I congratulate you in the name of the Congress and desire to add to those congratulations my personal compliments."

M. Rouvier also congratulated M. Sadi-Carnot, adding: "The Republicans in uniting to elect M. Sadi-Carnot have given proofs of the sentiment of union and concord which actuated them, and at the same time afforded the country a pledge of peace and prosperity."

In acknowledging the congratulations M. Sadi-Carnot said: "I thank you from the bottom of my heart for the congratulations and sentiments expressed. I am filled with gratitude to the members of the Assembly, who, in uniting their suffrages in my favor, bore witness to the desire for peace and concord with which Republican France is animated. My dearest wish is that this great day may remain present in all minds and hearts. It signifies that the representatives of France can be united. Their common efforts can and must secure the Constitution, assuring an active and a stable working government, capable of bestowing upon the nation liberty at home and dignity abroad, with all the benefits which our country expects from the republic. Once more I thank you. You may count on my entire devotion."

The President afterward received Gen. Lavocat, commanding the troops at Versailles, who came with his staff to present his respects. Afterward M. Sadi-Carnot advanced to meet representatives of the press desiring to congratulate him. He shook them warmly by the hand, and after giving them a copy of his speech, said: "I feel confident that the press will also do all in its power to tranquilize the public mind."

Meanwhile a squadron of cuirassiers was drawn up in the courtyard, and when the President came forth with his Ministers the troops presented arms and paid him military honors. M. Sadi-Carnot entered a carriage with M. Rouvier, and with the other Ministers in carriages following the cortege, started at a rapid pace for Paris. An escort of cuirassiers brought up the rear. The other Senators and Deputies returned to Paris on a special train. The news of the result of the election was received in Versailles with the greatest enthusiasm. A large crowd surrounded the Congress building throughout the afternoon. Shouts of "Vive Carnot; vive la Republique," mingled with various patriotic cries continued for a long time with unabated vigor.

M. Sadi-Cardot drove direct from Versailles to the Elysee to take formal possession of the palace, but soon retired to his own residence, No. 25 Rue des Bassins. The inhabitants of that quarter speedily assembled and greeted the President with enthusiastic shouts of "Vive Sadi-Carnot," and "Vive le Nouveau President."

M. Sadi-Carnot appeared at the window of his house and said: "I give you hearty thanks, citizens, for this evidence of your sympathy. I beg you to prove by your calm demeanor and regard for order that you are in truth worthy to have a Republican Government."

The speech was received with shouts of "Vive la Republique." The people dispersed quietly. Many houses and shops were illuminated and decked with the tri-color to-night. The streets at this hour (1 a.m.) are rapidly emptying.

An immense crowd assembled this evening at the St. Lazaire Station, the Paris terminus of the railroad from Versailles, to await the arrival of the Senators and Deputies. Great animation is shown upon the boulevards, but there is no disorder. It is apparent that the result of the election gives general satisfaction.

A GERMAN ESTIMATE.

The New President of France Looked Upon as a Feeble Man.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—Official and diplomatic circles in Berlin were absorbed in to-day's developments in Paris, but the public interest was not at all strained. An unceasing stream of telegrams poured into the Foreign Office, and the details of the voting at Versailles were sent without delay to Friedrichsruhe.

The election of M. Sadi-Carnot is better received in official circles than would have been that of M. de Freycinet or M. Ferry. The new President is considered to be a feeble man and one who would be unwilling to consent to complications which might bring about a European war. It is also believed that he will be unable to make alliances against Germany. His personal preferences are for a neutral, pacific policy, and he will try to govern through a ministry with the same tendencies.

Telegrams received from the German Embassy at Paris record the gratifying fact that, though it was considered necessary to guard the approaches to the Embassy, everything was peaceful during the excitement. The utter absence of any anti-German demonstration, the efforts of M. de Roulede and others to provoke a patriotic ebullition finding no response, is raising hopes of a prolonged assuagement of the revanche sentiment.

General Rejoicing in Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Nearly all of the Radical newspaper offices were illuminated to-night, and there is general rejoicing throughout the city. The revolutionary element can have no further excuse for disorder, and should any arise it will be summarily suppressed.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

Count Bismarck Goes to St. Petersburg to Clear up Misrepresentations.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—The situation regarding Russia still continues grave. The Czar has failed to gain control of the anti-Teutonic party, and if he himself is convinced of the friendly intentions of the German Government he has been unable to persuade a majority in the Imperial Council that some practical measures are necessary to restore an entente. In the meantime the anti-German personnel in the Ministry remains in power and the order of M. de Giers instructing the press to cease attacking Germany is defied. An instance of the disregard of the order is contained in an article in the military organ, Svet, which declares the statement that the Czar had received forged letters misrepresenting the German policy to be mere nonsense and that the election of Prince Ferdinand to the Bulgarian throne was not the work of Orleanist intrigue, but of Prince Bismarck, who caused the Emperor to receive Prince Ferdinand at Berlin on the very day the Czar informed the German Government that the Prince of Mingrelia had been nominated to the Bulgarian throne. In a similar strain The Moscow Gazette vaunts the Russian determination never to cultivate an entente until Germany ceases trying to dominate Europe. "Russia," says The Gazette, "can tolerate no predominance, requires no alliance and will not allow herself to be duped."

The language of the inspired Russian press indicates beyond mistake that the price of a renewal of cordial relations with Berlin remains beyond the power or inclination of the German Government to grant. The persistent hostility of the official circle at St. Petersburg deters further approaches by Bismarck toward the harmony discussed in his interviews with the Czar and Count Schouvaloff in Berlin. Count Herbert Bismarck would have gone to St. Petersburg on a special mission to clear up the misrepresentations of the German policy arising from the cabal of the Orleanists with the anti-Teutonic Court party, but as the evidences of treachery already disclosed to the Czar has been unavailing, the mission was abandoned.

THE CROWN PRINCE BUOYANT.

The Public Hope that the Prince's Case Is Not so Desperate as Was Thought.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—The latest bulletin from San Remo announces that the Crown Prince drove out to-day in a closed carriage, the weather being wet. There has been a decided diminution of the congestion of the larynx in the last few days, and nothing indicates the return of the serious symptoms which appeared at the end of October. The private reports of the Crown Prince's condition concur with the official ones. The health of the Crown Prince is wonderful. His sleep is sound and undisturbed, his appetite good, and his mind clear and buoyant. The continuance of favorable reports has given rise to the public hope that the Prince's case is not so desperate as was thought. Rumors prevail that the doctors have been shaken in their opinion as to the true character of the disease, and begin to think that the growth is not cancerous. The papers quote from a recent work by Prof. Lewin the case of a patient with similar symptoms, in whose case the growth on the larynx vanished after partial removal. Berlin experts do not share in the public optimistic belief, but remain certain that the diagnosis of a cancer is accurate, and that the cancerous growth is merely retarded by the present treatment. A powder of sabine leaves is still sprinkled in the Prince's throat daily. It seems to have a decided effect in arresting the growth.

Prof. Bergmann in a clinical lecture before a class on Thursday on a supposed cancer bacillus, described the difference between tumors caused by bacteria of the nature which Dr. Schurlein supposed to be cancerous and those produced by real cancerous humors. Prof. Bergmann said he produced a harmless growth on his own finger by vaccination from similar bacteria. Without direct reference to the Crown Prince's case his statement showed that the Professor was unchanged in his opinion that the Prince's disease is a cancer. Dr. Hovell contradicts the report that a new treatment has been adopted which excludes from the Crown Prince's diet all saccharine substances. The daily life of the Prince is strictly regulated and this assists in the stay of the disease. He is not permitted to swallow anything that would irritate his throat or read anything liable to disturb his mind. He does not read the papers, but selected extracts on political events are read to him. He never sees reports regarding his own condition.

The Channel Telegraph.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The negotiations between England and France looking to co-operation in the working of the Channel telegraph wires promise to result favorably. France as well as England refuses to renew the concession to the Submarine Company, which, thus nonplussed, will be obliged to sell on England's terms. England, it is thought, would reduce the rate to 2 pence per word.

Lord Lyons' Conversion.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Lord Lyons' conversion to Roman Catholicism occurred six months ago, and he has been a regular attendant at mass for four months, although he was only baptized on Monday by the Bishop of Southwark, when his severe illness appeared likely to result seriously very soon.

The Socialists are Tired.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Socialists made no attempt to carry out their threatened demonstration in Trafalgar-square or Hyde Park to-day.

Vessels from Chili Quarantined.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The Republic of Colombia has quarantined all vessels departing from the ports of Chili since Oct. 31 last, on information that cholera prevails in that country.

GOOD FOR FIVE YEARS YET

THE CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT IN ENGLAND FIRMLY ESTABLISHED.

Gladstonians Beginning to Admit That All Hopes of Driving Their Opponents From Office are Mere Delusions—A Speech by Hartington.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The Herald's London special says: It is very noticeable that even among the stoutest Gladstonians a forecast of Parliament begins to be accepted similar to that I have long laid before you. They see that the Gladstone bill will never do. Moreover, they begin to doubt whether this Ministry is not safe beyond the reach of attack. Labouchere admits this week that the Government may remain in three or four years more. Cast up the numbers of the respective parties, and the conclusion is unavoidable. The Conservatives have a majority of 100, and four Home Rulers have gained four seats in one year, ergo, it would take them at that rate twenty-five years to turn out the Conservatives.

This Parliament will expire in 1892, according to recent usage, its full term of seven years not being up till 1893. No Conservative Minister would dream of dissolution, even if grave difficulties in public affairs arose. The present Government might conceivably resign, but another Unionist Government would immediately be formed. Hartington or Churchill would be sent for by the Queen, not Gladstone, because the party with a clear majority would have a right to claim the trial of an alternative Ministry. All hopes, therefore, of driving the Conservatives from office are mere delusions.

This Parliament, barring an earthquake and other abnormal convulsions, will last nearly five years more. Many people dislike that prospect, and they try to soften it by building castles in the air. But the big battalions are with the Unionists, and they win in politics. If, indeed, Mr. Gladstone were to die and a Hartington-Chamberlain Government were to be formed there is no telling what might be the consequences.

Lord Hartington, addressing his constituents to-night, said that as long as Mr. Gladstone's object was to establish a Parliament in Dublin, there would be no hope of a reunion of the Liberal party. When the Liberals were willing to co-operate with the Unionists for the extension of local liberty, local self-government and freedom, Ireland would find that the Unionists were its closest friends.

SCANDALS IN LONDON.

The Name of a Wealthy Peer, Recently Deceased, Linked With an Actress.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Social gossip is again largely charged with scandals. The recent sudden death of a wealthy peer is linked with the name of a charming actress. It is said that in revenge for the exposure of Col. Hughes-Hallett by The Pall Mall Gazette, a Tory member proposes on the meeting of Parliament to make an inquiry why an inquest was not held in relation to the death of the aforesaid peer, who was an active supporter of Mr. Gladstone. If this intention is carried into effect there will be a retort, and, once the game is begun, the deluge.

There is a chance that the Tory member will be mollified by the revelation resulting from Mr. Borlase's bankruptcy. Mr. Borlase was a subordinate member of Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Administration. He held office but a few weeks and early last session found it necessary to give up his seat. Ill health was pleaded at the time, but the knowing one smiled and now it is all out. Mr. Borlase, in his rosy days, was worth, say £25,000. In addition he had an exceptionally fine library and art collection; which alone he valued at £3000. A man of taste and culture, he was somewhat reckless in expenditure, and when he opened a second establishment for the benefit of the interesting Madame de Quiros, the end came with startling rapidity. Tories find this unhappy case very consoling. The Dilke and Borlase cases, wherein the accused were both colleagues of Gladstone, weigh heavily against the case of Col. Hughes-Hallett. But the Tories are quite prepared to make their opponents' scale bump the ground, if party exigencies demand it.

GERMANY'S FUTURE EMPEROR.

Prince William Discloses the Adoption of Earnest Religious Ideas.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—The presence of Prince William at the Berlin Mission meeting at Count Waldersee's residence was the first public disclosure of what has privately been known for some time, namely, his adoption of earnest religious ideas. The Waldersee meeting, though merely called to devise some means to promote the work of the Stadt Mission, brought together the Conservative leaders and the foremost Evangelicals. The principal theme of the speakers, including Prince William, was how to bring back the masses to Christianity and strengthen the popular respect for the church and the Crown. Prince William's remarks created a profound impression. He is intensely serious in the personal duties attaching to his high position. This trait of the Prince's has not been favorably received at Berlin, where it is criticised as showing reactionary tendencies likely to cause trouble when he shall succeed to the throne.

THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS.

It Will Meet To-day and The President's Message Will be Read To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The first Monday in December being the day prescribed by the Constitution for the annual meeting of Congress, the Fiftieth Congress will be called to order at 12 o'clock to-morrow.

The course of events in the Senate during the week seems to depend entirely upon the ability of the two parties to reach a conclusion with respect to the admission of the members-elect. Should threatened objections to the new members not be made or should a compromise or understanding be reached, the Senate will to-morrow appoint the customary committee to give notice to the House of Representatives and to the President of the organization of the Senate and its readiness to proceed to business.

If both Houses complete their organization to-morrow the President's message will be laid before them on Tuesday. The remainder of the week in the Senate is likely to witness nothing in the way of general legislation except the introduction of bills. A good deal of time is likely to be spent by the Senate during the early weeks of the session in secret session, as a long list of recess appointments are submitted by the President for confirmation.

The House will be called to order at noon by Mr. Clark, the clerk of the House, and after a quorum of members have responded to their names on a call of the roll the work of organization will be proceeded with.

THE FISHERY COMMISSION.

Mr. Chamberlain Proving Himself a Good Friend to Canada.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Fisheries Commission had another meeting yesterday. It is said that the Government here and its party throughout the country are greatly disappointed that Mr. Chamberlain has not been more pro-American in his utterances. It was thought that he would not value Canadian interest very highly, but not as the guardian of such interests as were directly imperial in their bearing. It is now, however, generally conceded that Sir Chas. Tupper could not have been associated with a more firm and unflinching ally in guarding Canadian rights. His assurance at the recent interview that he would not consider any proposal or agreements as satisfactory, unless endorsed by the Canadian Commissioner, ought to be sufficient. The principal danger would seem to be that the wholly unwarranted statements of some Canadian papers may prejudice him against the country and lower his estimation of it.

Secretary Bayard has presented Sir Chas. Tupper, Judge Thompson, Hon. Mr. Foster and the Canadian attaches with cards of admission to the diplomatic gallery of the Senate during the session of Congress.

REILLY TRIED HIS REVOLVER.

And the Shot Struck a Little Girl in the Head, Killing Her.

LAWRENCE STATION, L.I., Dec. 3.—Helen, the 10-year-old daughter of George C. Rand, coffee merchant of New York, was shot and killed this afternoon by Patrick Reilly. The child was standing near a window on the second floor of Mr. Rand's residence, her mother and father being beside her, when a bullet crashed through the window, whizzing past Mr. Rand's head and entering the child's head at the base of the brain. Death ensued fifteen minutes later. Reilly was twenty yards away cleaning a heavy revolver and fired to see if it was all right. The coroner held an inquest and a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

JUMPED FOR THEIR LIVES.

The Inmates of a Burning Hotel in Guelph Have a Narrow Escape.

GUELPH, Ont., Dec. 3.—At 2 o'clock this morning fire was discovered on the first floor of the Commercial Hotel, one of the largest hotels in the city. It had made such headway when the guests and boarders were awakened that escape by the stairway was impossible, and all had to jump from the windows in their night clothes to save their lives. Although there were several narrow escapes none are supposed to be seriously injured. Hough, the proprietor of the hotel, was seriously burned in rescuing his family. The third and fourth stories of the building are completely gutted, and the hotel will have to be entirely rebuilt.

One Life Lost.

GUELPH, Dec. 3.—The body of Charles Rake has just been found in the ruins of the Commercial Hotel, destroyed by fire last night. He was reported safe at first and afterwards missing.

Differentials Allowed the C.P.R.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—The differential allowed by the American trans-continental lines to the Canadian Pacific, in order to abate competition, is 30 cents on first-class freight to New York and 20 cents Chicago to San Francisco On other freight the difference in favor of the Canadian Pacific ranges from 25 cents down to 5, the latter on the coarser traffic. The new trans-continental association, it is definitely stated to-day, will commence operations Jan. 1.

Grass Life Preservers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The grass life preservers used on the steamer Vernon at the time of her loss near Two Rivers, Wis., in October last, were thoroughly examined by officers of the Steamboat Inspection Service and the result reported to the Treasury Department. It is said at the Department that this particular life preserver was fully up to the standard required by the service.

THE GRAND JUNCTION SUIT.

THERE is more in the result of the suit of the Grand Junction Railway Company against the County of Peterborough than the saving of the money that the County would have lost had the decision of the Privy Council been in favor of the railway. With the cost and interest added to the sum claimed the amount would have been a heavy one. The payment of $150,000 or more would have been a serious matter, and the judgment of the final court of appeal is for that reason satisfactory to the people of the County.

The judgment, however, is a decision that a railway company must fulfil the conditions of an agreement before it can collect payment upon it. The judges being of opinion that the by-law had been made valid and that the corporation was good, the decision turned upon the question as to whether the conditions had been met. Holding that they had not, they dismissed the appeal and the judgment stands in favor of the County.

The County made a gallant fight in the case and is to be congratulated upon the result of the protracted contest, and to the solicitor for the County, Mr. E. B. Edwards, a share of the honor of the victory is due.

While the system of bonusing has largely been dropped, the questions discussed at the various stages of this suit and the decisions will make clear points that other counties as well as Peterborough may learn from. Too much thought and carefulness cannot be given to important matters of this kind by public bodies, and, when a bonus is proposed, the terms of the conditions must be clearly stated. A thorough understanding of the matter at the beginning may save trouble and expense on the part of the companies as well as of the municipalities.

THE Montreal Witness is trying to force its party into a definite position on public questions. "So far as Dominion politics are concerned," says the Witness, "the Liberal party appears to be thoroughly demoralized." Several things are lacking in the party, the wisdom that would lead it to profit by reverses, a recognition of the patriotism of the people, and backbone.

IT was amusing to see how several esteemed contemporaries of neighboring towns published the Mail's article "Peterborough must pay," without any reference to the contrary report. The smile has considerably broadened since the decision was received.

WILL the Lindsay Warder please revise its opinion of the effect the Privy Council decision will have upon the County of Peterborough? The County will continue to "hump," but not to pay debts it does not owe.

To the Mail, Toronto.—Do not be in a hurry to jump at conclusions, even if based on a telegram from the Hon. Edward Blake. "The County must" not "pay."

REVIEWS.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.—The December Century opens with a frontespiece portrait of Lincoln from a photograph made about the time of his inauguration, which event is the subject of the present part of the very interesting Lincoln history. Several portraits also accompany the paper. Prof Charles W. Shields, of Princeton College, contributes an important review of the letters on Christian Unity which have appeared in the Century. Mr. Kennan's second paper dealing with "Prison Life of the Russian Revolutionists" throws light on the phases of life in Russia that have aroused the revolutionists. A paper on the sea of Galilee by Mr. Edward L. Wilson, profusely illustrated, is a valuable aid in getting a correct view of localities in that neighborhood. "Notes on Parisian Newspapers," by Mr. Brander Mathews, is an interesting study of French journalism accompanied by portraits of leading journalists. Mr. M. G. Van Rensselaer describes Durham and its cathedral, aided by illustrations by Mr. Pennell. A second instalment of "The Graysons," by Edward Eggleston, and of Geo. W. Cable's "Au Large," the first part of "The Dusantes" by Frank R. Stocton, and a short story by J. G. Perkins, "After the War," comprises the fiction of the number. Mr. Irving's Faust, the Tonic Sol-Fa system of writing and teaching music, municipal patriotism, cheap books and the education of the blind are ably treated by various writers. The "Memoranda in the Civil War" includes valuable information, and the poetry of the number is of a high standard.

ST. NICHOLAS.—The December (Christmas) St. Nicholas, is one of the most beautiful numbers of that excellent publication yet issued. There is a veritable feast of good things for the little folks, while older heads will enjoy the fine reading. Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett contributes a new story, "Sara Crew," finely illustrated. Mr. Frank Stevelin shows up in its pages in his story of the "Clocks of Rondame"; H. H. Byesen tells the queer tale of the "Bear that had a Bank Account," while the holiday character of the publication is maintained in the narrative "The First Christmas Tree in New England." The "Balloon Voyage" will interest boy readers mightily, while the balance of contents is of a varied and interesting character. The illustrations are up to the high standard maintained in this publication.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

A Romantic Engagement.

"Whom did you say he was going to marry?"

"Twenty millions."

"Oh, how perfectly sweet!" And then the car stopped.—Boston Herald.

It is wise to provide against emergencies which are liable to arise in every family. In sudden attacks of cold, croup, asthma, etc. a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will prove a never failing remedy.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Correspondence of the Review.

RECOVERING.—We are pleased to be able to state that the little five year old boy of Mr. Patterson Boyd, that was badly scalded a little over a week ago, by falling into a pail of hot water, is recovering nicely under the treatment of Dr. Carmichael, of this place.

OBIT.—It is with feelings of sadness that that we chronicle the death of Willie Graham, a boy about fourteen years of age, and a son of Mr. W. S. Graham, who lives about a mile and a half north-west of this place, that took place on Thursday, the 24th of Nov., after a severe illness of about six months. The funeral took place on the following Saturday and was attended by a large number of friends and relatives. The members of the family have the sympathy of the whole neighborhood in their sad bereavement.

HYMENEAL.—On Tuesday evening, the 29th of Nov., Mr. Francis Gardiner and Miss Nettie Sanderson both of this place were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. D. N. McCamus of Cavanville. The young couple are highly respected by all who knew them, and we join their many friends in wishing them health, prosperity, and happiness in their new sphere.

SCHOOL REPORT.—The following is an account of a written examination held in our school during the last two weeks, showing the marks obtained by the pupils in the second, third, fourth and fifth classes:—

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Northern Division, A.C.A.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association will be held in Peterborough on Friday night, this week. The place of meeting will be at the office of Messrs. Hatton & Wood. It is expected that there will be a very full attendance of members of the committee, which are drawn from clubs throughout the province at large. Besides the local clubs, Toronto, Deseronto, Orillia, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and others will be represented. The sub-committee who some short time ago looked over the proposed site for next year's camp on Courchiching Lake, near Orillia will report to the executive, and there is a strong probability that suggestions relative to the site will be adopted. The Northern Division is a strong arm of the parent organization and next summer's meet, it is expected, will be one of the most successful yet held.

Prices always right and consistant with First Class Work.

The Railway Suit.

This morning's Toronto Mail contains the following special cable despatch:—"The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council yesterday gave judgment in the case of the Grand Junction and Midland Railway of Canada versus the Corporation of Peterborough. The appeal is from the decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario of September of last year. Their Lordships held that the corporation was not liable for the compensation claimed, and they would accordingly advise the Queen to dismiss the appeal with costs." The Globe's cable says:—"The Privy Council to-day gave judgment in the case of the Grand Junction and Midland railways v. the Corporation of Peterborough. The appeal was dismissed with costs on the ground that there was no substantial commencement of the work in Peterborough County early enough to fulfil the by-law conditions, and there was no certificate from the engineer, as required."

Personal.

Mr. J. B. Carlile, Manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, is in town to-day for the purpose of attending the funeral of the late Andrew Wilson.

Dr. Rosebrugh, Surgeon of the Throat, Eye and Ear Dispensary, will be at the Grand Central Hotel, Peterborough, on Wednesday, the 7th inst. 1d133

Mr. T. J. Anderson, who has for the last year been engaged with Mr. J. Alexander as head salesman, leaves town this week to take a position with one of the leading dry goods houses at Montreal. Mr. Anderson is pushing and popular, and his many friends wish him unlimited success. The Baptist Church choir, of which he was a member, will miss his services.

Mr. Chas. Russell, the Mathematical master at the Peterborough Business College, severed his connection with that institution on Saturday. This morning he left town to take charge of the books of the Star Hosiery Company, at Georgetown, Ont. A number of his friends saw him off at the Grand Trunk station.

Messrs. A. Loch and W. Hamilton are, in the opinion of the medical attendant, somewhat better to-day than they were on Saturday.

Mr. Taylor, formerly of this town, the travelling representative of the Toronto Stove Company, was in town to-day. He reports that the season's business has been good.

CORSETS from the best factories in the world, pliable, durable and perfect fitting in all sizes at TURNBULL'S.

Church Notes.

—The Rev. E. F. Torrance, preached on the 'Palace called Beautiful," one of his series of sermons on the Pilgrim's Progress, on Sunday evening. The attendance was large, considering the disagreeable night.

—Mr. J. B. Hutchins, formerly of St. John's Church choir, now on the "road" for a commercial house, being in town on Sunday, resumed his place in the choir for the day. His solos were listened to with much pleasure.

—The Rev. P. Clifton Parker, pastor of the Baptist Church, Murray street, preached on Sunday evening on "Calvary, the scene of Man's greatest crime." His discourse was of much interest.

—On Sunday next a sermon to the Sons of England will be preached by the Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A. B.D., in the George Street Methodist Church.

—The Official Board of the George Street Church will meet this evening and will probably decide on inviting a clergyman to the pastorate next year. Clergymen in the Montreal Conference have been mentioned, but the church will probably extend the invitation to a minister at present in the Bay Conference.

—A county convention of Sunday school workers will meet in St. Paul's Church this evening. The convention will hold sessions to-morrow in the morning, afternoon and evening.

—On Sunday evening at the George Street Church Rev. Mr. Tovell preached an excellent sermon, the force of his remarks being directed to the enquiry as to how his hearers stood in their relation personally to the salvation so freely offered. Some touching references were made to the sad event that has cast a cloud of sorrow over the family and friends of the late Mr. A. Wilson, and the warning that death may find anyone unprepared was feelingly pointed out. The remarks of the Rev. Mr. Tovell, so timely in their application, made a serious impression on many a listener.

—An impressive quartette, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" was sung in St. John's Church on Sunday evening, by Mrs. Seward, soprano; Miss Cottingham, contralto; Mr. Hutchins, tenor, and Mr. Morris, basso.

Allen's Lung Balsam is warranted to cure the most distressing Cough.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

A Convention of County Workers—The Programme.

A convention of those interested in Sunday school work throughout the County will be held in the spacious school room of St. Paul's Church this evening and to-morrow.

The convention will open at 7.30 o'clock this evening. The Secretary of the Provincial Association, Mr. Alfred Day, will occupy the chair. After devotional exercises the nominating committee will be appointed. An address of welcome will be given by the Rev. E. F. Torrance, after which the report of the nominating committee will be presented.

An address will be given by Mr. Day on "Provincial Sabbath School Work."

The closing address will be given by Mr. L. C. Peake, of Toronto, the subject being, "The Fruitfulness of Modern S.S. Work."

The convention will open at 9.15 o'clock to-morrow morning. An "Institute Exercise" will commence at half past nine, to be conducted by Mr. Day. At ten o'clock Mr. Peake will deliver an address on "The Superintendent." At ten minutes to eleven the Rev. John McEwan will give an address on a "Model Teachers' Meeting."

The first address in the afternoon will be given by the Rev. Dr. McTavish, of Lindsay, commencing at a quarter after two o'clock. It will relate to missionary work. At three o'clock Mr. Day will speak about the "Spiritual aims of Sabath School Teaching and how best results are to be attained." The convention will resolve itself into a council at a quarter to four o'clock, the topic being, "How can the army of Sunday School Teachers be endued with power and equipped for service" The committee on county organization will report at half past four and the convention will adjourn at five o'clock.

In the evening addresses will be given by the local clergy.

A few sets of Cincinnati made hand, Pane & Rip Saws, the best made in the United States, 20, 24, 26 & 28 inch received at GEORGE STETHEM'S. d114w46

Local Brevities.

—A meeting of the Board of Education will be held to-morrow night.

—Every member of No. 1 Company, 57th Battalion, is requested to turn out for drill on Tuesday evening.

—Acting-Chief Adams appears this morning in style. He wears a new patrol jacket of Dolan's finest make.

—The Y.M.C.A. Snow Shoe Club will turn will turn out for a tramp to-morrow evening. If there is no snow they will take exercise without their ordinary shoes.

—The posters are out announcing the advent of the new Conservative journal, the Empire, on or about December the 15th.

—Weather probabilities:—Strong winds or moderate gales from south-west and north-west; fair weather, becoming colder.

—Three packages of money were found on the market on Saturday. This fact would seem to refute the impression that there is no money in the country.

—It is rumoured that developements in regard to candidates for municipal honors may be looked for about the middle of the week.

—Citizens are gradually coming to the conclusion that expenditure for a good and ample system of trunk sewers and drains is something that must be faced next year.

—The electric lamp at the top of Smithtown hill was put into use on Saturday night. There are now twenty-four lamps on the streets.

—On Saturday Patrick Handranan, one of the regular winter boarders at Castle Nesbitt, appeared at the court and made application for his usual sentence. He was given four months.

THE SCOTT ACT.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—As the recent prosecution of our firm by the Peterborough authorities for a violation of the Scott Act, and the Police Magistrate's decision against us, as reported in your paper, places us in a false position, I shall be glad if your would give me an opportunity to publish our side of the story.

Mr. Dumble in giving judgment stated "it was not the intention of the Act that brewers should flood a Scott Act County with beer" (as he expressed it). What the intention of the Act is it is difficult to make out, but judging from the way it is administered its chief aim and object seems to be to extort money by a species of legalized blackmailing whereby unfortunate hotel keepers are bled to the uttermost farthing and the amount of fines that can be collected—and the not prevention of drunkenness—seems to be the end in view. In fact the noble cause of philanthropy is prostituted to the baser purposes of personal gain or personal advantage in this so called "Temperance" movement, from the mercenary and hypocritical temperance lecturer at so much a night, to the collection of $50 or $100 and costs from men engaged in what until recently has been universally recognized as a legitimate business.

A brewer's position under this Act is a peculiar one. With large capital invested and a license from the Dominion Government to carry on their business, they are yet deprived of it and their property rendered valueless by the Scott Act without one cent of compensation. Is this justice or fair play? If a too offensive Scott Act man occasionally gets his barn burnt, or a little of his property destroyed, he is at once held up as a martyr among his friends, but those whose property he has been so aggressively destroying in pursuit of his pet "fad" and under cover of an unjust, tyrannous and probably unconstitutional law, are expected to submit without murmur and resistance to the confiscation of their property and even means of livelihood! Well, human nature has hardly arrived at that degree of meek perfection yet.

The Act provides that brewers may sell in any place where the Scott Act is in force, provided it is not their own or an adjoining county; therefore there is nothing to prevent brewers from Montreal, Toronto, London and all other parts of the country selling in Peterborough! This anomaly of compelling purchasers to send so far away to the detrement of the local trade was brought before Parliament and an amendment proposed, but the temperance people then delared that they had no intention of enforcing that part of the law, the proposed amendment was allowed to drop. It is only in a very few instances that brewers have been fined, the motive for doing so being probably either spite or the desire for money, as under the circumstances explained above no possible advantage to the cause of temperance can be gained by such persecution.

Yours, &c.,
THOS. H. AMBROSE.

Port Hope, Dec. 1st, 1887.

[NOTE.—While allowing Mr. Ambrose space to give his views, we do not, of course, by so doing endorse the opinions expressed in his letter.—ED. REVIEW.]

DISTRICT NOTES.

Midland District News Condensed from Contemporaries.

Beaverton has a new pottery, established by John Brown.

Prince Edward County has sold $40,000 worth of fruit this year.

A new post office called "The Flats" has been opened in North Hastings.

A son of Thos. Puffer, of Minden, fractured his thigh bone on Monday.

An old resident of Cobourg, Wm. Van Ingen, aged 86 years, died on Saturday.

Deseronto has a population of three thousand and will probably be incorporated as a town.

A fire in the Royal Hotel stable at Lindsay did damage to the extent of $200 on Wednesday.

The hotelkeepers in Millbrook have closed their bars and there is talk of the sheds being closed.

A new residence for the gaoler will be built at a cost of $2,000, at Belleville next season.

The Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora railway closed business for the season on Thursday.

Judge Benson has been appointed revising barrister for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

R. Baulch's tailor shop in Port Hope, was burglarized on Thursday night and about seventy dollars worth of goods taken.

George Elliott, Port Granby, was thrown out of a buggy on Wednesday and was so severely injured that he died next day.

A shoe dealer of Port Hope has on exhibition a lady's boot that is 301 years old and that was for some time in the possession of Queen Victoria.

Midland had an elopment excitement a few days ago. A young man and a married woman departed together.

A fine colt belonging to R. T. Upton was found dead near Campbellford recently, and it is supposed that it was shot by hunters.

An eleven year old boy of Tremon ran away from home, to go to England. He got as far as Montreal, and was sent back from there.

Three cattle belonging to John Smith, of Thorah, were killed a few days ago by a straw stack falling upon them, the collapse of a shed letting the straw down.

Thieves found an entrance into Runnell Bros.' grocery in Campbellford on Sunday night and carried off a quantity of canned goods and candies.

While operating a windless in Belleville on Wednesday, Wm. Hill received a terrible blow from the crank on his shoulder and face. A gash in his lip had to be sewed.

Geo. Green was sentenced to two months in gaol at Trenton on Tuesday for stealing an overcoat and for carrying a revolver was fined $20 or 30 days in gaol.

Water is still very scarce at Lindsay and the price of milk has been advanced. The Post wants to know what the scarcity of water has to do with the price of milk.

John Richards was sentenced to four years in the Penitentiary, at the Belleville Police Court on Friday, for burglarizing a store, and fifteen days for stealing stamps from the post office.

A civic deputation from Cobourg waited on the Provincial Treasurer last week and presented an "ultimatum" regarding Cobourg's Municipal Loan Fund debt. It is not known yet whether the Government capitulated.

While Wm. Steinkraus, of Minden, was skidding logs on Wednesday, a cant hook slipped and the log rolled on his foot, injuring it severely.

A man employed in Mr. T. B. Tait's mill, Gravenhurst, had one of his arms taken off last week, by falling against the circular saw. He was a stranger in Gravenhurst, and had only commenced to work.

Work has been begun on the swing bridge over the canal at Fenelon Falls. When this is finished and the new railway bridge built boats will be able to pass from Sturgeon to Cameron Lake.

Lake Simcoe is some three feet lower this fall than it has ever been known in the annals of history. There is a nice island between the two wharfs at Beaverton now which never before existed.

A Murray farmer named Cole was unable to dispose of some turkeys at Belleville or Frankford on Saturday and returned home. He became violently insane and died on the following Thursday.

It is estimated that over one hundred deer have been killed by outside hunting parties in the township of Anson alone this season. If hunting with dogs is not prohibited deer will become practically extinct in this neighborhood in a few years.

John Adams, of Longford, while hunting at Hollow Lake, found two large bucks in the lake dead, with their horns locked together. They had been fighting and their horns becoming fastened together they were drowned.

The Bowery of New York.

As a realm of unsweetness and light the Bowery cannot be surpassed. From the Cooper Union to Park row it is all giddiness, grime and glitter. Go over that track on a Saturday night particularly and you will find Dickens' descriptions of low London realized at every turn. A long street of shops, cheap lodging houses, bummers and knights of industry, where the electric glow brings out its salient points of trade, poverty, idleness and living by one's wits. From corner to corner its rag, tag and bobtail, heaped Pelion on Ossa like, until nowhere can a trace of respectability, comfort or placidity be seen. The stores do a thriving trade in small sums and small wares; the liquor saloons catch the profits, the shooting galleries and dime museums take the extras, and the lodging houses take what's left over.

The Bowery is a continent in one small street. Negroes, Chinamen, Italians, Turks, Jews and Spaniards; a babel out of which you can glean only crime and dirt and self interest. There are the fruit stand, the corn man, the laundry, the chestnut man and the collar button fiend. You begin at the Cooper Union with bananas and lager beer and end at Park row with anatomy and opium!—Nathan M. Levy in New York Graphic.

MR. GOSCHEN QUITS DUBLIN.

e His Departure He Addresses the Constitutional Club.

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—Mr. Goschen, replying to an address from the Dublin Constitutional Club, said he would return to England invigorated by witnessing the numbers and spirit of the Irish Loyalists. He accepted their tribute to the Government, which they rightly regarded as resolved to make the laws of the Imperial Parliament respected everywhere in Ireland.

The Express, Conservative, says: "The arrest of Lord Mayor Sullivan may be regarded as a solemn undertaking of the Government to, in any event, suppress sedition and disorder."

The Irish Times, Conservative, says: "It is the first time in our annals where a chief magistrate of a city has placed himself in a position where he represents resistance to the law. It his duty is so conspicuously exemplify obedience to the law.

Apologized to Mr. Healy.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Mr. Macdonald, the land advocate of Scotland, implied in a recent speech that T. M. Healy had advocated the wholesale robbery of landlords. Mr. Healy challenged Mr. Macdonald to give the authority upon which he had spoken. In reply to the challenge Mr. Macdonald sends an apology to Mr. Healy.

Mr. Fogarty's Departure Deferred.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 4.—A man named Fogarty, prominent in the rioting at Limerick last Sunday, was arrested here to-day. He was about embarking on a steamer for New York.

A PLOT TO MURDER HARTINGTON.

A London Newspaper Says There Was a Fenian Conspiracy Afoot.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Morning Post in its issue of to-day declares that certain Parnellites recently urged the Fenians to murder Lord Hartington, which they scornfully refused to do. American Fenians then undertook the task, arriving on the Continent for that purpose a fortnight ago. There, in concert with a few Irish Fenians, they made an arrangement by which the rails on the road between Kingstown and Dublin were to be removed in order to wreck the train carrying Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen last week, and in the excitement shots were to be fired into the carriage occupied by the English visitors. The scheme was abandoned when it became known that Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen traveled by different trains, and that the former drove straight to the residence of Mr. Powers in Lespardstown, thus missing Dublin.

It was next arranged to attack Mr. Powers' carriage in a lonely lane and murder Lord Hartington or carry him into the Wicklow Mountains, where he was to be held as a hostage for the release of Wm. O'Brien and other political prisoners. Everything had been matured, but the plot miscarried owing to the watchfulness of the police.

COUNTESS NARONA.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

THE THIRD PART.

"Perhaps you have not been informed of what happened after you left Venice?" Agnes ventured to add. "Ferrari left the place secretly, and has never been heard of since."

Mrs. Rolland mysteriously closed her eyes—as if to exclude some vision of the lost courier, which was of a nature to disturb a respectable woman. "Nothing that Mr. Ferrari could do would surprise me," she replied, in her deepest bass tones.

"You speak rather harshly of him," said Agnes.

Mrs. Rolland suddenly opened her eyes again. "I speak harshly of nobody without reason," she said. "Mr. Ferrari behaved to me, Miss Lockwood, as no man living has ever behaved—before or since."

"What did he do?"

Mrs. Rolland answered with a stony stare of horror: "He took liberties with me."

Young Lady Montbarry suddenly turned aside and put her handkerchief over her mouth in convulsions of suppressed laughter.

Mrs. Rolland went on, with a grim enjoyment of the bewilderment which her reply had produced in Agnes. "And when I insisted on an apology, miss, he had the audacity to say that the life at the palace was dull, and he didn't know how else to amuse himself!"

"I am afraid I have hardly made myself understood," said Agnes. "I am not speaking to you out of any interest in Ferrari. Are you aware that he is married?"

"I pity his wife," said Mrs. Rolland.

"She is naturally in great grief about him," Agnes proceeded.

"She ought to thank God she is rid of him," Mrs. Roland interposed.

Agnes still persisted. "I have known Mrs. Ferrari from her childhood, and I am sincerely anxious to help her in this matter. Did you notice anything while you were at Venice that would account for her husband's extraordinary disappearance? On what sort of terms, for instance, did he live with his master and mistress?"

"On terms of familiarity with his mistress," said Mrs. Rolland, "which were simply sickening to a respectable English servant. She used to encourage him to talk to her about all his affairs—how he got on with his wife, and how pressed he was for money, and such like—just as if they were equals. Contemptible—that's what I call it."

"My lord used to live shut up with his studies and his sorrows," Mrs. Rolland answered, with a hard solemnity expressive of respect for his lordship's memory. "Mr. Ferrari got his money when it was due; and he cared for nothing else. 'If I could afford it I would leave the place, too; but I can't afford it.' Those were the last words he said to me on the morning when I left the palace. I made no reply. After what had happened (on that other occasion) I was naturally not on speaking terms with Mr. Ferrari."

"Can you really tell me nothing which will throw any light on this matter?"

"Nothing," said Mrs. Rolland, with an undisguised relish of the dissappointment that she was inflicting.

"There was another member of the family at Venice," Agnes resumed, determined to sift the question to the bottom while she had the chance. "There was Baron Rivar."

Mrs. Rolland lifted her large hands, covered with rusty black gloves, in mute protest against the introduction of Baron Rivar as a subject of inquiry. "Are you aware, miss," she began, "that I left my place in consequence of what I observed?"

Agnes stopped her there. "I only wanted to ask," she exclaimed, "if anything was said or done by Baron Rivar which might account for Ferrari's strange conduct."

"Nothing that I know of," said Mrs. Rolland. "The baron and Mr. Ferrari (if I may use such an expression) were 'birds of a feather,' so far as I could see—I mean one was as unprincipled as the other. I am a just woman and I will give you an example. Only the day before I left I heard the baron say (through the open door of his room while I was passing along the corridor) 'Ferrari, I want a thousand pounds. What would you do for a thousand pounds?' And I heard Mr. Ferrari answer, 'Anything, sir, as long as I was not found out.' And then they both burst out laughing. I heard no more than that. Judge for yourself, miss."

Agnes reflected for a moment. A thousand pounds was the sum that had been sent to Mrs. Ferrari in the anonymous letter. Was that inclosure in any way connected, as a result, with the conversation between the baron and Ferrari? It was useless to press any more inquiries on Mrs. Rolland. She could give no further information which was of the slightest importance to the object in view. There was no alternative but to grant her her dismissal. One more effort had been made to find a trace of the lost man, and once again the effort had failed.

They were a family party at the dinner table that day. The only guest left in the house was a nephew of the new Lord Montbarry, the eldest son of his sister, Lady Barville. Lady Montbarry could not resist telling the story of the first (and last) attack made on the virtue of Mrs. Rolland, with a comically exact imitation of Mrs. Rolland's deep and dismal voice. Being asked by her husband what was the object which had brought that formidable person to the house, she naturally mentioned the expected visit of Miss Haldane. Arthur Barville, unusually silent and preoccupied so far, suddenly struck into the conversation with a burst of enthusiasm. "Miss Haldane is the most charming girl in all Ireland," he said. "I caught sight of her yesterday, over the wall of her garden as I was riding by. What time is she coming to-morrow? Before 2? I'll look into the drawing room by accident—I am dying to be introduced to her."

Agnes was amused by his enthusiasm. "Are you in love with Miss Haldane already?" she asked.

Arthur answered gravely, "It's no joking matter. I have been all day at the garden wall, waiting to see her again! It depends on Miss Haldane to make me the happiest or the wretchedest man living."

"You foolish boy! How can you talk such nonsense?"

He was talking nonsense undoubtedly. But, if Agnes had only known it, he was doing something more than that. He was innocently leading her another stage nearer on the way to Venice.

CHAPTER XIV.

As the summer months advanced, the tranformation of the Venetian palace into the modern hotel proceeded rapidly toward completion.

The outside of the building, with its fine Palladian front looking on the canal, was wisely left unaltered. Inside, as a matter of necessity, the rooms were almost rebuilt—so far at least as the size and the arrangement of them were concerned. The vast saloons were partitioned off into "apartments" containing three or four rooms each. The broad corridors in the upper regions afforded spare space enough for rows of little bed chambers, devoted to servants and to travelers of limited means. Nothing was spared but the solid floors and the finely carved ceilings. These last, in excellent preservation as to workmanship, merely required cleaning and regilding here and there to add greatly to the beauty and importance of the best rooms in the hotel. The only exception to the complete reorganization of the interior was at one extremity of the edifice on the first and second floors. Here there happened in each case to be rooms of such comparatively moderate size, and so attractively decorated, that the architect suggested leaving them as they were. It was afterward discovered that these were no other than the apartments respectively occupied by Lord Montbarry (on the first floor) and by Baron Rivar (on the second). The room in which Montbarry had died was still fitted up as a bed room, and was now distinguished as number fourteen. The room above it, in which the baron slept, took its place on the hotel register as number thirty-eight. With the ornaments on the wall and ceilings cleaned and brightened up, and with the heavy old fashioned beds, chairs, and tables replaced by bright, pretty and luxurious modern furniture, these two promised to be at once the most attractive and most comfortable bed chambers in the hotel. As for the once desolate and disused ground floor of the building, it was now transformed, by means of splendid dining rooms, reception rooms, billiard rooms and smoking rooms, into a palace by itself. Even the dungeon like walls beneath, now lighted and ventilated on the most approved plan, had been turned as if by magic into kitchens, servants' offices, ice rooms and wine cellars. Passing from the lapse of the summer months at Venice to the lapse of the summer months in Ireland it is next to be recorded that Mrs. Rolland obtained the situation of attendant on the invalid, Mrs. Carbury, and that the fair Miss Haldane, like a female Cæsar, came, saw and conquered on her first day's visit to the new Lord Montbarry's house.

Shot His Wife by Accident.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 3.—Mathias Hauer, a Bohemian laborer living in the suburbs, this afternoon shot one side of his wife's head away, as he claims, by accident while cleaning a shot gun. Neighbors to whom he told his story found the woman dead on the floor in a pool of blood. Hauer went to the Central Station and gave himself into custody. It is said the relations of the parties have been pleasant and his story is generally credited.

London Stock and Money Market.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Discount during the past week was quoted at 3⅛ for three months and 2⅜ for short. There was no demand. Prices on the stock exchange during the week were variable, with a downward tendency. English railway securities were stronger, entirely owing to the speculative operations of the public American railroad securities were depressed but yesterday the tone was notably better and there was a general advance, not sufficient, however, to cover the previous decline.

—AT—

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practice to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price alone is no criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

A BRIEF SESSION LIKELY.

PARLIAMENT WILL MEET BETWEEN JANUARY 19 AND FEBRUARY 2.

Government Will Not Have a Large Amount of Legislation to Propose and Private Legislation Does Not Promise To Be Extensive.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—There is considerable activity in all the public departments at present. Annual reports are being hurried forward. Estimates are being prepared and all the indications of an early session are shown. The general impression is that the House will meet not earlier than Jan. 19 and not later than Feb. 2, unless something should occur in Washington to protract the sittings of the Fisheries Commission to a much greater length than is now considered at all likely. The usual prognostications of a short session are indulged in, and really it does not appear as if there would be much to cause a long session, even making allowance for the fisheries question and the discussion of any arrangement which may be made at Washington.

It is not understood that the Government will have any large amount of legislation to propose and private legislation does not promise to be extensive, as so far less than thirty notices of application to Parliament have been given, while at this time last year the number was nearly 100.

As already announced it is not probable that either of the Middleton divorce cases will come up on account of insufficiency of notice, and taken altogether, it looks at present as if the coming session of Parliament was not likely to be a long one.

There was another meeting of council this afternoon, which, it is understood, was mostly occupied with the discussion of matters relating to the fisheries convention, the Government being in constant cotmunication with Sir Charles Tupper, but whatever the nature of the negotiations going on may be, no hint as to what they are is allowed to leak out here.

The Kingston election trial has been fixed for to-morrow. Sir John will not be present, as no personal charges have been made and he has not been summoned, and it would be very inconvenient for him to be absent from the Capital at present, unless it was absolutely necessary that he should.

The Ottawa branch of the Imperial Federation League has now a membership of 140. The committee are making arrangements for holding a series of meetings to discuss various points arising out of the Imperial Federation question. The first of these will take place on Dec. 15, when Prof. Macoun will introduce the subject of "A British Customs Union."

Mr. Purcell, M.P., published a letter in to-night's Free Press denying the statement made some time ago that he intended giving the Government an independent support.

The Trent Valley Commissioners are engaged in the preliminary work by arranging for the taking of evidence as to the desirability of extending the canal to Lake Simcoe and Georgian Bay.

Mr. John Lowe, Acting Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has returned from a trip to Southern Manitoba. He says the Canadian Pacific Railway is taxed to its utmost capacity to haul the surplus wheat crop of the provinces, which is claimed to average over twenty-two bushels to the acre. The country is fairly choked with grain, and farmers are jubilant over the immense yield and fair prices; wheat selling at 55 cents.

Advices have been received here that Mr. Kamper, the Parisian capitalist, will spend the coming session here promoting his scheme for the purchase of the Intercolonial Railway and the establishment of smelting works in Nova Scotia.

The Department of Marine has awarded to Miss Maria Collins, daughter of Mr. Thomas Collins of Collingwood, a gold chain and locket in recognition of her humane exertions in rescuing from drowning Mr. Manning Brown and nephew on Aug. 15 last. Miss Collins rowed a mile to accomplish the rescue, and found Mr. Brown clinging to the upturned boat with one hand and holding up his nephew with the other, and brought them safely to shore.

Sir John Macdonald is the proud possessor of an exquisite walkingstock, a souvenir from Mrs. Cantley, sister of Sir George Simpson, which is as Canadian as the National Policy itself, besides having an historical attachment. It appears the veteran Premier during the holidays manifested a deep interest in a collection of agates and other geological specimens obtained by Mrs. Cantley on the shores of Baie Des Chaleurs. The lady evidently made a mental note of the fact and one of the most beautiful agates came to Sir John yesterday as the harbinger of Santa Claus' triumphant march, embedded in a richly-chased silver knob surmounting a highly polished leopardwood cane.

Mr. Frank Turner, C.E., of Toronto, had an interview with the Hon. Mr. Pope, Minister of Railways and Canals, yesterday with reference to the Trent Valley Canal, and received instruction to proceed at once with the necessary investigation, with a view to making a report at an early date. Judge Weller and Mr. Kennedy (Montreal), the other commissioners, will shortly receive their instructions and meet Mr. Turner as soon as they conveniently can.

A mob of seventy-five masked men took three negroes from the jail in Charleston, Mass., Saturday night, and shot them to death. They were charged with the assassination of a white man.

WASHINGTON'S GREAT DAY

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS OVERSHADOWS ALL OTHER EVENTS.

The Fisheries Commissioners Will Meet Again To-Morrow—Nothing Regarding Their Deliberations Can be Learned Until They Decide to Make the Information Public.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The meeting of Congress was the great event which overshadowed all others to-day. At precisely 12 o'clock the gavel fell in each house and the Fiftieth Congress was set in motion. The Fisheries Commission and their staff occupied seats in the Diplomatic Gallery, and the President's Gallery was graced by the presence of Mrs. Cleveland and her guests. The re-election of Speaker Carliale in the House was a mere formality, and the only relief from the monotony of the proceedings was the singing of the doxology by a Salvation Army enthusiast, who occupied a seat in the gallery. An officer was dispatched to attend to him, but before he could reach him the doxology was finished and the singer was more easily subdued than the excitement he had created.

The budget asks for an appropriation of $326,000,000, which is an increase of a million and a half over last year. A measure for the creation of a Public Works Department, similar to that existing in Canada, will be introduced by representatives from Illinois.

The Fisheries Commissioners will hold their next session on Wednesday. The rumors which have been afloat during the past few days relative to various proposals by the respective commissioners, are the veriest speculation. While it is quite probable that mature propositions form a part of the deliberations, it is absolutely certain that nothing regarding them can be ascertained until given by consent of all the plenipotentiaries.

THE AMERICAN CONGRESS.

The Newly Elected Senators Sworn in and the House Organized.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The Senate galleries were early crowded to-day and overflowing. Mrs. Cleveland clad in a costume of dark green and accompanied by Mrs. Gilder, Miss Kingsford and several other lady friends occupied the seats reserved for the family of the President in one of the private galleries. The diplomatic gallery was filled by members of the various legations, the front seat being occupied by the Chinese Minister, his secretaries and associates. The Minister wore a magnificent robe of light blue satin, and his companions were clad as richly, though in more subdued colors. The ceremony of administering the oath of office to the newly-elected Senators was then proceeded with.

Long before noon the galleries of the House were crowded to their utmost capacity with spectators; the ladies were in the majority and their gay costumes lent an air of animation to the chamber. At noon the House was called to order, when a crank in the gallery started a Salvation Army hymn, which he sang lustily until he was ejected by a doorkeeper.

John G. Carlisle was then elected speaker and made a speech of thanks for the honor conferred upon him. He also dwelt with much stress upon the imperative necessity of such a moderate and reasonable reduction of the tariff as would guarantee the laboring people against the effects of financial depression and at the same time not deprive them of any part of their just rewards of their toil. The work of organizing the House was then proceeded with.

When the roll call had been completed and the Senators-elect were sworn in the customary committees to give notice to the President and the House of Representatives were named and the Senate adjourned.

At the completion of its organization the House adjourned.

Cast Up by the Waves.

MANISTEE, Mich., Dec. 5,—The body of a woman was found on the beach six miles north of the harbor on Sunday, in a bad state of decay. She probably is a victim of the ill-fated steamer Vernon. She had two gold rings on her hand and wore a scapular round her neck. She was five feet high, thick set, and probably weighed 150 pounds, with dark hair, hazel eyes and about 35 or 40 years old.

Great Suffering in Calabria.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The first shock was felt at 5 o'clock in the morning. The people at once fled from their houses, and this prevented an awful calamity. The second shock, which was much more violent, occurred at 7 o'clock. Bigagnano is almost entirely destroyed. Four thousand persons are rendered homeless and many others are missing.

Ruined by "Kentucky Bess."

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Josef M. Diaz, a handsome Spaniard 21 years old, who has wealthy parents in New York, was arrested to-night for embezzlement of funds belonging to his employers, Fernandez & Suarez, importers of cigars, doing business in this city. The amount was supposed by the firm not to exceed $600, but Diaz when arrested broke down and confessed to making away with $5000. He spent the money principally upon a women named Mamie Cox, alias "Kentucky Bess," a sister of the wife of the late Capt. W. W. Hall, of the United States Secret Service, who was recently tried for his murder and acquitted.

Why the Girls Were Discharged.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 3.—The superintendent of the Woonsocket Rubber Works yesterday asked a young girl in the shoe room, who had worked in the National Rubber Company works at Bristol, to make a sample lawn tennis shoe. She refused on the ground that it was contrary to the rules of the latter company. Thirty-five of the girls from Bristol refused and were discharged and paid off.

Rev. Mr. Lyle Will Be Retained.

HAMILTON, Dec. 5.—At a congregational meeting of the Central Presbyterian Church this evening, the congregation, by a large majority, decided to retain Rev. S. Lyle as pastor. The objection to Mr. Lyle by a small but influential section of the congregation is that he is weak in the pulpit.

The Estimates of the Appropriations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The Secretary of the Treasury has transmitted to Congress the estimates of the appropriations required for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889. The total amount estimated as required for all expenses of the Government is $326,530,793, which is $1,344,999 more than the sum called for in the estimates submitted last year, and $16,899,406 more than the aggregate of appropriations for the present fiscal year.

CRIMINAL CHARGES TO BE LAID.

The Ex-President and Directors of the Ontario Investment to be Prosecuted.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The committee elected at the last meeting of the Ontario Investment Association to investigate the books and learn what specific criminal charges could be laid against ex-President Henry Taylor and the late directors and empoyles of the company, report that they find Henry Taylor, Chas. Murray, Benj. Cronyn, Walter D. Pavey and John J. Matheson all guilty of criminal acts, while several ex-directors and shareholders should be proceeded against civilly. As to who should lay the charges, the committee have not decided. It is the general opinion that the association will not take criminal proceedings as a corporate body, but as individuals will lay the charges.

Henry Taylor's Illness.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Mr. Sheriff Glass states, in reference to the letter of Mr. R. Meredith, authorizing him to remove Mr. Henry Taylor to the hospital or his own home for better medical treatment, that he does not regard it as any concession, because he had the power all along had he chosen to use it. But since bail was not forthcoming he declined to accept any personal responsibility in the premises. Mr. Taylor's condition yesterday was not changed. He rested fairly well, and although Dr. Smith was called up in the morning there was no recurrence of the most dreaded symptoms.

Business Failures in London.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 5.—For the past few days a report has been current that John Green & Co., wholesale milliners, were bankrupt. To-day these reports were verified. The liabilities of the firm will exceed $250,000, the principal Canadian creditors being the Bank of Montreal. The bankrupt firm are heavy debtors to several English establishments. In all probability the creditors of the firm will wind up the business.

The business firm of John B. Laing & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants, who went into bankruptcy last week, has been wound up as follows: The claim held by the Bank of Montreal against the firm for $155,000 was sold to Robinson, Little & Co. for $100,000. Other creditors were settled with at the same ratio.

The Council Will Foot the Bills.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held to-night, chiefly to deal with the accounts in dispute between the Council and the Western Fair Board for extra work done on the Exhibition Grounds. These accounts amount to about $9000 over the appropriation and have occasioned no end of bickering between the two boards. To-night, however, in view of the Fair Board turning over its surplus to the Council and making some other concessions, the City Fathers by a vote of 7 to 4 agreed to foot the disputed bills, it being clearly shown that no unnecessary work was done.

The council also passed a bylaw to submit to a popular vote the much needed waterworks extension. The work involves an outlay of $150,000.

College Federation.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—A convention of the London District ministers this afternoon, and a mass meeting of the laity this evening, accepted the allotment made to them to pay $8000 towards the required $450,000 for the confederation of Victoria University with Toronto University.

IN CUSTODY AT BUFFALO.

A Man Who Figured in a Murder Case in Toronto Some Years Ago.

BUFFALO, Dec. 5.—Charles A. Leavitt has been arrested in this city for a burglary committed on Nov. 11. Leavitt is the same man who was convicted of the murder of Joseph Dain of Yorkville, Ont., and was sentenced to life imprisonment, and subsequently pardoned for disclosing the whereabouts of Meeker, who had escaped and had not been captured. Meeker was arrested and got seven years in prison for the crime.

A few years later Leavitt was sent to Ionia, Mich., State Prison for four years for robbery at Mount Clemens, and since his release has been south. He was arrested for burglary while there, but was acquitted when tried. He came back here about four months ago and asserted that he was going to reform and was fitting up a shoe shop on Rhode Island-street at the time of his arrest.

INTERESTING ITEMS BY WIRE.

Mr. C. B. Heyd is a candidate for the Brantford Mayoralty.

The estate of the late Dennis Moore of Hamilton will amount to about $200,000.

The wholesale dry goods firm of John Green & Co., London, has failed for $130,000.

Mr. T. G. Mitchell, grain dealer, has decided to build an elevator with a capacity of 25,000 bushels at Watford.

About $75,000 has been spent in building operations in Tilsonburg this year. The indications already are that next year as much, if not more, will be spent.

Mr. C. E. Mason of Brucefield has sold his imported stallion "Macalpine" to S. Berry and D. Miller, veterinary surgeon, of Hensall, for the sum of $2000.

The M.C.R. through trainmen have decided to accept the offer of General Superintendent Brown to pay conductors $75 and brakemen $3 a month, 2000 miles to constitute a month's work.

The 100-acre farm owned by Eli Lalond who died at the Lisgar House in St. Thomas from the effects of a coat of tar and feathers, has been sold by the executor of the estate, Father Williams of Chatham, to Mr. W. J. Murphy for $1600.

Albert O'Neil, an East Williams farmer, has assigned to Mr. Owen, banker, of Ailsa Craig for the benefit of his creditors.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

The Mysterious Influence Watch Induced a Wife to Elope.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 3.—Several days ago E. A. Greenameyer, a well-to-do young farmer living near Warren, Mahoning County, came to Cleveland and asked the police to aid him in recovering his wife. He declared that she had been abducted by his neighbor, a burly fellow named Charles Hake. The couple were not in Cleveland and Greenameyer went home. To-day a policeman at the Hawley Hotel observed a woman fall in a fainting fit on the sidewalk. He went to her rescue and learned that she was Mrs. Greenamayer. Hake was with her and attempted to escape, but was captured. When Mrs. Greenemeyer, who is a light-haired, blue-eyed young woman, found that she was under protection of a policeman, she pleaded to be sent home to her husband and baby. She then told a very remarkable story. She declared that Hake met her last Monday near her brother's house and forcibly took her with him. Once before he had threatened to kill her, and when he accosted her on Monday she fainted. He took her to Cincinnati, and as she carried on so he brought her back to Cleveland to-day. He acknowledged to the police that she fainted every time he went near her.

The woman is as simple as a child and had never seen a railroad until Hake kidnapped her. She is quite comely and her husband declares that her story is true so far as he knows. Hake was locked up for criminal assault. The wife wrote a letter to her husband from Cincinnati, detailing her experience, which she smuggled to a messenger boy. Greenameyer received the letter to-day and went to Youngstown, where he swore out warrants for Hake's arrest for rape and kidnapping. Greenameyer arrived to-night and the meeting between him and his wife was very affecting. Hake will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. He admits his offenses and seems to be proud of his escapade.

A NEW VANDERBILT ROUTE.

An Old Right of Way Across Indiana to be Utilized.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 3.—It is learned that the Vanderbilts have decided to build a railroad across Indiana parallel with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern. Fourteen years ago a company was organized known as the Chicago and Canada Southern Road, which proposed to build from St. Clair River, the present terminus of the Canada Southern Road, to Chicago. The Vanderbilts at once went to work to kill that enterprise and finally did so by gathering the Canada Southern Road into their system. Before this was done, however, the Chicago and Canada Southern built 79 miles of road, stopping at Fayette, a point a few miles south of Adrian, Mich. This piece of road is little used, only mixed trains running over it.

It is now proposed to start from Fayette and to utilize the right of way which the Chicago and Canada Southern secured years ago, a portion of which is already graded from Trenton to Bayleytown, a suburb of Chicago, a distance of 190 miles. By so doing the Vanderbilts will prevent some other company taking up the right of way of this old company and building a road thereon, and they will secure a road-bed more direct than the Lake Shore proper and with lighter grades. It is proposed to use the road only for fast freight trains, turning all the passenger business and the local freight over to the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Road. Most of the distance the new road will be from one mile to two miles south of the Lake Shore. The work will be begun early next spring. This will give the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern three tracks across Indiana, as much of the distance of the main line the track is now double.

A BATTLE WITH MOONSHINERS.

Illicit Distillers in Tennessee Try to Beat Off Revenue Officers.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 5.—A terrible battle took place on Sand Mountain yesterday between several revenue officers and a dozen moonshiners. The officials had discovered an illicit distillery which they destroyed, and then hid to await the arrival of the owner. In due time he approached the distillery accompanied by nine men armed with shot guns. As soon as the moonshiners saw the officials they opened fire, and for a few minutes a terrible battle ensued. The revenue officers were armed with repeating Winchester rifles, while the moonshiners had breech-loading shotguns. Both sides fired from behind trees, and for a time the officers thought they would have to retreat. After using up all their ammunition the moonshiners fell back, carrying from the field one of their number, who had been mortally wounded. The revenue officials have gone to Collinsville, Ala., for reinforcements, and will raid the mountain again to-morrow hoping to find the wounded man and his comrades.

Fire at Oshawa.

OSHAWA, Dec. 5.—To-night at 11.30 o'clock a fire broke out in the stables and sheds of J. D. Hoitt, William-street, and occupied by R. H. Hobbs, butcher, and in a few minutes three horses, harness and other valuables were burnt. The origin of the fire is not known. The stable and contents were insured. The insurance will not cover Mr. Hobbs' loss.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENCY.

The election of a successor to M. Grevy in the Presidency of the French Republic was accomplished with much less trouble than was feared. A meeting of the Republican groups was held previous to the election to choose a candidate for whom they would unitedly vote, but this meeting did not settle the matter, as the aspirants who found themselves in a minority did not withhold their names from being presented to the Congress. M. Ferry and M. de Freycinet, however, withdrew after the first ballot, and M. Sadi-Carnot's election was thus ensured.

The new President is in his fifty-first year, and is a son of a Senator and a grandson of a Minister of War. He was a member of M. Ferry's Government and held the office of Minister of Finance under Premier de Freycinet. It was over the budget as presented by M. Sadi-Carnot that M. Rouvier and M. Wilson struck at Premier de Freycinet's Cabinet, and now the downfall of M. Wilson, which caused the resignations of Premier Rouvier and President Grevy, has led to M. Sadi-Carnot's elevation to the highest office in the state.

The constitution of France provides for the election of a President by a joint meeting of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, but not for his removal except by impeachment. The politicians, however, forced President Grevy to retire by refusing to form a Ministry under him, which produced a serious crisis, but one that has been passed through safely, so far as the election of a successor is concerned. The new President has now to find a Ministry that will receive the confidence of enough of the several parties or groups to maintain them in office.

Mr. Atkinson, of Boston, suggested that the United States should purchase the Maritime Provinces for $50,000,000, and George Francis Train offered double that sum for them. Now the New York Sun proposes that $200,000,000 be added to Mr. Atkinson's fifty and offered for the whole Dominion. The bidding is lively, but which of the "leaders of the people of Canada" is receiving the bids? Is the auctioneer Mr. Wiman or Prof. Goldwin Smith?

---

The Liberals in the several Provinces of Canada are unanimous in their desire for extended trade with the United States and large numbers of Conservatives in every district share this wish.—Montreal Herald.

Perhaps so. But very few Conservatives favor Commercial Union and large numbers of Reformers are opposed to it.

---

Herr Moser, the anarchist, who was last week again sentenced to imprisonment in New York, says he does not believe in the Christian religion. He would, however, probably agree with St. James that "the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil."

---

Mr. Blake has expressed the opinion that Commercial Union would lead to annexation. The Mr. Blake referred to is an M. P. P. of Prince Edward Island, but his opinion is nearer correct than many of the Hon. Edward's.

A great question in United States politics at the present time is, Where will the National Conventions to select Presidential candidates be held? Philadelphia wants the Republican convention.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

A California tramp set fire to a lot of rail road ties in order that he might be sent to State prison and learn a trade. He said that was his only chance of becoming anything but a tramp.

A genuine idol of ivory, eight inches long, was found in the stomach of Barnum's sacred white elephant, supposed to have been swallowed while his worshippers were paying their devotions to him.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

Lord Salisbury recently sold his property between the Thames embankment and the Strand for $1,000,000. By the growth of house property in London he is now one of the richest men in England.

The most extraordinary suit ever brought against a railroad is that of Mrs. Seymour, a Chicago widow, who, while attempting to pass from one car to another, was blown off the train by the gale then raging. She wants $25,000 for that little blow.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives, such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Mrs. Schneider, of New York, found a burglar under her bed. Those students of the customs of the women of the human race who have kept a statistical table on the results of the nightly precautionary tactics of our better sex say that this is the third discovery of the kind in the present century.

Considerate.

Two inhabitants of Marseilles, a city whose residents are not noted for bashfulness, were lion-hunting in the African desert.

One of them, although so terrified that he could scarcely stand, began to whistle to keep up his courage.

"Shut up!" cried the other, "you'll frighten the lion."—Judge.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Village Fathers Hold a Regular Monthly Business Meeting.

The Ashburnham Council does business in a style different from the Town Council. The village council chamber is a wing of the Town Hall. It is large for the purpose, and around the four sides there are benches. Near one end there is a long table, covered with green baize, and when the Council is in session the Reeve sits at the end of it, while the Councillors and officials, seated in arm chairs, stretch their legs under its sides. Once seated no one rises until the business is finished. There is no airing of eloquence, no speeches to assembled electors, but in a conversational way matters are discussed and conclusions arrived at.

A regular meeting of the Council was held on Monday evening. The Reeve, Mr. John Burnham, and Councillors Calcutt, Wand and Anderson were present.

Mr. Calcutt moved, seconded by Mr. Wand,—That pay sheets Nos. 30 to 38, amounting to $232.71, be paid, and also the following accounts:—R. Moore, sharpening tools, $12.55; C. H. Moore, $1; Electric Light Co., $75; C. Neill. $3; J. Wood, (Clerk) $2.48; County Registrar, $3, total $97.08.—Carried.

Mr. Calcutt moved, seconded by Mr. Wand,—That the rent of the Hall to the Methodist Church be remitted.—Carried.

A lady appeared before the Council in support of a petition asking for remission of taxes. She was heard but no action was taken.

Mr. Calcutt brought up the question of having two more electric lights put up, one one north of Elizabeth street and one south of it on the school house hill.

The Councillors concurred in the opinion that more light would be an advantage, though it was thought that $75 was too high a price for them.

Mr. Calcutt moved, seconded by Mr. Anderson,—That an electric light lamp be placed at the corner of Robinson and Mark streets and one at the corner of Stewart and Douro streets.—Carried.

Mr. Rombough appeared with an application to lease or purchase fifteen feet of the corporation property at the corner of Mark and Elizabeth streets, which he now has rented.

The points considered were, whether the village would want to build a hall on it, and if so whether the lot would be large enough of this quantity was sold? Also whether it would not be as well to sell it all. The drill shed ground belongs to the corporation and reverts to it when the drill shed is removed. The Councillors appeared to thing that it would be as well as if it was removed.

The Reeve suggested that it be leased for a term, Mr. Rombough to remove the building at the expiration of the term, if not renewed, and the village to have the privilege of taking possession at any time by paying for the improvements.

After discussion, this was agreed to, and Mr. Calcutt moved, seconded by Mr. Wand,—That a portion of the market block extending easterly on Elizabeth street 15 feet from Mr. Rombough's property and thence south in a line parellel with his property to the drill shed, be leased to him for ten years, from 1st December, 1887, at a rental of $15 per annum, payable half yearly, subject to right to resume by corporation any time on payment for improvements by arbitration, corporation not to pay for improvements at end of term, a lease to be prepared on above terms.—Carried.

A By-law was passed appointing A. H. Peck as Deputy Returning Officer for the North Ward and Jonathan Stevenson for the South Ward, and Mrs. Swanton's grocery the polling place the for North Ward and the Council Chamber for the South Ward, for the Municipal elections.

The Council then adjourned.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver s misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

A Curious Discovery.

In the tartar of teeth from skeletons of the stone age, Mr. Charters White, of the Odontological Society of Great Britain, has found specimens of the food eaten by our prehistoric ancestors 5000 years or more ago. The fragments identified include portions of corn husks, spiral vessels from vegetables, starch husks, fruit cells, the point of a fish's tooth, and bits of wool, feathers and cartilage.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Mr. Turner received instructions to proceed at once with the necessary investigations with a view to making a report at an early date. Judge Weller and Mr. Kennedy, of Montreal, the other Commissioners, will be forthwith be notified to co-operate with Mr. Turner as soon as they conveniently can. It is more than probable that during the winter the Commissioners will examine and take evidence respecting that portion of the canal lying between Peterborough and Trenton. Mr. Turner left for Toronto Monday night, but he will probably be in Peterborough on Thursday to commence operations."

The Lindsay Post says:—"Perhaps north of Toronto no finer or more complete building is to be found than the one now in course of erection by Mr. John McKenzie, at Kirkfield. It is red brick; the brickwork, which has been very satisfactorily completed by Messrs. Sheehy and McDonald of Peterborough, reflects credit on those gentlemen as first-class workmen. The size of the main building is 52x50, with two bay windows in front and two extensions in the rear, and the height of brick wall twenty-six feet. The doors and windows are trimmed with fancy stonework; all the rooms are ventilated in the most modern style. The building is heated by a large furnace of the latest and most approved style, grates are also placed in the larger room for heating the building in the fall and spring. The architectural part of the work was carefully prepared by Mr. Wm. Duffus of Lindsay, and the work ably supervised by Mr. A. McKenzie."

The Brixton, Eng., Free Press of Nov. 19th contains an account of the reception tendered Mr. Geo. E. Williams, formerly Secretary of the Peterborough Y. M. C. A., at the rooms of the Brixton Association, of which he has taken charge. After the usual devotional exercises, the Chairman, Mr. S. Foster, M.L.S.B., warmly welcomed Mr. Williams to Brixton and expressed great hopes for the future of the Association. Mr. Williams, in his reply, heartily thanked the audience for their very kind reception and for the many prayers that had been offered for blessing upon his work. He sketched his previous Christian life, and referred to his connection with Montreal Y. M.C.A. and to his four year's work in Peterborough, where, he believed, God had blessed his labors. A pleasant hour was spent in social intercourse, the lady friends of the Association supplying refreshments. # SALT AT THE SPRING.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND PEOPLE DILIGENT.

In Giving Direction to the Course of the Youth of the Province—Four Thousand Sunday Schools in Operation.

The County of Peterborough Sunday School Workers Convention was opened in the school room in connection with St. Paul's Church on Monday evening. There were about three hundred people present.

The Rev. J. McEwan, Chairman, of Lakefield, and the Rev. Mr. Torrance, were on the platform.

After devotional exercises the Chairman appointed the following as a Nominating Committee:—The Rev. Mr. Hough, North Smith; the Rev. Mr. Johnston, Keene; the Rev. Mr. Wilson, Ashburnham; and Alex. Gillespie and Sheriff Hall, town.

A hymn was sung by the delegates.

The Rev. E. F. Torrance addressed the delegates in words of welcome. He did so with great pleasure, not in formal words but with all his heart. He bade them well come as a Christian people, not as members of denominations. They came here to consider what was the best to advance the interests of Christianity, not the interests of any particular sect. This was a platform upon which all could meet. There was nothing in existence which brought out the unity of the Christian churches. He dwelt upon what a beautiful thing to find the little children instructed from the same lessons on every Sabbath afternoon. This was one effective answer to those who cried out "the church is divided." He spoke for some time upon the blessed supplement which Sabbath School work was to parental instruction. He welcomed the delegates again and prayed that God would be with them.

The Rev. J. McEWAN, in behalf of the delegates from outside of the town, replied to the address of welcome. He said it was nine years since a Sabbath School Convention in Peterborough. He spoke briefly upon the good done by the Sabbath Schools.

Another hymn was sung.

The Nominating Committee reported recommending that the Rev. J. McEwan, of Lakefield, be President and Mr. J. H. Hesland, as Secretary.

Mr. ALFRED DAY, the Secretary of the Provincial Association, addressed the meeting. He was glad to see that the suspended animation in the case of this County's Association was come to an end, as evidenced by the large attendance here. He dwelt on the importance of training the childhood in the right way, to the final product of good men in political, commercial and religious life of the people. The salt should be cast in at the spring. The Sabbath School was emphatically the mission work of the church among the children. In the Sabbath School the impressions were easily made. When the child's heart was soft, and character formative, impressions were not only easily made but the imprints were lasting. It was something, too, for them to consider what character the children of this young Province were to have. There were in this Province 300,000 children, in 4,000 schools. There were 35,000 teachers vigilant in placing the salt in at the spring, for the weal of the country and the advancement of Christ's Kingdom. He spoke of the provincial association bringing before the public gaze the importance of the work. It also presented the work with a solid front. He gave other aspects of the value of the Provincial Association. Out of the 46 counties of Ontario, there were 21 which had already organizations. Besides this there were 25 townships and 6 cities with separate organizations. With the slings which the great army of 300,000 "armed men" got from the public schools and the smoothe stones which they got from the sabbath schools would smite the grant of sin.

Another hymn was sang.

Mr. Peake, chairman of the Central Executive Committee, addressed the delegates on the "Fruitfulness of Modern Sunday School Work." He gave a history of the Modern Sunday School idea, from the time of Raikes, tracing the advancement and development of the idea until it received its present growth. He then spoke for a time on the Chataugua movement.

TUESDAY FORENOON.

The convention opened at a quarter past nine o'clock this morning, the President in the chair. After devotional exercises the first event on the programme was an Institute exercise on "The Book." It was conducted in an able manner by Mr. Day, the Secretary of the Provincial Association. Much valuable information was brought out, among other things considered was the characteristics of the age in relation to "The Book." The superficiality so predominant now was a bad feature, as was also the tendency to criticise separate texts. There was strong reason for hope, however, in the youth of land, who were being drilled in the interdependence of "The Book," one part with another and who were also, under capable instruction, brought to a fuller understanding of the significance of texts otherwise not easily understood. The utility of the international Sunday School lessons as a means to teaching the Bible in a thorough manner was discussed, and some comment was made upon "The Book" itself.

At ten o'clock Mr. Peake commenced an address on the Superintendent. He mentioned the responsibility which the superintendent had. The traits of character which the superintendent should possess were, (1) to be an ardent church member, (2) to be an earnest christian, (3) to be of good reputation, (4) to be co-operative, not self willed but submissive, (5) to have a thorough sympathy with child life. It was the duty of the superintendent to be punctual in everything he had to do. He should be at the school ahead of time and should maintain good order. He should supervise all the classes, conduct exercises, and assign work to teachers.

The Rev. Mr. McEWAN, at ten minutes to eleven commenced an address on "The Model Teachers' Meeting." During the discourse the modes of teaching were fully discussed, and not only discussed but practised, the President conducting the exercise. The lesson was Matthew xiii, 24 to 30, and the same chapter from verses 36 to 43. The delegates had an interesting and profitable hour's work.

The meeting adjourned at noon.

The Recruiting Sergeant.

Sergt. Matt. Coyne, of "A." Battery, Kingston, is at Cavanagh's Hotel, his business being to secure recruits for the battery. The sergeant is every inch a soldier, and he looks it, with his stalwart form, erect figure, moustache with a sharp twist at the ends, and Napoleonic goatee. If this were not enough to stamp him as a soldier, the military dress—the deep red stripe on his trousers, braided coat, Wellington boots, high fur cap and red cockade—the three stripes on his arm, and the bar and medals, leave no possible room for doubt. Sergt. Matt. has been all his life in the army, having enlisted thirty-one years ago, and during that time has been seeking, so to speak, the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth. In 1857 he went to the Northwest with the Canadian rifles, and again at the time of the first Red River rebellion he went there with the Ontario rifles under Lord Wolsely. In 1885 he as a member of A. Battery he served under Gen. Middleton, taking part in the battles of Fish Creek and Batoche, and in the chase after Big Bear. His regiment was ordered from Halifax to Ashantee at the time of the war with the natives there, but when it arrived at Gibralter "the cruel war was over," and the regiment returned. The Sergeant is a voluble and entertaining talker, who tells of his military experience and of military success generally with a modest pride in the achievements of British arms. Under the bar and the good conduct and Northwest medals there beatea kind heart, and for his gentleness and kindness to the sick in the Northwest the sergent was named by his comrades "Miss Nightingale." He will remain in Peterborough for several days.

—Councillor Craig, of Ashburnham, is recovering from his long illness, but is still unable to attend to business.

—The new endowment fund of Queen's College now amounts to $215,000. It is expected that a quarter of a million will be subscribed.

THE ROUVIER CABINET RETIRES.

President Carnot Will Not Form a Cabinet Until He Consults the Chamber.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—President Carnot at his reception to-day the retiring Rouvier Cabinet last evening thanked them for the patriotic devotion they had shown during the recent crisis. He said he would not form a Cabinet till after he had consulted with the Presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and the chiefs of the Republican groups. The Journal des Debats advises the President to retain the present Ministry. The Republican journals advocated a policy of appeasement and conciliation. The Conservative papers doubt that such a policy would be a lasting success. Thirty candidates for the Senate were nominated in the various departments yesterday. Most of them are Republicans.

The President to-day received MM. Goblet, Clemenceau and others. The Chambers on assembling to-morrow will again adjourn to await the formation of a cabinet.

Resignation of the Ministry.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—The Ministry have formally tendered their resignations, and President Sadi-Carnot has requested them to remain in office for the present for the despatch of public business.

St. Petersburg Satisfied.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 4.—The election of President Sadie-Carnot has produced an excellent impression here. The attitude of the French Parliament during the crisis is approved as calm and dignified.

Congratulations from Rome.

ROME, Dec. 4.—The newspapers here congratulated the French people upon the election of President Sadi-Carnot.

The Papal Nuncio at Paris has received instructions from the Vatican to pay an early visit to the President and to establish friendly relations at the outset with the new Administration by explicitly declaring the good will of the Holy See towards France.

Messrs. T. C. Hewitt and D. Ward, the secret wheat operators, were again on trial at St. Thomas on Saturday. Three farmers and a former agent testified to the manner in which they had been taken in by Hewitt's agents, and the case was held over for argument until Tuesday forenoon.

Mr. L. E. Dancy, barrister, of Seaforth, partook of some canned lobsters the other day, and immediately afterwards was seized with dizziness and became unconscious. The doctors decided that he had been poisoned and administered antidotes. He was very ill for some time.

William Bellamy, for many years Health Inspector of Brantford, has been stricken with paralysis. He is in his 80th year.

Owen Sound taxation this year, owing to the large increase in assessable property, has been reduced from 16 4-5 mills to 13½ mills on the dollar for town rate, and all local improvements and school rates have been reduced almost one-half.

Mr. Wm. Donaldson, a leading North Oxford farmer, has been tendered an appointment on the Advisory Board of the Ontario Agricultural Department, in place of Prof. Wm. Saunders, now at the head of the Dominion Experimental Farm Station.

Sir Adolphe Caron was entertained at dinner by Mayor Fell of Victoria, on Thursday, Dec. 1.

A slight flurry of the "beautiful" passed over the city yesterday morning, says The Victoria B.C., Times, Nov. 28. The day was somewhat chilly and the ground was almost white. The Metchosin and Sooke hills looked charming in their snowy-white robes. Their wintry look lasted but a short time. To-day it is raining. Such are the variations in the weather in this land of Italian skies.

Dealers in "Green" Goods.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The police have aroused themselves to energetic action against the "sawdust swindlers" who have flourished in this city with comparative freedom for many years. Two well-known "bunco" men were arraigned this morning. An account book was found in their rooms, which showed they had made about $14,000 clear profits since June last.

There is no doubt about the honest worth of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Thousands, who have been benefitted by its use, will attest its virtues. This remedy cures liver and kidney complaint, and eradicates every trace of disease from the system.

Surgical Progress.

At two of the leading hospitals of Paris the death-rate from amputations of all kinds has fallen from 50 per cent in 1880 to about 15 per cent at present.

For Rickets, Marasmus, and all Wasting Disorders of Children

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is unequaled. The rapidity with which children gain flesh and strength upon it is very wonderful. "I have used Scott's Emulsion in cases of Rickets and Marasmus of long standing. In every case the improvement was marked."—J. M. MAIN, M.D., New York. Put up in 50c and $1 size.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE THIRD PART.

The ladies were as loud in her praises as Arthur Barville himself. Lord Montbarry declared that she was the only perfectly pretty woman he had ever seen who was really unconscious of her own attractions. The old nurse said she looked as if she had just stepped out of a picture, and wanted nothing but a gilt frame round her to make her complete. Miss Haldane, on her side, returned from her first visit to the Montbarrys, charmed with her new acquaintances. Later on the same day Arthur called with an offering of fruit and flowers for Mrs. Carbury, and with instructions to ask if she was well enough to receive Lord and Lady Montbarry and Miss Lockwood on the morrow. In a week's time the two households were on the friendliest terms. Mrs. Carbury, confined to the sofa by a spinal malady, had been hitherto dependent on her niece for one of the few pleasures she could enjoy—the pleasure of having the best new novels read to her as they came out. Discovering this, Arthur volunteered to relieve Miss Haldane at intervals in the office of reader. He was clever at mechanical echtrivance of all sorts, and he introduced improvements in Mrs. Carbury's couch and in the means of conveying her from the bed chamber to the drawing room, which alleviated the poor lady's sufferings and brightened her gloomy life. With these claims on the gratitude of the aunt, aided by the personal advantages which he unquestionably possessed, Arthur advanced rapidly in the favor of the charming niece. She was, it is needless to say, perfectly well aware that he was in love with her, while he was himself modestly reticent on the subject—so far as words went. But she was not equally quick in penetrating the nature of her own feelings toward Arthur. Watching the two young people with keen powers of observation, necessarily concentrated on them by the complete seclusion of her life, the invalid lady discovered signs of roused sensibility in Miss Haldane when Arthur was present which had never yet shown themselves in her social relations with other admirers eager to pay their addresses to her. Having drawn her own conclusions in private, Mrs. Carbury took the first favorable opportunity (in Arthur's interests) of putting them to the test.

"I don't know what I shall do," she said one day, "when Arthur goes away."

Miss Haldane looked up quickly from her work. "Surely he is not going to leave us!" she exclaimed.

"My dear! he has already stayed at his uncle's house a month longer than he intended. His father and mother naturally expect to see him at home again."

Miss Haldane met this difficulty with a suggestion, which could only have proceeded from a judgment already disturbed by the ravages of the tender passion. "Why can't his father and mother go and see him at Lord Montbarry's!" she asked. "Sir Theodore's place is only thirty miles away, and Lady Barville is Lord Montbarry's sister. They needn't stand on ceremony."

"They may have other engagements," Mrs. Carbury remarked.

"My dear aunt, we don't know that! Suppose you ask Arthur!"

"Suppose you ask him."

Miss Haldane bent her head again over her work. Suddenly as it was done her aunt had seen her face—and her face betrayed her.

When Arthur came the next day Mrs. Carbury said a word to him in private, while her niece as in the garden. The last new novel lay neglected on the table. Arthur followed Miss Haldane into the garden. The next day he wrote home, inclosing in his letter a photograph of Miss Haldane. Before the end of the week Sir Theodore and Lady Barville arrived at Lord Montbarry's, and formed their own judgment of the fidelity of the portrait. They had themselves married early in life, and, strange to say, they did not object on principle to the early marriages of other people. The question of age being thus disposed of, the course of true love had no other obstacles to encounter. Miss Haldane was an only child, and was possessed of an ample fortune. Arthur's career at the university had been creditable, but certainly not brilliant enough to present his withdrawal in the light of a disaster. As Sir Theodore's eldest son, his position was already made for him. He was 22 years of age, and the young lady was 18. There was really no producible reason for keeping the lovers waiting, and no excuse for deferring the wedding day beyond the first week in September. In the interval, while the bride and bridegroom would be necessarily absent on the inevitable tour abroad, a sister of Mrs. Carbury volunteered to stay with her during the temporary separation from her niece. On the conclusion of the honeymoon the young couple were to return to Ireland, and were to establish themselves in Mrs. Carbury's spacious and comfortable house.

These arrangements were decided upon early in the month of August. About the same date the last alterations in the old palace at Venice were completed. The rooms were dried by steam, the cellars were stocked, the manager collected around him his army of skilled servants, and the new hotel was advertised all over Europe to open in October.

CHAPTER XV.

MISS AGNES LOCKWOOD TO MRS. FERRARI.

"I promised to give you some account, dear Emily, of the marriage of Mr. Arthur Barville and Miss Haldane. It took place ten days since. But I have had so many things to look after in the absence of the master and the mistress of this house that I am only able to write to you today.

"The invitations to the wedding were limited to members of the families on either side, in consideration of the ill health of Miss Haldane's aunt. On the side of the Montbarry family there were present, besides Lord and Lady Montbarry, Sir Theodore and Lady Barville, Mrs. Norbury (whom you may remember as his lordship's second sister), and Mr. Francis Westwick and Mr. Henry Westwick. The three children and I attended the ceremony as bridemaids. We were joined by two young ladies, cousins of the bride and very agreeable girls. Our dresses were white, trimmed with green in honor of Ireland, and we each had a handsome gold bracelet given to us as a present from the bridegroom. If you add to the persons whom I have already mentioned the elder members of Mrs. Carbury's family, and the old servants in both houses—privileged to drink the healths of the married pair at the lower end of the room—you will have the list of the company at the wedding breakfast complete.

"The weather was perfect, and the ceremony (with music) was beautifully performed. As for the bride, no words can describe how lovely she looked, or how well she went throught it all. We were very merry at the breakfast, and the speeches went off, on the whole, quite well enough. The last speech before the party broke up was made by Mr. Henry Westwick, and was the best of all. He made a happy suggestion at the end, which has produced a very unexpected change in my life here.

"As well as I remember, he concluded in these words: 'On one point we are all agreed—we are sorry that the parting hour is near, and we should be glad to meet again. Why should we not meet again! This is the autumn time of the year; we are most of us leaving home for the holidays. What do you say (if you have no engagements that will prevent it) to joining our young married friends before the close of their tour, and renewing the social success of this delightful breakfast by another festival in honor of the honeymoon! The bride and bridegroom are going to Germany and the Tyrol, on their way to Italy. I propose that we allow them a month to themselves, and that we arrange to meet them afterward in the north of Italy—say at Venice.'

"This proposal was received with great applause, which was changed into shouts of laughter by no less a person than my dear old nurse. The moment Mr. Westwick pronounced the word 'Venice,' she started up among the servants at the lower end of the room, and called out at the top of her voice: 'Go to our hotel, ladies and gentlemen! We get 6 per cent. on our money already, and if you will only crowd the place and call for the best of everything it will be 10 per cent. in our pockets in no time. Ask Master Henry.'

"Appealed to in this irresistible manner Mr. Westwick had no choice but to explain that he was concerned as a shareholder in a new hotel company at Venice, and that he had invested a small sum of money for the nurse—not very considerately, as I think—in the speculation. Hearing this the company, by way of humoring the joke, drank a new toast: 'Success to the Nurse's Hotel and a Speedy Rise in the Dividend.'

HENRY TAYLOR'S FRAUDS.

MEETING IN THE LONDON BOARD OF TRADE ROOMS.

The Committee Reports on Ontario Investment Affairs—A Nice Story of Misappropriation.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—This evening the Board of Trade rooms again resounded with long personal and acrimonious discussions of Ontario Investment shareholders. Henry Taylor's friends were there in full force. The feature of the meeting was the report of the Investigating Committee elected to examine the books and report on what specific charges could be laid against any directors, officers or employes of the association.

The preamble of the report stated that time had allowed them only to speak with certainty of Henry Taylor, Chas. Murray, Benj. Cronyn and Walter Pavey. The committee expressed surprise that any director would doubt the guilt of the parties accused with the convincing evidence, documentary and otherwise, which they had before them.

Speaking of the guilt of the parties referred to the report says: "In April, 1885, Taylor appropriated $8300 to his own use without warrant or authority and entered it on the books against the profits of the association in a stock transaction. In July, 1886, he took $6000, which he said was to cover his accounts in the savings banks which were overdrawn. Both these amounts were falsified by entries in John Hunter's account. In October, 1881, Samuel Crawford got a loan of $7500, which he afterwards repaid in full and took back his securities, but only $2500 was credited and $5000 was taken by Taylor for his own use. In February, 1882, Samuel Crawford made application for a $15,000 loan, which was objected to by W. R. Meredith. Notwithstanding the securities being returned to Crawford, Taylor and Murray entered the $15,000 in the mortgage ledger and drew and used the money themselves. In April, 1882, for land speculation in Winnipeg, organized by Murray, Crawford and Taylor some $24,000 was first taken on a check payable to Crawford and afterwards $13,950. This loan was falsely entered as to John Hunter. Other sums were taken from time to time, and last July the loan, if you are polite enough to call it such, amounted to $66,000. In January, 1887, a dividend check for $1680 came into Taylor's hands as manager in trust, and in May he drew this amount with interest and charged the same to debenture expenses. Taylor appears to have used the association to transfer from his private banking business bad debts which he made in it and realized the cash by transferring them. Your committee report that false entries were made in books during the investigation, and as long as Taylor remained at large and had any control or entry to them."

The report concluded by saying there was ample evidence to convict all the mentioned parties of conspiracy to defraud, falsifying books and papers, misappropriation of funds, probably larceny and embezzlement, and as to some of them, perjury. "In reference to the employes of the association, your committee find they have all been aware of irregularities in the books and published statements, some being more active parties than others to the transactions. But all were quite aware of them and, therefore, guilty. As to what charge they are amenable to is a question for the solicitor. Your committee consider that the directors owe to themselves and to the shareholders an immediate criminal procedure against Taylor. Failing to do so your committee and we believe the shareholders and public can only draw one conclusion and that one will be far from favorable." (Signed,) James Griffiths, Richard Thompson, A. O. Graydon, J. Johnson.

W. R. Meredith said the report would not be received, as it shouldered the responsibility of the prosecution on the directors. He held it wrong to prosecute a man who was within an inch of death. A long discussion ensued and a stock vote on the report threw it out by 895 yeas to 908 nays. Four hundred and twenty three nay votes of John Labatt and 195 nays by Mr. Farrestal were objected to on the grounds that Mr. Labatt was a large debtor to the association and Mr. Farrestal had hypothecated his stock. The objections were noted and after wards ruled out.

Sunday School Convention at Peterboro.

PETERBORO, Dec. 6.—A County Sunday School Convention held in St. Paul's Church, closed its session this evening. There were about 250 delegates present. The Secretary of the Provincial Association, Mr. Alfred Day, and the Director of Institutes, Mr. C. L. Peake, were present and delivered several addresses during the sessions held last night and to-day. The secretary announced that there were now 35,000 Sunday School teachers in the province, and that 4000 Sunday Schools were in operation.

SHORT BUT INTERESTING.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

It Points Out That the Enormous Surplus Now In the United States Treasury Causes a Situation Which Is Fraught With Danger.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Promises were made that the annual message of the President to Congress would be a lengthy communication, but the document submitted to the National Legislature to-day is unusually brief. It deals only with the question of the dangers arising from an increasing annual surplus of revenue and discussion of tariff matters. The President, however, concludes his message with the significant statement that a brief history of the transactions of the Department of State since last year may furnish the occasion for a future communication. The President in opening his communication to Congress says: "You are confronted at the threshold of your legislative duties with a condition of the national finances, which imperatively demands immediate and careful consideration. The amount of money annually exacted, through the operation of present laws, from the industries and necessities of the people, largely exceeds the sum necessary to meet the expenses of the government. The condition of our treasury is not altogether new, and it has more than once of late been submitted to the people's representatives in Congress, who alone can apply a remedy, and yet the situation still continues, with aggravated incidents more than ever presaging financial convulsions and widespread disaster. It will not do to neglect this situation because its dangers are not now palpably imminent and apparent. They exist none the less certainly, and await the unforeseen and unexpected occasion, when suddenly they will be precipitated upon us."

A Situation Fraught With Danger.

The President refers to the annual growth of the surplus and the large sums taken from private speculation, causing financial stringency and making necessary the purchase of bonds to relieve the necessities of business interests. He fears a recurrence of the late trouble which is measurably beyond the aid of treasury intervention, as there are now no bonds outstanding, the payment of which the treasury has the right to insist upon, and the Government can only intervene by bidding in the open market for its bonds, and paying the holders a premium to release them. The President deprecates various expedients for placing the surplus revenues in circulation, especially that of making extravagant appropriations, as stimulating a habit of reckless improvidence, inconsistent with the mission of the people, and the high and beneficent purposes of their Government.

The President then goes on to say: "If disaster results from the continued inaction of Congress, the responsibility must rest where it belongs. Though the situation thus far considered is fraught with danger, which should be fully realized, and though it presents features of wrong to the people, as well as peril to the country, it is but the result growing out of a perfectly palpable and apparent cause, consequently reproducing the same alarming circumstances—a congested national treasury and a depleted monetary condition in the business of the country. It need hardly be stated that while the present situation demands a remedy, we can only be saved from a like predicament in the future by the removal of its cause."

The Tariff Laws Should be Revised.

"Our scheme of taxation, by means of which this needless surplus is taken from the people and put into the public treasury, consists of a tariff or duty levied upon importations from abroad, and internal revenue taxes levied upon the consumption of tobacco and spirituous and malt liquors. It must be conceded that none of the things subjected to internal revenue taxation are, strictly speaking, necessaries. There appears to be no just complaint of this taxation by the consumers of these articles, and there seems to be nothing so well able to bear the burden without hardship toward any portion of the people. But our present tariff laws, the vicious, inequitable and illogical source of unnecessary taxation ought to be at once revised and amended. These laws, as their primary and plain effect raise the price to consumers of all articles imported and subject to duty by precisely the sum paid for such duties. Thus the amount of the duty measures the tax paid by those who purchase for use these imported articles. Many of these things however are raised or manufactured in our own country, and the duties now levied upon foreign goods and products are called protection to these home manufactures, because they render it possible for those of our people who are manufacturers to make these taxed articles and sell them for a price equal to that demanded for the imported goods that have paid Customs duty. So it happens, that while comparatively a few use the imported articles millions of our people who never use and never saw any of the foreign products purchase and use things of the same kind made in this country, and pay therefor nearly or quite the same enhanced price which the duty adds to the imported articles. Those who buy imports pay the duty charged thereon into the public treasury, but the great majority of our citizens who buy domestic articles of the same class pay a sum at least approximately equal to this duty to the home manufacturers."

How the Tariff Affects Workingmen.

The President, continuing the discussion of tariff re-adjustment, says: "Relief from the hardships and dangers of our present tariff laws should be devised with especial precautions against imperilling the existence of our manufacturing interests, but this existence should not mean a condition which, without regard to public welfare or a national exigency, must always ensure the realization of immense profits, instead of moderately profitable returns.

"It is also said," writes the President, "that the increase in the price of domestic manufactures, resulting from the present tariff, is necessary in order that higher wages may be paid to our workingmen employed in manufactories than are paid for what is called the pauper labor of Europe. According to the latest census, 3,837,112 persons are employed in manufactures and mining, and of these 2,627,089 are employed in such manufacturing industries as are claimed to be benefited by a high tariff. To these the appeal is made to save their employment and maintain their wages by resisting a change, and yet with slight reflection they will not overlook the fact that they are consumers with the rest, that they, too, have their own wants and those of their families to supply from their earnings, and that the price of the necessaries of life, as well as the amount of their wages, will regulate the measure of their welfare and comfort. But the reduction of taxation demanded should be so measured as not to necessitate or justify either the loss of employment by the workingman or the lessening of his wages; and the profits still remaining to the manufacturer, after a necessary readjustment, should furnish no excuse for the sacrifice of the interests of his employes, either in their opportunity to work, or in the diminution of their compensation. Nor can the worker in manufactures fail to understand that while a high tariff is claimed to be necessary to allow the payment of remunerative wages, it certainly results in a very large increase in the price of nearly all sorts of manufactures, which in almost countless forms he needs for the use of himself and his family. He receives at the desk of his employer his wages, and perhaps before he reaches his home is obliged, in a purchase for family use of an article which embraces his own labor, to return in the payment of the increase in price which the tariff permits, the hard-earned compensation of many days of toil."

How the Tariff Affects Farmers.

"The farmer and the agriculturist who manufacture nothing but who pay the increased price which the tariff imposes upon every agricultural implement, upon all he wears, and upon all he uses and owns, except the increase of his flocks and herds, and such things as his husbandry produces from the soil, is invited to aid in maintaining the present situation, and he is told that a high duty on imported wool is necessary for the benefit of those who have sheep to shear, in order that the price of their wool may be increased. They, of course, are not reminded that the farmer who has no sheep is by this scheme obliged in his purchases of clothing and woolen goods to pay a tribute to his fellow-farmer as well as to the manufacturer and merchant; nor is any mention made of the fact that the sheep owners themselves, and their households must wear clothing, and use other articles manufactured from the wool they sell at tariff prices, and thus as consumers must return their share of this increased price to the tradesmen.

"When the number of farmers engaged in wool raising is compared with all the farmers in the country, and the small proportion they bear to our population is considered; when it is made apparent that in the case of a large part of those who own sheep, the benefit of the present tariff on wool is illusory; and, above all, when it must be conceded that increase of the cost of living caused by such tariff becomes a burden upon those with moderate means and the poor, the employed and unemployed, the sick and well and the young and old, and that it constitutes a tax which, with relentless grasp, is fastened upon the clothing of every man, woman and child in the land, reasons are suggested why the removal or reduction of this duty should be included in a revision of our tariff laws."

The Duty of the Government.

"Our progress toward a wise conclusion will not be improved by dwelling upon the cries of protection and free trade. This savors too much of bandying epithets; it is a condition which confronts us—not a theory. Relief from this condition may involve a slight reduction of the advantages which we award our home productions, but the entire withdrawal of such advantages should not be contemplated. The question of free trade is absolutely irrelevant; and the persistent claim made in certain quarters, that all efforts to relieve the people from unjust and unnecessary taxation are schemes of so-called Free Traders, is mischievous and far removed from any consideration for the public good.

"The simple and plain duty which we owe the people is to reduce taxation to the necessary expenses of an economical operation of the Government, and to restore to the business of the country the money which we hold in the treasury through the perversion of governmental powers. These things can and should be done with safety to all our industries, without danger to the opportunity for remunerative labor which our workingmen need, and with benefit to them and all our people by cheapening their means of subsistence and increasing the measure of their comforts."

THE KINGSTON ELECTION.

Opening of the Action of Contest of the Election of Sir John A. Macdonald.

KINGSTON, Dec. 6.—Judge Patterson, in the election action against the return of Sir John A. Macdonald, gave the opinion that the limit in which election petitions are to be tried does not include the time Parliament is in session and ordered the case to proceed under the order made by the Court of Appeal.

Thomas Cambridge, jr., asserted that Isaac Noble lent his father $15 to pay his, the junior's, expenses from Oshawa. The father signed a note, but he was told that payment would not be pressed. After Mr. Noble's death, on explanation by Cambridge senior, the note was destroyed. Absence of witnesses prevented the charge from being finished.

Edward Dougherty and Henry Smith said they were paid $10 each for voting for Sir John. It was dropped in a sleigh by Thomas Boyd. A sensation occurred when Smith told of an arrangement made by which he and Dougherty confessed to the Reform Association in the hope of securing a reward of $200 offered. They got $35 each on account for their statements.

The duplicity of the bribed was witheringly commented upon by Mr. McCarthy, Q.C.

Rebuttal evidence was put in and the charges were dismissed, as were several others before the court closed at 6 o'clock.

DROWNED AT UXBRIDGE.

Two Young Men Break Through the Ice While Skating and Lose Their Lives.

UXBRIDGE, Dec. 6.—Two young men, Fred Gold and Willie Pedrick, aged 18 and 23 respectively, were drowned last night about 11 o'clock while skating on Gould's pond. Most of the company of skaters had left the ice before the accident happened, and the remaining ones were at the other end of the pond when they heard the cry of the drowning boys. They hastened to their assistance, but too late, as both had disappeared when they arrived. They continued grappling nearly all night, but the bodies were not recovered till morning. Both were estimable young men, and their sudden fate has cast a gloom over the whole community. Young Pedrick was the sole support of an orphaned family, consisting of two brothers and two sisters, whose sole surviving parent died last spring.

The new cancer hospital on Eighth-avenue, New York, was formally opened to-day. It is the first of the kind established in this country.

John Hodel, the Swiss, who killed his wife and two children at Hebron, Conn., last month, was yesterday indicted by the grand jury for murder in the first degree.

AUSTRIA MUST BE PREPARED.

Russian Military Movements on the Frontier Causing Alarm.

VIENNA, Dec. 6.—The Fremdenblatt says that the Russian military measures on the frontier are at variance with the general desire for peace and the hopes thereof caused by the meeting of the Emperors of Germany and Russia in Berlin. "We must wait," says the paper, "to see to what extent the Berlin meeting will influence these measures which, possibly, were decided upon under different apprehensions. The recent speech from the German throne in which the Emperor showed that he was not inclined to disturb the peace of his neighbors was sufficient for Austria, but any further gathering of Russians on our frontier will compel us to take similar measures in order that we may not be behind. Russia's preparations are threatening and are totally unprovoked.

A Blow at Austria Expected.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The Post says: "The reports of the assembling of Russians on the Galician frontier evoke apprehensions of a blow against Austria. Whether that blow, which is not intended with the view of attaining ends wherein Germany has never opposed Russia but for other farther-reaching purposes, will admit of Germany's remaining at peace for any length of time is a question which doubtless Russia has long since answered."

Uneasy as to Russia's Intentions.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—There is a renewal here of the rumors that Russia is concentrating a military force along the Austrian frontier. These rumors have revived the feeling of uneasiness concerning Russia's intentions.

CARNOT AND CLEMENCEAU.

They are in Complete Accord, Which is Regarded as a Good Omen.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—It is expected that M. Goblet will be Prime Minister in the new cabinet and that M. Flourens will retain the portfolio of Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Chambers have adjourned until Saturday.

President Carnot in an interview with M. Clemenceau to-day insisted upon the necessity of a union of all the Republicans in the Chambers, first, to show foreigners that Republicans can agree and, second, in order that they may vote an honest and sincere budget. Clemenceau fully endorsed the President's views. The accord between President Carnot and Clemenceau is regarded as a good omen of the future of the Republic. The President to-day received M. Ribot and other leading politicians.

THE CROWN PRINCE.

His Voice is Regaining Its Strength, Though It Is Still Hoarse.

SAN REMO, Dec. 6.—The Crown Prince drove to Cepedaletto this morning. From there he rode to Colla. His voice is regaining its strength, though it is still hoarse. This afternoon he walked through San Remo.

A Letter From the Prince.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—At a meeting of Free Masons a letter was read from the Crown Prince, saying: "With God's help I hope that at a not very remote period I shall again be able to reside in Berlin in the enjoyment of good health."

A Banquet to Mr. Chamberlain.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Canadian Club of this city will tender a banquet at the Brunswick Hotel next Monday evening to Hon. Jos. Chamberlain and other members of the Fisheries Commission.

Hanlan Challenges Clifford or Kemp.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 6.—A match has been made between Clifford and Kemp to row for the championship on Feb. 11. Hanlan has issued a challenge for a match with either Clifford or Kemp for $2500 a side.

Gossip of the Turf.

Garrison, the jockey, makes public in an interview that he has signed a contract to ride for Mr. J. B. Haggin for next season at a salary of $12,000 and $25 for a winning and $10 for a losing mount. He engages to ride at 104 pounds.

The chief two-year-old winner of 1887 is "Lucky" Baldwin's Emperor of Norfolk, a colt bought for about $2500, bred in California. Of the eighteen starts he won twelve times and won $37,165.

The added money of the Coney Island Jockey Club for the racing season of 1887, twenty-two days, was $128,300. There was paid out to winning owners in 1887, resulting from stakes, entries and added money, $260,000. It is expected that there will be an increase of fully 20 per cent. over these figures next year.

The Coney Island Jockey Club has issued, as usual at this time of year, a beautiful stake book, the cover adorned with a faithful portrait of The Bard, with Hayward up in Mr. Cassatt's tri-color, the whole set off with a background very nearly true to nature. On the back cover of the stake-book appears a most suggestive group of mares and foals, illustrating the famous Futurity Stakes. The club officially announces that the June meeting will last ten days and the Autumn meeting equally as long.

The Dwyer Bros. in the last four years have started horses 828 times, winning 290 times, running second 140 times, and third 111 times. Their yearly winnings have been in that time: 1884, $63,350; 1885, $88,397; 1886, $208,549; 1887, $138,252. Total, $537,998.

The once famous steeplechaser Trouble is now performing behind the footlights in "A Run of Luck" at the Boston Theatre.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

TEACHERS APPLYING FOR SITUATIONS—A RESIGNATION.

The Collegiate Institute Boys to be Drilled by Major Rundell—Communications and Enquiries.

A meeting of the Board of Education was held on Tuesday evening. There were present: Mr. Jas. Stevenson, chairman, and Messrs. Stratton, English, Wrighton, Wier, Rutherford, Errett, Kendry, Denne, and Dumble.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

ENQUIRERIES.

Mr. Rutherford enquired as to whether the instructions given in regard to Bible reading were being carried out.

The PRINCIPAL of the Collegiate Institute said that so far as the Collegiate Institute was concerned the instructions were carried out.

Mr. RUTHERFORD was glad that the Principal was attending to his duties.

The PRINCIPAL.—I am very glad that you are glad, (smiles.)

In reply to Mr. Rutherford, Mr. Smith, Principal of the Public Schools, said that he gave instructions to the Public School staff to carry out the instructions of the Board.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications wer received:—

From M. G. Simm, Clara Kearns, Etta Harper, Mina Richardson, Lizzie McClelland, Lizzie M. Livingston, Lizzie Cassidy, applying for positions of the public school staff.—Committee on Appointments.

From G. Waldron applying for the balance due him for teaching, $22.90.—Received.

From T. A. Rowan stating that he was fully recovered from his recent sickness and was ready to resume his work.—Received.

From A. E. Scott, tendering his resignation.—Accepted.

From H. E. T. Haultain, requesting a reply to a former communication in reference to the Governor General's medal.—The Secretary to write a courteous letter enclosing the resolution passed.

From Wm. Smith applying for an increase of salary.—Committee on Appointments.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The following statement of school attendance was presented:—

| | ON ROLL. | AVE. ATT. |
|---|---|---|
| Collegiate Institute | — | 153 |
| Central school | 684 | 571 |
| South Ward | 252 | 218 |
| West Ward | 190 | 152 |

FEES.

The following statement of fees was read:—

Collegiate Institute, for November.....$138 50
Public School, for November..... 11 50

SHORTHAND.

Miss HARPER addressed the board on the subject of introducing the subject of shorthand in the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. DUMBLE said that no doubt shorthand was useful, but it required a great deal of application and they could not spare the time.

"SERIOUS CONSIDERATION."

Mr. ERRETT asked if the Property Committee had anything to say in reference to the purchase of the site for the North Ward School.

The CHAIRMAN said that he had not called the committee together yet.

Mr. ERRETT—I thought you were going to take it into your serious consideration.

Mr. WRIGHTON—So I did, (smiles), we're waiting till property goes down.

POLLING PLACES.

Mr. STRATTON moved, seconded by Mr. ERRETT—That the following polling places and returning officers be and the same are hereby appointed for the taking of the next election of School Trustees:—

1 Ward, Jas. Lundy 2 Ward Chas. Cameron
3 Ward, John Irwin 4 Ward, Wm. Lee.

And that the polling places to be used at the approaching Municipal elections be the polling places for the next school elections, and that the corporate seal be attached hereto to give this motion the same effect as a by-law.—Carried.

DRILL.

Mr. STRATTON said that the Special Committee to whom was appointed the matter of arranging for drill instruction had met Major Rundell and it had been found that owing to the near approach of the examinations it would not be possible to introduce it into the Public Schools this term. It was, however, possible to introduce it into the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. DUMBLE moved, seconded by Mr. ENGLISH,—That Major Rundell be employed at the rate of 50 cents per afternoon to give instruction in manual drill and calesthenics to the pupils of the High School under supervision of the Supervision Committee, the engagement to be from week to week, and to be stopped if proved to interfere seriously with the efficient working of the school.—Carried.

DEPUTY MINISTER'S VISIT.

Mr STRATTON stated that he had received a communication from Dr. Hodgins, Deputy Minister of Education, to the effect that he would visit the Peterborough Schools on Wednesday.

CERTIFICATES.

The INSPECTOR of the Public Schools brought a matter of teachers' certificates before the Board. It was duly discussed.

ACCEPTED.

Mr. STRATTON moved, seconded by Dr. BURNHAM,—That this Board accept the resignation of Mr. W. E. Scott to take effect on December 31st, 1887, and would take the opportunity of stating that Mr. Scott has always been an efficient, painstaking and faithful teacher, and his pupils have made satisfactory progress under his instruction, and this Board regrets that Mr. Scott finds it necessary to sever his connection with the Board.—Carried.

COMMENDED.

Mr. STRATTON moved, seconded by Dr. BURNHAM,—That whereas Miss Perry has during the past thirteen years of her employment by the Board rendered so efficient services that the Board has recognized her merits as a teacher by giving her three promotions, be it therefore resolved that owing to her long experience and faithful services the Inspector be requested to communicate with the Minister of Education and ask him on behalf of this Board to issue to Miss Perry a third class certificate good for the Town of Peterborough.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

It is wise to provide against emergencies which are liable to arise in every family. In sudden attacks of cold, croup, asthma, etc. bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will prove several times its cost.

Pneumonia Explained.

It is generally supposed that pneumonia is due to the accidental penetration of specific microbes into the system, but the observations of M. Jaccoud, a French student of the subject, show that the disease really results from the development under favorable conditions of microbic germs permanently present in the system. A chief condition of such development is a sudden chill, which explains the frequent coincidence of lung affections with abrupt changes of temperature.

SOUTH DUMMER.

Correspondence of the Review.

CHEESE.—South Dummer cheese factory has wound up their business for the present season in a most satisfactory manner. The patrons seemed to be very well satisfied with the prices they received, the average price for the season being eleven cents per pound. The quantity made was 93,000 pounds of cheese and the money received $10,230. Mr. Spence is pulling down his make room and erecting a large one 24x50, as he has not room in his present one. Mr. Warrington, buyer, deserves credit for the manly and straightforward way he has used the factories in this section, his last shipments of cheese being taken at 13 cents, when at that time 11 cents was as much as it would bring.

A Developing Art.

Probably no application of science is advancing more rapidly than photography. Among recent appliances are a detective camera in the form of a watch, with a charm to hold a supply of miniature dry-plates, and a telescopic camera in which distant objects are brought near by telescopic aid and photographed. Modern dry-plates have made the camera quite available at night, and exquisite pictures are now taken by moonlight and even by starlight.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Safe, pleasant, and certain in their action," is the concise testimony of Dr. George E. Walker, of Martinsville, Virginia.

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

On Tuesday Mr. C. D. Macdonald, the Town Clerk and Treasurer, issued his cheques to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Board of Education for $7,627, Public Schools demand. He also issued his cheque to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Separate School Board for $2,700 and of this year's demand; to the Town Trust Commissioners for $5,890, interest and sinking fund of Town Debentures, and $4,988 interest and sinking fund School Debentures. The amount paid over was $22,278. Out of the whole $56,000 spent this year the Town Council controls the expenditure of only about $15,000. They cannot be blamed very much if the taxes are occasionally high.

The Second Fine.

Wm. Johnston attracted considerable notice on Tuesday forenoon. He was down on Water street, beyond Charlotte street. He was a drunk. But he was in that peculiar, phase of intoxication in which people imagine themselves to be insulted and he proceeded to vindicate himself. He peeled off coat and vest, and cut figures in the air with his fists. He talked so loud that Acting Chief Adams heard him, and he was led over to the cells. This morning he could not give a good reason for his action and the magistrate fined him $2 or ten He took the ten. He resided ten days with the gaoler about three weeks ago for similar conduct.

Many of the readers of the REVIEW will regret to learn that Mr. E. J. Mr. Toker's ability and long experience as a journalist will, no doubt, assist in bringing the new paper at once into public favor. The proprietors of the Empire have from the field of Canadian journalism gathered a strong staff of writers, and, while Mr. Toker will be missed from Peterborough in social, political and society circles, his friends will be pleased that his services have been secured for the new paper, which, it is expected will uphold Conservatives principles and good government in Canada.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

The Afternoon and Evening Sessions of the Convention.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Convention opened with devotional exercises at two o'clock. The first subject for discussion was mission work in relation to the Sunday School. It was recommended that the best mode of promoting the missionary spirit among the children was to set apart one Sunday in the quarter for a missionary service.

The nominating committee to whom was referred the question of the advisability of forming a permanent Sunday school Association reported recommending the organization of an Association with the Rev. J. McEwan as President, Sheriff Hall 1st Vice President; Dr. Ford, Norwood 2nd Vice President: H. S. Griffin, Secretary-Treasurer. They also recommended that the ministers of county be members of the executive committee, also Dr. Harrison, of Keene; S. Armstrong, Jermyn; W. E. Roxburg, Norwood; W. Harper and W. Lang Lakefield; G. W. Mann, Bridgenorth; Geo Stewart, warden of the county, Otonabee; S. W. Lowery, Warsaw; O. C. Rowse and A. Gillespie, Peterborough. It was also recommended that Peterboronge be the place for the next meeting. An amendment was moved favoring Lakefield, but it was lost. The report was adopted.

Mr. Day addressed the meeting on the "Spiritual Aims of the Sabbath School Teaching and how best results are to be attained." He said that the child's nature was triune; body, mind and spirit. The teacher to be a success must believe in the spirituality of the child. He discussed the question "How early in life can a child receive Christianity?" holding that the child could accept the faith as soon as it could reject it. To be successful, teachers must have spirituality. They must strive to attain it, watching for it and praying for it.

Mr. MCEWAN remarked the importance of keeping children from contact with evil.

Mr. HAVELOT thought that promising was a good means of interesting the children. One of the first things understood by the child was a promise. God's promise might be made intelligible to the child even in very early years.

Mr. TOVELL advised simplicity in teaching as well as a child like spirit.

At a quarter to four o'clock the Convention went into council on the question "How can the Army of Sunday School Teachers bo endued with power and equipped for for service?" The President, in introducing the subject, made mention of the difficulty there was in getting earnest, good men and women to work in the Sunday School. There should be, in his opinion, a service of consecration from time to time for Sunday School teachers. The Rev. P. Clifton Parker spoke of the usefulness earnest prayer was to aid the teachers in their work.

The nominating committee again reported, recommending that one Sabbath in the quarter be set apart for mission work: that the thanks of the Convention be tendered to Messrs. Day and Peake for their services; that the thanks of the Convention be given to the managers of the church for the use of the school room; that $100 be raised by the Convention for County and Provincial Sunday School work; and that Mr. H. S. Griffin be 1st Vice-President and Sheriff Hall, Secretary-Treasurer.

The report was after some discussion adopted.

The convention adjourned.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The evening session of the Convention was given up to asking and answering questions. A large number of questions were put in on slips of paper, which Mr. Peake disposed of very satisfactorily. Afterwards the Rev. I. Tovell, the Rev. A. Bell, and the Rev. J. Wilson, gave short addresses. The Convention then adjourned after the meeting had been closed in the usual way.

A Supper and Concert.

A supper and concert was held in the school room of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Tuesday evening. There was a good attendance. Supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock. The tables were neatly laid out in the school room and infant class room, and were ladened with an abundant supply of substantial edibles and various kinds of fancy cookery. While the supper was on social chatting was the rule, and a very pleasant couple of hours was spent. After the "removal of the cloth" Mr. H. T Strickland was called to the chair, holding in his hand a good concert programme, and briefly introduced the musical part of the entertainment. Mrs. Peck and Miss McNab gave an admirable piano duet, which was well executed and received with applause. Mrs. Bowman sang a vocal solo in her well known sweet voice. Later in the evening she sang "Molly Bawn," and in response to an encore, "Tapping at the Garden Gate." Prof. Jaques sang a spirited patriotic song, "Rank and File," and being loudly encored gave "The Soldier's Death." Miss Eva Tivey sang a good solo, "Chiming Bells," and it pleased the audience so much that she was urged to return, when she sang "The Bridge." A piano solo by Miss Daisy Morgan was loudly applauded, as was also a vocal solo by Miss Revell Miss Daisy Morgan sang "Norah Darling" in good voice and with excellent expression. Mr. Chas. N. Brown read "Mrs. Smart Learning to Skate," an amusing sketch in Yankee dialect. This concluded an excellent programme, every number of which was well received by the audience. A number of cakes were then disposed of, Mr. R. B. Rogers conducting the sale. A silver butter cooler and a set of dishes were also disposed of, and the prizes were won by Miss Minnie Graystock and Mrs. Heap The National Anthem brought to a close a very successful and pleasant entertainment.

A FATAL RUNAWAY.

JAMES STEPHENSON THROWN FROM A BUGGY AND KILLED.

His Daughter Severely Wounded—A Terribly Sudden Death at "Hanlon's" Hill.

Mr. James Stephenson, a well-known resident of Asphodel, met with a terribly sudden death this forenoon. He was driving into town in a light buggy, to which was attached a spirited team of horses. His daughter was with him. At the top of "Hanlon's" hill, about four miles from town, the horses made a bolt and went tearing furiously down the hill. The horses kept the road well, crossing a small bridge at the foot of the hill safely, but a side of the tongue where it joins the axle having broken, the buggy was veered to one side of the road and upset. Mr. Stephenson and his daughter were both thrown out. Patrick Conway, who was in a field near by, ran over to the road and Messrs. Heap and Butcher, who were ahead stopped and caught the horses which had got free from the rig. They turned back and all three examined the old man who was lying quite still at the side of the road. Miss Stephenson, who was bleeding from cuts on the head, on ascertaining that her father was not killed, walked up toward the house of Mr. Alex O'Brien at the top of the hill. She had only got half way up the hill when her father breathed his last. The men then carried the body up the hill to the house and a messenger was despatched to town for a doctor. Dr. Collins and Dr. Fife were summoned, and Miss Stephenson's wounds were dressed. She received two deep gashes, one on the side of her head and the other toward the back. They were, happily, only scalp wounds, and she will recover speedily. The body was brought to town by Mr. Belleghem, undertaker, and was taken home this afternoon.

Mr. Stephenson, son of the deceased, who was driving a load of grain to market about a mile behind his father, was much shocked, on coming up, to find what had occurred. He sent his team on and, after the body was taken in charge by the undertaker, drove to town and communicated to his brothers, one of whom is a doctor at Frankford, Ont., and the other a Methodist minister.

The deceased was a brother of Mr. W. H. Stephenson of Norwood the Conservative candidate in the last Provincial election. He was for several years a councillor and deputy reeve of the Township of Asphodel. He was highly respected throughout the neighborhood, his honesty, civility and neighborly manner winning him many friends.

MR. BICKFORD'S LOSS.

Does not get $156,000 But is Out $25,000.

Mr. E. B. Edwards, County Solicitor, arrived home from England Tuesday. He looks somewhat wearied from the protracted mental strain while no doubt he endured in the anticipation of the final issue of such an important case, the conduct of which was left solely in his hands. He sailed over the ocean on the Parisian, and though the weather was rough and the water correspondingly turbulent, the good boat progressed very nicely. On arriving at Halifax his brother handed him the cablegram as to the result of the case and on the hasty perusal of its contents, the anxiety and responsibility fled with the utmost haste. There has been no reports in the newspapers as to what Mr. Edwards did, but it is certain that if some people had got the same news they would have embraced every second person they met. Mr. Edwards shakes hands with his friends here very heartily and receives the congratulations showered on him with becoming modesty.

"How did you feel when you got the County's cable enquiry?" was asked.

"Well," said Mr. Edwards, "I received the message at the office of my agents in London and I can tell you that we all felt indignant that such a report should have been sent over and published to needlessly scare the people in this county. I am told, too, that the report has been extensively circulated and commented on by newspapers. If I had been as—as—well as cheeky as the lawyers on the other side I might have cabled that the case was practically won when the judgement was reserved, as I felt positive, by remarks made by the court that we would win. Mr. Blake was asked to discuss the question of the certificate fully and instead of doing so passed it over with a casual allusion. I did not do that, however."

Mr. Edwards' unremitting attention, and careful study of the points of this case, and his clear presentation of it before the counsel, did a great deal toward procuring the present favourable decision. He says that after the assiduous care given to it he does not think there was one point the case furnished to them which could be proved that was not proved.

The total amount the county would have been liable for had the case gone against them, is, in round numbers, $176,000, made up of the principal $75,000, seventeen years interest at $4,500 a year, and $25,000 costs.

Mr. Bickford will have to pay over to the county a considerable amount for costs.

A Sound Decision.

This reminds us of a story of Counsellor McFarland, of New Jersey, in regard to an opinion given by Judge Depew. The counsellor was too much given to drink, and in an intoxicated condition he one day addressed the court: "Your honor, I wish to make a motion." "The court cannot hear you to-day," was the response. A minute later he ejaculated: "Your honor, I have an important motion to make." "Sit down, Mr. McFarland," said judge Depew, "the court will not hear you to-day." "Your honor, I have been a member of the New Jersey bar for thirty years, and I would like to know why I can't make a motion now." "Well, if you insist on it," replied the judge, "the court will inform you, you are intoxicated." McFarland crammed his papers into his hat and started for the door, saying: "Correct, that is the soundest decision you have given in a month." —Albany, N. Y., Argus.

Blaze at Cobourg.

COBOURG, Dec. 6.—A fire occurred about eleven o'clock last night, which would no doubt have resulted very seriously had it not been for the prompt and energetic use of the fire brigade. The flames were first discovered in the stables of Arthur Mulhall's hotel, opposite the market square. They were soon enveloped and burned fiercely. It was not many minutes before the end of the store occupied by Minaker & Bros., which extends toward the stables, caught fire. By this time, however the firemen had got to work and in about ten minutes had the fire under control. A couple of small out houses and the millinery department of Minaker & Bros. received a drenching and the damages to goods by water and smoke will amount to about two thousand dollars, covered by insurance, The stable and contents were entirely destroyed; insured for five hundred dollars. Had the fire once got headway in the double block the result would have been serious.

NO CHANGE AT PRESENT.

THE RUMORS REGARDING THE TORONTO POSTOFFICE ARE UNTRUE.

There Are no New Developments With Reference to Hon. Frank Smith's Resignation—The Vacancy in the Government May Not be Filled for Some Time.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—In conversation to-day with reference to the revival of the rumors that Inspector Sweetman was likely to be transferred to Ottawa and several changes be made in the staff of the Toronto postal division, Postmaster-General McLelan said there was no truth in the rumors, as there was no intention of making any changes in the Toronto office at present.

There are no new developments to-day with reference to Hon. Frank Smith's resignation. There was no meeting of Council and consequently the matter could not be formally discussed. An evening paper shows its want of information by giving the names of several gentlemen from Montreal, Quebec and St. John, N.B., as likely to fill Hon. Mr. Smith's place. As Hon. Mr. Smith was taken into the Cabinet specially as the representative of the Irish Catholics of Ontario, it is hard to see how a gentleman from St. John, N. B., or the Province of Quebec, could "fill his place." There is an impression that in the event of Mr. Smith insisting on the acceptance of his resignation, no appointment will at present be made in his place, but that in the reorganization of the Cabinet, which must take place when the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Solicitor General and Comptroller of Customs and Inland Revenue, provided for by the Legislature of last session, are made, the Irish Catholics will be given a representative. With reference to this reorganization, it does not look now as if it would be made until after next session, and the probability is that the Government will meet Parliament as it is.

Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, Chief Engineer of Government Railways, reports traffic on the Intercolonial as steadily increasing. For the first five months of the present year it very much exceeds a similar period in 1886. Freights to the United States and Canada are unusually brisk. Ocean freights via Halifax are active, while the importations of raw sugars from the West Indies are very heavy this winter. The snow-sheds along the line are nearly all completed and the management hope that the same serious obstructions will not have to be encountered during the present winter as in the past. The line is in excellent working order.

In the Exchequer Court to-day before Judge Fournier the case of R. H. McGreevy against the Crown, arising out of an Intercolonial Railway contract, was postponed to Jan. 12.

The lighthouse at Cole's Shoal above Brockville is to be repaired. A boat harbor will be built at the pier protected by loose stone ripsaw.

Hon. Dr. Harrison, Commissioner of Public Works, and Hon. A. A. C. Lariviere, Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba, arrived here to-day. They decline to make any statement as to the object of their visit.

Mr. J. C. Wilson, M.P. for Argenteuil, has been furnished with the plans for the construction of the proposed new railway to Ottawa, via St. Eustache, St. Andrews and Carillon. Mr. Wilson has arranged for an interview with Mr. Wainright, Assistant Manager of the Grand Trunk, to-day, and will urge on him that the company should go on with the construction of the new line.

The Public Works Department has let the contract for the erection of the new postoffice at Gananoque to Mr. George Wilson of that place, and for harbor works at Collingwood to Mr. J. D. Silcox of Brighton.

Mr. Davis of Montreal, who holds a patent for a railway safety appliance, had an interview with the Minister of Railways, with a view of having it introduced on Government railways.

A number of Ottawa capitalists have organized a company and purchased a tract of 300 acres of land at what is known as Lemer Beau, about thirteen miles from this city on the Montreal-road, for the purpose of boring for natural gas, which is believed to exist there in large quantities. Machinery will be imported at once and a trial well sunk, and if gas is struck, as is confidently expected, pipes will at once be laid to the city, and Ottawa may become a second Pittsburg or Bessemer. There is an unlimited supply of iron ore in the Gatineau district, and if cheap fuel can be found no doubt large smelting works will be erected here.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE THIRD PART.

"When the conversation returned in due time to the more serious question of the proposed meeting at Venice difficulties began to present themselves, caused, of course, by invitations for the autumn which many of the guests had already accepted. Only two members of Mrs. Carbury's family were at liberty to keep the proposed appointment. On our side we were more at leisure to do as we pleased. Mr. Henry Westwick decided to go to Venice in advance of the rest, to test the accommodation of the new hotel on the opening day. Mrs. Norbury and Mr. Francis Westwick volunteered to follow him; and after some persuasion Lord and Lady Montbarry consented to a species of compromise. His lordship could not conveniently spare time enough for the journey to Venice, but he and Lady Montbarry arranged to accompany Mrs. Norbury and Mr. Francis Westwick as far on their way to Italy as Paris. Five days since they took their departure to meet their traveling companions in London, leaving me here in charge of the three dear children. They begged hard, of course, to be taken with papa and mamma. But it was thought better not to interrupt the progress of their education, and not to expose them—especially the two younger girls—to the fatigues of traveling.

"I have had a charming letter from the bride this morning, dated Cologne. You cannot think how artlessly and prettily she assures me of her happiness. Some people, as they say in Ireland, are born to good luck—and I think Arthur Barville is one of them.

"When you next write I hope to hear that you are in better health and spirits, and that you continue to like your employment. Believe me, sincerely your friend, A. L."

Agnes had just closed and directed her letter when the eldest of her three pupils entered the room with the startling announcement that Lord Montbarry's traveling servant had arrived from Paris! Alarmed by the idea that some misfortune had happened, she ran out to meet the man in the hall. Her face told him how seriously he had frightened her, before she could speak. "There's nothing wrong, miss," he hastened to say. "My lord and my lady are enjoying themselves at Paris. They only want you and the young ladies to be with them." Saying these amazing words, he handed to Agnes a letter from Lady Montbarry.

"Dearest Agnes"—she read—"I am so charmed with the delightful change in my life—it is six years, remember, since I last traveled on the continent—that I have exerted all my fascinations to persuade Lord Montbarry to go on to Venice. And, what is more to the purpose, I have actually succeeded! He has just gone to his room to write the necessary letters of excuse in time for the post to England. May you have as good a husband, my dear, when your time comes! In the meanwhile, the one thing wanting now to make my happiness complete is to have you and the darling children with us. Montbarry is just as miserable without them as I am—though he doesn't confess it so freely. You will have no difficulties to trouble you. Louis will deliver these hurried lines and will take care of you on the journey to Paris. Kiss the children for me a thousand times—and never mind their education for the present! Pack up instantly, my dear, and I will be fonder of you than ever. Your affectionate friend, ADELA MONTBARRY."

Agnes folded up the letter; and, feeling the need of composing herself, took refuge for a few minutes in her own room.

Her first natural sensations of surprise and excitement at the prospect of going to Venice were succeeded by impressions of a less agreeable kind. With the recovery of her customary composure came the unwelcome remembrance of the parting words spoken to her by Montbarry's widow: "We shall meet again—here in England, or there in Venice, where my husband died—and meet for the last time."

It was an odd coincidence, to say the least of it, that the march of events should be unexpectedly taking Agnes to Venice after those words had been spoken! Was the woman of the mysterious warnings and the wild, black eyes still thousands of miles away in America? Or was the march of events taking her unexpectedly, too, on the journey to Venice? Agnes started out of her chair, ashamed of even the momentary concession to superstition which was implied by the mere presence of such questions as these in her mind.

She rang the bell and sent for her little pupils, and announced their approaching departure to the household. The noisy delight of the children, the inspiriting effort of packing up in a hurry, roused all her energies. She dismissed her own absurd misgivings from consideration, with the contempt that they deserved. She worked as only women can work when their hearts are in what they do. The travelers reached Dublin that day, in time for the boat to England. Two days later they were with Lord and Lady Montbarry at Paris.

THE FOURTH PART.

CHAPTER XVI.

It was only the 20th of September when Agnes and the children reached Paris. Mrs. Norbury and her brother Francis had then already started on their journey to Italy—at least three weeks before the date at which the new hotel was to open for the reception of travelers.

The person answerable for this premature departure was Francis Westwick.

Like his younger brother Henry, he had increased his pecuniary resources by his own enterprise and ingenuity; with this difference, that his speculations were connected with the arts. He had made money in the first instance by a weekly newspaper, and he had then invested his profits in a London theater. This latter enterprise, admirably conducted, had been rewarded by the public with steady and liberal encouragement. Pondering over a new form of theatrical attraction for the coming winter season, Francis had determined to revive the languid public taste for the "ballet" by means of an entertainment of his own invention, combining dramatic interest with dancing. He was now, accordingly, in search of the best dancer (possessed of the indispensable personal attractions) who was to be found in the theaters of the continent. Hearing from his foreign correspondents of two women who had made successful first appearances, one at Milan and one at Florence, he had arranged to visit those cities, and to judge of the merits of the dancers for himself before he joined the bride and bridegroom. His widowed sister, having friends at Florence whom she was anxious to see, readily accompanied him. The Montbarrys remained at Paris until it was time to present themselves at the family meeting in Venice. Henry found them still in the French capital, where he arrived from London on his way to the opening of the new hotel.

Palmo-Sulphur Soap.

Is Marvelously Efficient in clearing the Skin of Impurities, and keeping it in a perfect state of health. It beautifies the complexion, while as a Healing agent for Sores or Wounds it passes all praise. There is no Form of Eruptive Disease for which this Renowned Soap has not proved efficacious. In the Bath it is as beneficial as the waters of the Renowned Sulphur Springs. Linens and Woolens washed with it are rendered superlatively white, and are disinfected when germs of disease linger in the material. The value of Sulphur as a Cleansing and Purifying agent is everywhere recognized. Ask for Palmo-Sulphur, and refuse all others, and you wont be deceived.

THE OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

NO POSTAL CLERKS WILL BE EMPLOYED HEREAFTER.

Manitoba will This Year Export 18,000,000 Bushels of Wheat, Besides Large Quantities of Barley, Potatoes and Hog Products.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—Postmaster-General McLelan in conversation to-day stated that the Government had decided to dispense with the services of mail clerks on ocean steamers in future, and that the last clerk to be employed on this service left by the last steamer. He stated that Canada was the only country still using mail clerks on ocean steamers, they having been dispensed with by other countries without the service being in any way impaired. The saving will be some $16,000 or $17,000 per annum in salaries, besides any reduction in the amount of the subsidy asked which companies tendering may be disposed to make in consideration of not having to devote a special space to the mail clerk and his bags. There are six ocean mail clerks, Messrs. Bent, Bowes, Ferguson, Grant, Mickleburg, and O'Hara. Some of these may be superannuated and the remainder find employment on land. It is not anticipated that the change will involve any delay in the delivery of ocean mails.

The statement made in to-night's Free Press that the contract for Cape Tormentine Wharf had been let to Mr. Murphy of Toronto is incorrect. The contract has not yet been awarded to anyone.

Hon. Dr. Harrison, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Mr. Lariviere, Provincial Secretary of Manitoba, had interviews with Hon. Thomas White, Minister of the Interior, with reference to the swamp lands surrendered to the province by the dominion and with Sir John, who is acting Minister of Justice, with reference to a claim of the province for maintaining a provincial asylum for insane persons from the Northwest territories.

Mr. J. J. Curran, M.P., had an interview to-day with the Minister of Railways and Canals with reference to the City Passenger Railway Company's track across the Wellington-street bridge over the Lachine Canal, and was informed that an order-in-council had been passed authorizing the buying of a double track. The track will be laid in the spring.

The Manitoba Minister of Agriculture, who is now here, claims that his province, which four years ago scarcely raised enough wheat for home consumption, will this year export 12,000,000 bushels, besides large quantities of barley, potatoes and hog products. He has great hopes of the future of Manitoba and the Northwest as producers of wheat for export, and thinks that within five years they will have quite eclipsed the Eastern provinces in this respect.

The United States Government has made a requisition for the surrender of Byrne, the forger, now in custody at Brantford. He will be handed over to the American authorities.

It is expected that judgment on the preliminary objections by Mr. Rochon to the Ottawa County protest will be delivered at Aylmer on Saturday.

The time for receiving tenders for the Atlantic mail service for the next ten years expires to-morrow. It is expected that the matter will be settled before the Christmas holidays. The contract will not come into operation until 1889.

There is no new development with reference to Hon. Frank Smith's resignation. There was a meeting of council to-day, but it is understood only routine business was transacted. There will be another meeting to-morrow.

The Department of Justice has received a petition for the repeal of the Canada Temperance Act in Westmoreland, N.B. This is the second attemptmade to repeal the act since its coming into force in the county in 1880. The first attempt was made in 1884 and was unsuccessful.

The successful tenderers for work on the Oxford and New Glasgow section of the Short Line Railway have all made the necessary deposits with the Minister of Railways, and the contracts will shortly be signed.

Two seizures for entries on false invoices have been made at Quebec, one of a carding machine and the other of two spindle ball machines. In the latter case the fraud has been admitted by the party importing the goods, and the usual penalties will be enforced and the goods confiscated. The other case is still under consideration.

THE KINGSTON ELECTION CASE.

The Judge Dismisses One of the Charges Involving the Payment of a Voter.

KINGSTON, Dec. 7.—The whole day was occupied in the protested election case in considering the charge against the late Isaac Noble of paying $15 to Thomas Cambridge, jr., for his travelling expenses. The evidence was closely sifted and the whole circumstances brought out.

Mr. Blake, Q.C., and Mr. McCarthy, Q.C., very thoroughly canvassed the matter by their addresses and at 5 o'clock Judge Patterson dismissed the charge, holding that Noble had not done a corrupt or wilful act by paying the money. There was no evidence to show that Cambridge, jr., had been brought to the city to vote under a promise nor was he influenced to vote on an understanding that his expenses would be paid. The agency of Noble ceased after the election was concluded. The judge admitted that Noble had done a foolish act in trying to cover up the transaction by getting the father to sign a note when the whole evidences showed that he was simply giving Cambridge the money in view of the way he had voted. The payment, however, subsequent to the recording of the vote did not constitute a corrupt act within the meaning of the law. The case will be resumed to-morrow.

RAN OFF THE TRACK.

The Montreal Express on the D. and H. Railway Meets With An Accident.

WHITEHALL, N.Y., Dec. 7.—Train No. 7, New York express, for Montreal, on the Saratoga and Champlain Divis on of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, consisting of two baggage cars, two coaches and a sleeper, ran off the track at Whallonsburg Station, eighteen miles north of Port Henry, early this morning. Two baggage cars, one coach and the depot were destroyed by fire. No one was injured. A broken wheel was the cause of the accident.

THE WAR SCARE IN EUROPE.

Russian Military Movements Said To Be Exaggerated—Austria to Strengthen Her Frontier Force.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—The National Gazette, discussing The Vienna Fremdenblatt's article relative to the massing of troops on the Russian frontier, says it is evident that the force of Russian troops now in Poland is not sufficient to attack two formidable military powers. The present massing of troops is too small for war and too large for peace. We must wait and see how Russia will reconcile the massing with the pacific assurances of The Journal de St. Petersburg.

Russia Must Have a Strong Pacific Fleet.

MOSCOW, Dec. 7.—The Gazette says the future policy of France will decide whether Germany will be compelled to watch one or both her frontiers. The paper declares that Russia must always have a strong fleet on the Pacific ocean.

The Cause of Russia's Action.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—According to private advices from Warsaw the massing of Russian troops on the frontier is attributable to information received by Russia of a concerted plan by Germany and Austria for united action in the event of war between either of those powers and Russia. In that contingency it was proposed that Germany and Austria should suddenly invade Russian Poland and occupy Warsaw by using their great facilities for mobilizing. In consequence of the discovery of this alleged project, Russia resolved to compensate for her slow power of mobilising by a permanent increase of her frontier forces. The movement implies no aggression, but is a purely defensive precaution.

A Military Council at Vienna.

VIENNA, Dec. 7.—The Emperor will preside at a military council at the Palace to-morrow, to consider what steps are necessary in view of the collection of Russian troops on the frontier.

Austria to Increase the Frontier Force.

VIENNA Dec. 7.—The Political Correspondence semi-officially denies a report that the Powers interested have officially sent a note to Russia in reference to the increased force of troops on the frontier. The paper says the Austrian frontier guards will be completely organized and their numbers increased. It adds that the Russian Censor has suppressed all telegrams sent to Russia in reference to The Fremdenblatt's article concerning Russia's action.

ussia's Actions Said To Be Exaggerated.

VIENNA, Dec. 7.—The opinion is very general here that the German press exaggerates the importance of the military movements in Russia in order to disguise Prince Bismarck's diplomacy, the chief object of which is supposed to be the removal of the Czar from the influence of those who desire to estrange Germany and Russia. The course of the German press is considered to be a dangerous one because in the event of Bismarck failing in his purpose it will increase the tension of the situation. It is owing more to a possible failure on the part of Bismarck than to the massing of Russian troops that Austrian military precautions may be necessary.

A CABINET WANTED.

M. Goblet Undertakes the Task of Forming One for President Carnot.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—President Carnot, in his interview with M. Clemenceau yesterday, said he was under no illusion that he had been chosen President for his own merits. He had an earnest desire to do his duty and sink self on every occasion when his personal views might conflict with the public interest. While admitting that there must always exist two great Republican parties, the President said it would be possible in elections for them to unite against their common enemy, the Monarchists.

M. Clemenceau deprecated the idea of taking men from the various groups to form the cabinet irrespective of their platforms. He said a union of the parties could be better effected on the adoption of certain principles as a basis of action.

President Carnot has intimated that a general election will probably be held toward the end of 1888.

M. Goblet Summoned.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The President requested M. Fallieres to form a Cabinet, but he declined on the ground of ill-health and a lack of sufficient authority. The President then summoned M. Goblet and requested him to form a new Ministry. M. Goblet has agreed to form a Cabinet.

President Sadi-Carnot has been installed in the Elysee Palace.

Poisoning Suspected.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 7.—Coroner Commee of Welland yesterday held an inquest at North Pelham on the body of the late C. J. Cook, postmaster of that place, who, it is suspected, came to his death by poisoning. A great deal of evidence was taken, one of the medical witnesses stating that he was inclined to believe, from the symptoms described to him at Cook's death and from the appearance of the body, that death resulted from other than natural causes. The stomach of deceased will be sent to Toronto for analysis.

Funeral of a Veteran Railroader.

UTICA, N.Y., Dec. 7.—The funeral of Gen. S. C. Priest, the veteran superintendent of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, and for over half a century a highly valued employe of the company, was held from his late residence in Little Falls to-day. Among the prominent railroad men present were Cornelius Vanderbilt and Chauncey M. Depew.

A Motion Favoring Protection.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—At the annual meeting of the Central Chamber of Agriculture to-day many provincial delegates were present and took part in an excited discussion over a motion favoring protection. The Right Hon. Henry Chaplin, Conservative, deprecated the placing of duties on cereals, unless the agitation in favor of bimetalism and the abolition of bonnties failed. The motion was carried by two to one.

The Typewriter Test.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—In to-day's papers Messrs. Wyckoff, Seamans and Benedict challenge all writing machines to a speed test with the Remington Standard Typewriter.

Bucket Shop Keepers Arrested.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—The police this morning raided a number of bucket shops. The proprietors and employes were held in bail for a hearing.

CHEWED HER CHILD'S ARM.

MRS. FELLOWS CUTS OFF THE HEAD OF HER SIX-WEEK'S-OLD INFANT.

A Horrible Case of Child-murder in North Toronto—A Crazy Mother Uses a Table Knife on Her Own Progeny—What Was Discovered Under the Bedstead.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.

What is undoubtedly the most revolting and horrible crime that has ever occurred in Toronto was that which took place yesterday when Elizabeth Fellows, the wife of John Fellows, a stableman in the employ of Pears & Booth, brick manufacturers, cut the head off of her six-weeks' old child, and then followed up the deed by cutting off the left arm of the babe, boiling it, eating part of it, and placing the rest of it on the dinner table. The affair took place in Fellows' home in Avenue-road, a short distance north of Davenport-road.

Four years ago John Fellows, who is now so benumbed that he shows no expression of grief, married Lizzie Williams, then 23 years of age. He first knew her in Market Drayton, Shropshire, Eng., and later when she lived in Toronto with her aunt, Mrs. Davis of 330 Lippincott-street. They were married here in July, 1883, and since then they have had four child ren, one of whom died at an early age.

Mrs. Fellows was always a delicate looking woman, and it is believed that her four-fold maternity led to the weakening of her mind. After the birth of her third child, a little over a year ago, she became subject to melancholia, and was for a while confined in the Lunatic Asylum. She was released in May, and she improved so much that her husband took her back to his home.

Six weeks ago Mrs. Fellows gave birth to her fourth child, the babe which is now a mutilated corpse. After the birth she showed signs of insanity, but displayed no violent tendencies, still her actions were such that her husband feared something, and closely observed her.

Mr. Fellows left the house at nearly 7 yesterday morning to go to his work. At 10.30 he called at the house and found his wife sitting near a front window sewing, with her two girls aged three and one years, standing by her. The baby was cooing in a wicker-bodied perambulator near by. Fellows spoke to his wife, but she did not appear to hear him. He returned to his work.

At 12 o'clock Fellows went home to get his dinner. At the door he was met by his 3-year old child who said: "Pa, ma has stabbed the baby." He asked his wife to explain but she said nothing. Her face was red and she seemed to be in mental agony. This occurred in the basement. Fellows rushed up stairs, again demanding where the baby was, and his wife followed him. He repeated his enquiry as to the baby and his wife said: "Oh, it's all right, everything is right."

Fellows searched the sitting-room and then went to the baby carriage. He pulled down the coverlet and found a pillow soaked with blood. The poor, crazed wife was standing by and when Fellows, almost dazed, asked her where the baby was she said "in there," and pointed to the bedroom, where there were two beds. Fellows got down on his knees and looked under one of the beds. He saw something dode up in a blood-stained blanket. Almost crazed he rushed from the house and ran to his employers' office. Mr. Pears and Mr. Booth returned with him to the house. Mr. Pears looked under the bed which Fellows pointed out to him, and there he found the body of the babe. The tiny piece of humanity was enclosed in the blanket. The head was completely severed and laid upon the legs. The sight indicated that the knife had first been inserted at the back of the neck, then drawn around the right side in a downward way, till the cutting was finished at the breast. The whole of the body was clean of blood, and everything indicated that the unfortunate mother had washed away the stained blood. The mouth of the poor little babe was drawn up as if in agony, while the wrinkled forehead gave further evidence of a painful death.

To Mr. Pears Mrs. Fellows admitted that she had killed her child. She said that the deed was done with a common table knife, and that she did it because she was told to do it. As her husband rushed out for help, he said to his wife: "Yes won't harm the other children I" and she replied: "Yes if I can help it!"

But now comes the worst. Fellows brought his two employers to the place and the police were also summoned from No. 4 St. Paul's Ward Station. The body of the babe had been lying on its left side and nothing beyond the severance of the head was noticed. But upon turning the body the left arm was found to be missing.

The poor crazy woman was asked about this. She acknowledged that she had killed her child, that she had cut off its head with a common table knife, that she had cut off its left arm just below the shoulder with the same knife, that she had boiled the arm, eaten part of it and placed the rest on the dinner table for her husband.

A search resulted in finding the arm of the child upon a wooden plate—an ordinary bread plate—laid in the cupboard. The arm was only about eight inches long and, as a police sergeant described it, it looked like a pig's foot, the fingers being closed as if done so in a struggle.

Mrs. Fellows was arrested by Constable Loughead and taken to St. Paul's Ward Police Station. She freely admitted that she had killed her child, but would say nothing further. A few hours later the poor woman was removed to the jail. She is there now and her case will come up in the Police Court this morning. Her speech and her actions make it undoubtedly clear that she is insane.

Meanwhile the carved body of the infant lies in the house. It was coffined yesterday afternoon and the father and his children slept in the house last night. The sight of it was horrible, and a police sergeant said: "It was such a sight as would make you want to get out as quickly as you could."

Coroner Johnson will open an inquest at 4 o'clock this afternoon in St. Paul's Hall. North Toronto is much excited over the terrible affair.

TWO WRITS ISSUED.

Actions Taken Against Directors of the Ontario Investment Association.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 7.—This afternoon Clerk MacBeth issued, at the request of Miss Selena Ormsby Graydon and Miss Mina G. Graydon, two writs each against Daniel Macdie, John Labatt, John Elliott, Isaiah Danks, W. R. Meredith, C. F. Goodhue and F. A. Fitzgerald. The writs claim damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiffs by the fraudulent mismanagement of the defendants as directors of the Ontario Investment Association whereby the shares held by the plaintiffs became worthless.

The amount involved is $7000. The claim set up by the defendants is that the association is liable for the moneys stolen by Taylor during the time the accused directors were in office.

A PLETHORA OF WEALTH.

The Secretary of the U. S. Treasury Reports on the Enormous Surplus.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury devotes much attention to the question of surplus revenue and a revision of the tariff. The conclusions and recommendations are the same as those contained in the President's message. The surplus in the treasury on Dec. 1 amounted to $55,208,701, and the Secretary estimates that it will aggregate $140,000,000 on June 30 next. On this point the Secretary says that one use which can be made of this money is to diminish the taxation to such an extent that the annual revenues will be less for some years to come than the appropriations. The accumulated surplus should be used for ordinary expenses, and the people would gain the greatest possible good from it.

The Secretary thinks it difficult to understand why it would not be well to so change our navigation laws as to allow foreign built ships owned by our citizens to come and go between this and other countries, while bearing the flag of the country of their owners, since a citizen of the United States may buy a foreign built vessel in a foreign port and putting a United States flag upon it trade with all the countries of the world except his own and receive our Government's protection in all such trade.

The Secretary says that it would be a waste to continue coining silver dollars, as the supply is now more than equal to any probable demand. For this reason the bullion purchased should be stored in large bars and upon these certificates could be issued at coinage value. The Secretary also says that the value of the silver in the hands of the people must be kept on a par with gold and that with this view a limit to treasury holdings of silver should be fixed and coinage suspended when this limit is reached.

The present divided authority and responsibility in the administration of immigrant laws is declared to be unsatisfactory.

THE PEACE COMMISSIONERS.

They Have an Interview With the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Sir George Campbell, Sir John Swinburne, Hon. Halley Stewart and Mr. Cramer, the members of the British Peace Commission, visited the room of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations this morning, where they were met by and introduced to the members of the committee of the last Congress, of whom many will without doubt be members of the committee of the present Congress. Each of the visitors addressed the senators, setting forth their views and purposes in connection with the plan of settling international controversies by arbitration, and copies of the little volume by Sir George Campbell, entitled "The British Empire," were left for each member of the committee.

Gen. Gordon's Hill Disbursers.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Bills to the amount of £40,000, drawn by the late Gen. Gordon during the siege of Khartoum, have been dishonored by the Government, which obtained a decision from the Cairo mixed tribunal in their favor. The holders of the bills have commenced action against the private estate of Gen. Gordon for payment.

Smallpox and Cholera in Chili.

PANAMA, Dec. 7.—A letter from Iquiqde, Chili, says that smallpox has been raging with virulence among the laborers in the nitrate deposits. At the Reducto works 60 persons had died from smallpox and 15 were suffering from it. Cholera reports from Chili continue favorable, the number of cases being very limited and confining in the extreme south.

Sudden Death at Napanee.

NAPANEE, Dec. 7.—Thomas E. Howard, a prominent merchant and grain dealer in Bath village, dropped dead in the street to-day. He was seemingly in good health, and paralysis of the heart is assigned as the cause of his death.

Threatened Riot by Strikers.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7.—The sheriff of Lake County has asked the Governor for the militia to quell a threatened riot among the ore handlers at Fairport in that county. One hundred men of the fifth regiment of Cleveland have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness.

The Rimouski Election Case.

RIMOUSKI, Dec. 7.—In the Rimouski Federal election contestation, argument was concluded here to-day and the petition against Dr. Fiset, the sitting member, was dismissed by Judge Peletier.

ERASTUS' GREAT SCHEME.

WHY THE STATEN ISLAND SCHEMEER FAVORS COMMERCIAL UNION.

He is in With a Combination Which Seeks to Monopolize the Wheat Trade of the United States and Canada, With Headquarters at New York.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Fisheries Conference had another four hour session to-day. The fact that no indication of an early closing of the conference has yet been hinted at would seem to indicate that some solution of existing difficulties is likely to be reached. If the plenipotentiaries of the respective Governments had failed to agree upon the scope of the conference it is probable that it would have culminated in a separation before this. Strong hopes are now entertained that a section of the Republicans will support the ratification of any reasonable settlement that may be agreed upon by the Commission. If this be correct, it will greatly strengthen the hands of the commissioners who have evidently been of the opinion that the Senate would reject any proposal less than an absolute surrender of the Canadian contentions.

A prominent topic of conversation to-day is the announcement in The New York Times of the plans and prospects of the Anglo-American Railway and Steamship Company. This scheme will include the Furness Railway Company of England, which has recently made a large expenditure in fitting the port of Barrow as the eastern terminus of a line of steamers which will aim at monopolizing the carrying trade of the wheat growing and cattle raising sections of the United States and Canada. In May last the promoters of the enterprise visited America, and it is said have secured the co-operation of various lines of railway from the Manitoba boundary to Staten Island in New York Harbor, which they propose to establish as the western terminus of their steamers. The combination includes, it is said, the Staten Island Transfer Railway, the Baltimore and Ohio, the Minnesota and Northwestern, the Chicago, Kansas City and St. Paul and other lines.

The public announcement of the scheme will enable Canadians to understand why the Staten Island Emperor has recently taken such an interest in Commercial Union, it being necessary to enable the new monopoly to successfully destroy the Canadian carrying trade.

The Murder of Constable Whelehan.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—The jury has brought in a verdict of acquittal in the case of O'Leary, one of the men charged with complicity in the murder of Constable Whelehan at Lisdoonvarna.

A Verdict Against the Marquis.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—The libel suit of Mr. Joyce against his former employer, the Marquis of Clanricarde, for $50,000 damages has resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, who was awarded $1200.

IMPROVEMENTS.—Warsaw is making some improvements in way of buildings, &c. Our Presbyterian friends have built a very nice manse. It is splendidly situated, having a site above the principal part of the village, and quite a country view stretching out north-west. It is now occupied by the Rev. Mr. Hyde and his bride. Then there is another new brick residence just north-west of the manse whose occupants are generally away, at least the blinds are down. This building is very nice and should be enticing. Mr. Watts has also put up a pretty little brick cottage, two stories, in the vicinity of the former two, which adds much to the appearance of the south-west of Warsaw. Still, on the south-east there are some other very nice new residences owned by Mr. J. Doughty and B. James and the new Baptist Church, also in the centre a couple of new shops owned by Doughty Bros., general merchants, of no little push and energy. They are making quite a stir among the dry bones of Warsaw and deserve credit and patronage.

CONGRATULATIONS.—We heartily join in offering congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Little on their recent presentation.

BIRTH.—The North Dummer correspondent takes pleasure with many other friends, in offering to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Edwards congratulations and pleasure with their recent heir. Please accept as heartily.

COMMON SENSE.—Your North Dummer correspondent may see if Prof. Sawyer could give him a course in common sense as he is very eagar for information and the Prof. is exceedingly eager to teach, therefore we may make a deal, and hope the course may have the effect that some good sense would have on your Observer of last week. His senses are all very common, evidently, except the sense of sensitiveness and that is extremely uncommon.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

Correspondence of the Review.

HYMENIAL.—On Wednesday of Last week Miss E. B. Truscott and Mr. Walter Finnie, were united holy wedlock by the Rev. Mr. Greatrix. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father, on Lot 8, in the 3rd Concession, in the presence of a goodly number of friends at about 6 p. m. after which they partook of a sumptuous supper. At about 2 a. m. the party broke up, after spending a most pleasant evening. The bride and bride groom went to their new home on Con. 1, where they intend to remain till summer, when a trip to the Thousand Islands or Rice Lake is anticipated.

LITERARY.—Bailleboro has a Literary Society, started last winter. Last week the Benafort boys launched out in the same line of business with the subject, "Married and Single Life." Not being present I cannot give any account of the proceedings, but I hear they got on wonderfully well, especially the "Village Blacksmith." Last night the boys around Centreville met at the Council Chamber to try and organize a Literary Society. There were about fourteen present, but as some of the principal ones were unable to attend, the meeting was postponed till next Tuesday.

It is wise to provide against emergencies which are liable to arise in every family. In sudden attacks of cold, croup, asthma, etc. a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will prove a reliable remedy.

Montreal Live Stock Market.

The Gazette of Tuesday, referring to the stock of the Montreal cattle market, this week, says it has fairly active, and a good business was done, but a weaker feeling prevailed owing to the larger receipts, and declined ½c per lb. on export cattle. The offerings of export stock for the week have been fair, for which there was a good demand for this season of the year, and sales of a few weight. The shipment of cattle from here since the close of navigation have been fair. The steamship Iowa, from Boston, took 100 head of Montreal cattle and 60 sheep. The steamship Palestine, from Boston took 119 head of cattle. There was a weaker feeling in butchers'cattle and prices dropped ½c per lb. from outside figures, although the demand was good, but the quality was on an average poor, which is generally the case at this time of year, as the arrivals of distillery do not commence to come in until Christmas time. However, a fair number of sales were made at 2½c@3c per lb. live weight. The receipts of sheep were larger, for which there was a good demand, but prices were weaker, although not much changed, and sales were made freely at 3c@3½c per lb. live weight. The demand for live hogs was slow and values were steady at 5½c per lb.

British Live Stock Trade.

The Montreal Gazette's English cables of Monday, quote a decline of half a cent in the cattle markets, owing to larger receipts from Canada and the States, which has weakened the market for Canadians, although the supplies from Ireland and the continent have been lighter. The has been a steady demand at the decline and the Liverpool market was steady. Prime Canadian steers were at 10½c., good to choice at 10c., poor to medium at 9, and inferior and bulls at 6½@8c., Canadian money. The supply of sheep has been light, with the market steady.

Respecting ranche cattle, a consignment of which—from the North-West—were lately placed on the English cattle markets it is learned from English papers on the authority of Mr. T. Johns, who handled some 160 head recently in Glasgow, that he personally superintended the slaughtering of three bullocks, the live weight of which had previously been ascertained, and found that the dressed carcase equalled 60 per cent. of the live weight. The color of the meat was somewhat high, but otherwise it was exceptionally tender and possessed the finest flavor. As Dr. McEachran, the chief inspector of Canadian stock, puts it: The ranche steer is fed on good natural food, and is in the open air from birth, hence, being better bred and better fed, the natural result is he makes better beef. With regard to their alleged wildness, the doctor declares that they are as easily handled as any other cattle if they are managed by those who know their business.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Safe, pleasant, and certain in their action," is the concise testimony of Dr. George E. Walker, of Martinsville, Virginia.

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

Charter Members.

Messrs. W. E. Roxburgh, the Rev. Mr. Carmichael, Mr. Bewel, Mr. J. Pindlay, Mr. J. Davidson, Mr. Waters, Dr. Pettigrew, Mr. Ira Cummings and Mr. R. J. Stewart, all of Norwood, visited Otonabee Lodge No. 18, on Tuesday evening when they were enrolled as the charter members of the new Lodge of Oddfellows organized in Norwood. The lodge starts with every prospect of being a success.

Imperial Federation League.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Imperial Federation League will be held in the Foresters' Hall, George St., opposite the Golden Lion, on the evening of Thursday the 8th. There will be the reading of a paper and general discussion. All who are in sympathy with the League are invited to attend.

The New Pastor.

The Rev. Jas. Allen, M.A., of Brockville, who has been invited to the pastorate of the George Street Methodist Church, is a distinguished graduate of Victoria University and a member of the Board of Regents of that seat of learning. He is, among the younger men in the ministry, one of the most popular and able preachers in this country. He has filled several important positions, having labored for terms in Montreal, Ottawa and Brockville. He is between 35 and 40 years of age. It is understood that the invitation will be accepted.

For the Mayoralty.

As will be seen by his address published in another column, Mr. Arthur Rutherford announces himself as a candidate for the office of Mayor. Mr. Rutherford has served in the capacity of a councillor, as a representative or No. Three Ward, for about eighteen years, and intimates that he is entitled at the hands of the ratepayers to the honor of a term in the higher office. His views of the duties of the position and how he believes they should be performed are set forth in his address.

True Blues.

The election of the officers for the new lodge of True Blues, organized on Monday, was completed on Wednesday evening. The following are the names:—

Acquitted.

John Collins was brought before Judge Weller at the Court House on Wednesday on a charge of arson. He was committed for trial on Nov. 25th by James Golborne, J. P., of Lakefield, the charge being that he had set fire to a barn in Douro belonging to Mr. Nicholl and rented by Messrs. Hillman and Lefevre. Several tons of hay and a quantity of straw were burned at the same time. The evidence was insufficient to convict and he acquitted. Mr. R. E. Wood, County Attorney, appeared for the prosecution and Mr. John O'Meara for the prisoner.

The Canadian Chautauqua.

Mr. L. C. Peake, of Toronto, who as Chairman of the Provincial Executive of the Sunday School Association, attended the County Convention here, spent Wednesday in looking after the interests of the Canadian Chautauqua, of which he is manager. The object of the company is the establishment of a summer resort under strictly moral and religious influences. For this purpose land has been secured at Niagara and laid out. An amphitheatre has been built in the centre of the grounds where in the summer the assembly—including lectures and concerts—is held and where educational classes are conducted. These classes were conducted last season by Mr. J. L. Hughes, of Toronto, and Rev. J. McEwen, of Lakefield. There are reservations for parks, drives and wide streets, an hotel has been built and a wharf constructed. The Canadian Chautauqua will probably become a popular resort.

The Trent Valley.

The Trent Valley Canal Association have issued a circular to all those interested in the construction of the canal, pointing out that the commissioners recently appointed by the Dominion Government would proceed, in all likelihood, at an early date to the investigation of the matters referred to them. It was necessary for all those interested in the project to at once take steps for the submission of evidence in support of the construction of the canal. For the purpose of obtaining concerted action the President, Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., calls a meeting of the members of Association, representatives of municipalities interested and all others favorable to the work, to meet in the Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Thursday, the 15th of December

Court of Revision.

A meeting of the Court of Revision was held on Wednesday evening, Councillor Moore in the chair. The petition of Mrs. Sheehy, asking a reduction of $400 in her assessment was considered and it was recommended that $300 be deducted. Ellen Angelsy applied for remission of taxes but the court could not see its way clear to comply with her wishes as she owned a half acre of land and a house. The court agreed to remit the taxes of Susan Walsh, less the school tax, and a similar petition from Agness Plunkett was treated likewise. Melissa Thornton and Mrs. John Barry applied for remission of taxes but the court found that both were owners of property and consequently did not recommend their claims. Joseph Warner applied for remission of taxes. Last summer his house was burnt down and he thought that he should not be called on to pay the taxes. It turned out, however, that the bargain between himself and tenant was that he, Mr. Warner, should pay the taxes, and as Mr. Warner drew the insurance it was decided that he should pay the taxes. Two other petitions were presented, but as they lack information regarding them they were filed for future judication.

Debating Club.

A regular meeting of the Debating Club in connection with the St. Peter's Cathedral congregation was held on Wednesday evening at the Murray street school. There was a large attendance and about half of the audience were ladies. The question of debate was: "Resolved: that the Crusades were a benefit to mankind." Mr. D. O'Brien led for the affirmative and was supported by M. Hackett, M. Carey, and T. O'Brien. The negative was led by Mr. R. Henry, the leader being supported by J. Lynch, J. J. Doherty and J. Hurley. The chairman, after summing up, decided in favour of the negative. A musical and literary programme was then entered upon. Mr. J. O'Meara read a selection from Bret Harte, Mr. Lessaeur sang a song, Mr. A. Weatherhead gave an original recitation, Dr. Collin sang a song. Dr. Brennan read from Scott's Lady of the Lake, the Misses Mahoney sang a duet, Miss O'Brien gave a reading and Miss McDonald gave a vocal solo. A song by Miss L. Mahoney captivated the audience and another by Miss McDonald brought forth an encore. A vocal solo by Miss Annie Dunn brought the programme to a close. During the evening Miss McDonald played the accompaniments in an artistic manner. The subject for debate on Wednesday evening next is: "Resolved that married life is preferrable to single life." Councillor Cahill will lead the affirmative and Dr. Brennan the negative.

Against the County.

Judgment was delivered in the case Victoria county vs Peterborough county to establish the joint responsibility of the defendant in maintaining the bridges at Bobcaygeon, which are situated within the county of Victoria, Judge Robertson deciding in favor of Victoria. Up till 1879 the the county of Peterborough were willing to pay their share in keeping up the bridge in question. At that date the County of Victoria made an application for a large and valuable slice of territory on the Victoria side of Pigeon Lake and their request was granted. This deprived the County of Peterborough from a considerable amount of revenue, as besides a large amount of land. Boyd's valuable mill property was incorporated within Victoria. This being the case the county of Peterborough did not feel that they could be justly called upon to contribute to the maintenance of bridges altogether without the boundary of the county. The county still hold this view and steps have been taken to appeal the case immediately.

A Delightful Evening.

The residence of Mr. Geo. Rubidge was filled to overflowing on Wednesday evening, on the occasion of a social being given in aid of the Mission Fund in connection with St. John's Church. The assembled company enjoyed themselves throughout the evening in a manner which must have been gratifying to the genial host and the amiable hostess. An excellent programme was presented. It was commenced with a selection by the orchestra. A pianoforte duet by Miss Beck and Miss Stevenson was given very acceptably. A reading by Mr. W. D. Parker was well received. A quartette by Messrs. A. Elliott, A. V. R. Young, Miss Errett and Mrs. H. C. Stapleton was rendered in such a happy manner that further on in the programme it was repeated by special request. The guests partook of lunch, after which, the orchestra opened the second part of the programme. Mr. Chas. Shaw sang in capital style "True to the Last." Mr. Jas. Morris favored the company with a vocal solo "The Sailor's Heart is True." Mr. A. Elliott sang the "Waterlilies" and Mr. Chas. Shaw contributed another song, "The Pedlar." The evening's programme was brought to an end by the singing of "God Save the Queen."

PROHIBITION.

ISAIAH, XXIV., V. II.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Isaiah seems to have taken a long shot at prohibition, and hit his mark with marvellous accuracy, when he wrote "There is a crying for wine in the street; all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone." Here is a pithy description of the heaven longed for by the prohibitionists. A (futile) crying for wnie; all joy darkened; the mirth of the land gone. What could be more desirable? If our total abstinence friends had sent a special deputation to Isaiah, to ask him to describe just such a state of things as their souls crave after, could he have done it better if he had been supplied with the most perfect type-writer and unlimited paper? I think not. That one verse seems to have been written expressly for prohibitionists; and that one verse only. But then, do they not love to take isolated texts and twist them up into fantastical shapes in order to make them prop up their own tottering theories? Here is a verse for them, ready to hand, and it requires no twisting. Its meaning is so clear that the youngest child may see what we are coming to. "The mirth of the land gone." Now let us look at the matter from the other side, I mean from an anti-prohibitionist's point of view. It would seem to us, then, if we read the whole chapter carefully, that Isaiah was trying to describe just about as miserable a state of things as he could imagine, when he wrote it. I do not think for one moment that he considered it at all desireable that there should be "a (futile) crying for wine," or that "joy should be darkened," or that the "mirth of the land should go." He seems rather to indicate a severe punishment. And then, in some unaccountable manner, he goes on to make a great mistake, for he seems entirely to have forgotten that the wine of his time was not intoxicating, when he wrote "The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard." What could Isaiah, or any of the inspired writers, have known about drunkenness, if, as we are taught at the present time, by men who ought to know, the wine of his time was not intoxicating? Curiously enough, though, they nearly all fall into the same error, from Moses to John the Divine. S.

NORWOOD.

Correspondence of the Review.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT.—Quite a gloom was cast over the village on the 7th inst., on learning of the sad death, by a runaway team, of Mr. James Stephenson, of Asphodel. Breaking the news to his daughter, who is attending the high school here, was a painful task. The deceased gentleman was a member of the Asphodel Council for 19 years.

COUNCIL MEETING.—A meeting of the village council was held in the town hall on the evening of the 6th inst. For about the third time since their election there was a full meeting, all the members being present. A number of small accounts were ordered to be paid. Mr. Minaker got permission to address the council on behalf of the A.O.U.W. He explained that the order rented the basement of the town hall two years ago at $10 per year. Last year they paid the rent, but asked to have it thrown off this year on account of the unsuitable condition of the building. Councillor Baddon was opposed to throwing off the rent and thought if the order had not found another hall, the building in question would have suited all right. However, the bulk of (official) opinion was against him and the order in question is $10 in, and the ratepayers $10 out. The resignation of Mr. Hugh Spence, as assessor was received and accepted. It is understood he will run for Councillor. An application from J. B. Pearce asking the council to take into consideration the exemption of the post office from taxation, explaining that it was over-looked at the court of revision. After some discussion, in which Coun. Baddon took the ground that to claim the exemption the building should be used exclusively for that purpose, it was finally carried that the P.O. be exempt and the collector get rebate for the same. A petition was presented by Mr. Henderson asking the council to seat the Town Hall with chairs and have it kalsomined. The petition contained in all 51 names on about 20 sheets of paper. Coun. Baddon said in looking over the names he found some neither ratepayers or residents and that the most heavy ratepayers names were conspicuous by their absence. He was in favor of giving it six months hoist (twice a year.) However better councils prevailed and it was laid over for further consideration. An application for salary from the Health Officer was referred to Board of Health. A by-law appointing polling places and deputy returning officers was put through its several readings. No. 2, Town Hall, W. H. Mullins returning officer; No. 1, School House, Jas. Pengelly deputy returning officer. The Council adjourned to the 27th December.

TEA MEETING.—Considerable preparation is in progress for the monster tea meeting in the Methodist Church. Proceeds to be devoted to improvements around the parsonage.

KICKED BY A COLT.—We regret to learn that Mr. David Paget of Asphodel was seriously injured by being kicked in the face by a colt while threshing peas on the barn floor on the 6th inst. His upper jaw was broken in two places, and his nose broken. Under the skilful treatment of Dr. Ford, who dressed the wound, he is likely to recover.

THE MAYORALTY

FOR 1888.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of a large number of ratepayers, who have promised me their support, I am before you as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1888. I ask you to give me your support, therefor, on the following platform:—

ECONOMY!
TEMPERANCE!
MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

If length of public service is deserving of recognition I may modestly claim your consideration. During the eighteen or twenty years which I have sat at your council board I have endeavored to faithfully advance the best interests of the town. I have spared neither time nor work to consistently carry out my pledges to my supporters and have worked to the best of my ability for the general good. If I have erred I have done so unknowingly.

I offer myself as—in particular—the workingman's candidate. I hope to receive the solid workingmen's support. I consider I am fairly entitled to it. I am a working man myself and if elected—will endeavour to repay the confidence by advancing their interests in every honest way.

I may say that in taking the field I am not actuated by any feeling of rivalry with the present occupant of the Mayor's chair, but I feel that with the many demands on his time and services that the position is not sought for. Should I prove correct in my inference, you cannot fairly overlook the claim that years of service has on your consideration.

I recognize thoroughly what the necessities of the town demand. Thorough economy in all departments of municipal expenditure must be the rule. A liberal policy to encourage the growth and establishment of new and existing industries. In this regard I am opposed to any money bonus being granted, but in favor of exemption from taxes and possibly free sites under proper restrictions. I shall—if elected—give particular attention to matters as outlined above.

Possibly one of the most prominent questions that will come before the ratepayers next year will be in connection with the enforcement of the Scott Act. I will maintain in this regard the position relative to temperance which I have held for the last 25 years. So long as the Scott Act remains in force I will to the extent of my ability and office, see that the law is strictly enforced, and that too through the proper officers of the town.

Such, gentlemen, are the grounds on which I ask your support. I may not have the opportunity of personally soliciting your favor, but venture to hope that the statement of my views will meet your approval.

Trusting that I may have your hearty support on the basis of

ECONOMY!
TEMPERANCE!
MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

I am, gentlemen,

Yours faithfully,

A. RUTHERFORD.

A WISE VIEW OF A GRAVE SUBJECT.

Mr. Dodge of New York on Christian Duty at the Present Time.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—A general Christian conference, under the auspices and direction of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States, of which Wilham E. Dodge of New York is president, opened here this morning in the Congregational Church. The conference met in response to a call issued by the Alliance several months since. The stated object of the conference is to discuss measures upon which all denominations may be brought to unite to meet certain new and pressing emergencies which have arisen in connection with the great increase of wealth, business, immigration, the changed relations of labor and capital, and the great and growing per centage of our population who are not church members or attendants.

President Dodge, in his opening address, referred to the organized power of the saloons and secular unions, the dangerous growth of cities, the loosening of family ties, the luxury of the times, the increasing passion for money, and the dying out of religious influences in many sparsely settled portions of old states, the increase and massing of immigrants who retain their habits, language and prejudices, and who do not understand the old American ideas founded on the love of God, respect for the law and a live moral sentiment. These must be preserved. Those who come to a new home with conditions for happiness better than ever offered before must understand this. The church, he said, has lost its hold on workingmen. Everywhere among them is unrest and a looking for a higher goal. This means a grand opportunity and a time for an applied christianity. The simple teachings and examples of Christ must be the base of a new movement. A religion worth the name, said the speaker, must bring cheer to every home, hope into every life, must bring into close sympathy all classes. Its followers must live with the people and for the people, as Christ lived, at any cost of time, money or comfort.

Ex-Justice Strong of the United States Supreme Court presided at the afternoon session. He introduced Prof. Hjalmer H. Boyeson of Columbia College, who made a short address upon the subject of immigration. Immigration, he said, which draws from the lower strata of Europe is changing the character of the people and gradually eliminating the virtues which are indispensable to successful self-government. The Socialist and the Anarchist come to avenge here what they suffered in Europe. By their disloyal sentiments and hostility to American institutions they disorganize and weaken the State. The third estate (the industrial class) is the governing class in this country. But now the fourth class—the manual laborers who formerly framed no political demands—has raised its head and has begun to contest with the third estate the directing power in the country. Hence arise discontent and social and economic convulsions. The speaker did not see how, with universal suffrage and unrestricted immigration, it was to be averted. He believed that the time had arrived when our former policy of indiscriminate absorption of foreign elements of population would result in a serious crisis. The children of aliens make a terrible exhibit in the statistics of pauperism and crime. They constitute largely the hoodlums and roughs of our cities. The public schools have intoxicated them with a sense of independence without impressing upon them the responsibilities of liberty. More competition with American labor enters in a week through Castle Garden than the prisons turn out in a year. Immigration has the effect of lowering the grade of American civilization by introducing an undue competition with people who demand less of life. Prof. Boyeson said in conclusion that he was in favor of a law which would make consular inspection and a certificate of good character indispensable perquisites to immigration.

Work on the western section of the Cape Breton Railway is being well carried on by Messrs. Isbester & Reed in spite of wet weather interfering with the grading. They have a very fine outfit on the water and have opened good quarries which will supply the stone for the completion of the necessary work on the eastern section. Messrs. Sims & Slater, the contractors, have made such poor progress that the work has been taken out of their hands and other arrangements made by which it is expected the work will be greatly expedited.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FOURTH PART.

Against Lady Montbarry's advice, he took the opportunity of renewing his addresses to Agnes. He could hardly have chosen a more unpropitious time for pleading his cause with her. The gayeties of Paris—quite incomprehensible to herself as well as to every one about her—had a depressing effect on her spirits. She had no illness to complain of. She shared willingly in the ever varying succession of amusements offered to strangers by the ingenuity of the liveliest people in the world—but nothing roused her; she remained persistently dull and weary through it all. In this frame of mind and body she was in no humor to receive Henry's ill timed addresses with favor, or even with patience. She plainly and positively refused to listen to him. "Why do you remind me of what I have suffered?" she asked petulantly. "Don't you see that it has left its mark on me for life?"

"I thought I knew something of women by this time," Henry said, appealing privately to Lady Montbarry for consolation; "but Agnes completely puzzles me. It is a year since Montbarry's death; and she remains as devoted to his memory as if he had died faithful to her—she still feels the loss of him as none of us feel it!"

"She is the truest woman that ever breathed the breath of life," Lady Montbarry answered. "Remember that, and you will understand her. Can such a woman as Agnes give her love or refuse it according to circumstances? Because the man was unworthy of her was he less the man of her choice? The truest and best friend to him—little as he deserved—in his lifetime, she naturally remains the truest and best friend to his memory now. If you really love her, wait; and trust to your two best friends—to time and to me. There is my advice; let your own experience decide whether it is not the best advice that I can offer. Resume your journey to Venice to-morrow, and when you take leave of Agnes speak to her as cordially as if nothing had happened."

Henry wisely followed this advice. Thoroughly understanding him, Agnes made the leave taking friendly and pleasant on her side. When he stopped at the door for a last look at her she hurriedly turned her head so that her face was hidden from him. Was that a good sign? Lady Montbarry, accompanying Henry down the stairs, said:

"Yes, decidedly. Write when you get to Venice. We shall wait here to receive letters from Arthur and his wife, and we shall time our departure for Italy accordingly."

A week passed and no letter came from Henry. Some days later a telegram was received from him. It was dispatched from Milan instead of from Venice, and it brought this strange message:

"I have left the hotel. Will return on the arrival of Arthur and his wife. Address, meanwhile, Albergo Reale, Milan."

Preferring Venice before all other cities of Europe, and having arranged to remain there until the family meeting took place, what unexpected event had led Henry to alter his plans? and why did he state the bare fact, without adding a word of explanation? Let the narrative follow him and find the answer to those questions at Venice.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Palace hotel, appealing for encouragement mainly to English and American travelers, celebrated the opening of its doors, as a matter of course, by the giving of a grand banquet and the delivery of a long succession of speeches.

Delayed on his journey, Henry Westwick only reached Venice in time to join the guests over their coffee and cigars. Observing the splendor of the reception rooms and taking note especially of the artful mixture of comfort and luxury in the bed chambers, he began to share the old nurse's views of the future, and to contemplate seriously the coming dividend of 10 per cent. The hotel was beginning well, at all events. So much interest in the enterprise had been aroused at home and abroad by profuse advertising that the whole accommodation of the building had been secured by travelers of all nations for the opening night. Henry only obtained one of the small rooms on the upper floor by a lucky accident, the absence of the gentleman who had written to engage it. He was quite satisfied, and was on his way to bed when another accident altered his prospects for the night and moved him into another and a better room.

Ascending on his way to the higher regions as far as the first floor of the hotel, Henry's attention was attracted by an angry voice protesting, in strong New England accent, against one of the greatest hardships that can be inflicted on a citizen of the United States—the hardship of sending him to bed without gas in his room.

The Americans are not only the most hospitable people to be found on the face of the earth—they are (under certain conditions) the most patient and good tempered people as well. But they are human; and the limit of American endurance is found in the obsolete institution of a bedroom candle. The American traveler, in the present case, declined to believe that his bedroom was in a completely finished state without a gas burner. The manager pointed to the fine antique decorations—renewed and regilt—on the walls and ceiling, and explained that the emanations of burning gas light would certainly spoil them in the course of a few months. To this the traveler replied that it was possible, but that he did not understand decorations. A bedroom with gas in it was what he was used to, was what he wanted and was what he was determined to have. The compliant manager volunteered to ask some other gentleman, housed on the inferior upper story—which was lit throughout with gas—to change rooms. Hearing this, and being quite willing to exchange a small bed chamber for a large one, Henry volunteered to be the other gentleman. The excellent American shook hands with him on the spot. "You are a cultured person, sir," he said, "and you will no doubt understand the decorations."

Henry looked at the number of the room on the door as he opened it. The number was Fourteen.

Tired and sleepy, he naturally anticipated a good night's rest. In the thoroughly healthy state of his nervous system, he slept as well in a bed abroad as in a bed at home. Without the slightest assignable reason, however, his just expectations were disappointed. The luxurious bed, the well ventilated room, the delicious tranquillity of Venice by night, all were in favor of his sleeping well. He never slept at all. An indescribable sense of depression and discomfort kept him waking through darkness and daylight alike. He went down to the coffee room as soon as the hotel was astir, and ordered some breakfast. Another unaccountable change in himself appeared with the appearance of the meal. He was absolutely without appetite. An excellent omelet and cutlets cooked to perfection he sent away untasted—he, whose appetite never failed him, whose digestion was still equal to any demands on it!

The day was bright and fine. He sent for a gondola, and was rowed to the Lido.

Out on the airy lagoon he felt like a new man. He had not left the hotel ten minutes before he was fast asleep in the gondola. Waking on reaching the landing place, he crossed the Lido and enjoyed a morning's swim in the Adriatic. There was only a poor restaurant on the island in those days, but his appetite was now ready for anything; he eat whatever was offered to him, like a famished man.

THOS. KELLY'S

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practice to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price alone is no criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

The Golden Lion Rampant!

A Falling Market Strikes the Golden Lion & Showers of Falling Prices come Tumbling Down.

A CRISIS IN DRY GOODS!

R. FAIR.

In anticipation of a Falling Market, has resolved to inaugurate a Grand Holiday Sale of his immense stock of HIGH CLASS DRY GOODS. The Stock, amounting at present to about $35,000 worth, must be reduced $15,000 before the New Year, and with a bona fide determination to accomplish this result, will make such a revolution in regular prices as will paralyze all attempts at competition. The following inventory of our Stock will give the public a comprehensive view of its vastness in extent, value and variety, and being all of that well known HIGH CLASS character, which the Golden Lion has continued to carry, offers a rare opportunity to the Dry Goods purchaser of Peterborough:—

$3,000 Worth of the Choicest Dress Goods.
$1,000 Worth of Black and Colored Cashmeres.
10 Pieces Black Silk Warp, Henrietta Cloths.
20 Pieces Black Gros Grain Silks, Merveilleaux and Mascot Silks.
150 Pieces Colored Silks, Satins and Merveilleaux.
75 Pieces of Mantle Cloths.
50 Pieces Ulstering. 10 Pieces Seallettes.
600 Ladies' Black and Colored Jerseys, Braided and Plain, bought at 50c. on the dollar.
100 Pairs White Blankets. 100 Bed Comforters.
200 Pieces of Best Canadian and Scotch Tweeds, Full Cloths, Overcoatings, Pantings.
200 Pieces of Grey Cottons.
150 Pieces of Steamlooms, Tickings, Towels, Towelings, Sheetings, Hosiery.

50 Pieces Brussels Carpets.
100 Pieces Tapestry Carpets, Wool Carpets, Hemp Carpets, Floor Oilcloths, Linoleums, Wool Mats, Wool Squares, Crumb Cloths.

In the face of a Falling Market, no merchant would be justified in carrying so heavy a stock at old prices. Therefore, in sympathy with the drooping market, down come the prices at the Golden Lion. The Sale begins on SATURDAY, December 3rd, and is strictly for Cash, and the public are assured that a veritable Storm of Tremendous BARGAINS are in store for them all through the Holiday season, at

GUILTY OF CHILD MURDER

HOW ELIZABETH FELLOWS KILLED HER 6-WEEKS-OLD INFANT.

The Inquest Held Yesterday Afternoon, and the Mother Declared to be Insane —Where the Severed Arm was Found— North Toronto's Horrible Tragedy.

TORONTO, Dec. 9.

That Elizabeth Fellows deliberately and maliciously killed her 6-weeks-old babe on Wednesday morning was decided yesterday afternoon by a coroner's jury. Coroner Johnson ordered an inquest for 4 o'clock in St. Paul's Hall for the purpose of considering "where, when and by what means the infant, John Fellows, came to his death. Only about twenty-five people were there, and most of them were jurymen. The County Crown Attorney was represented by his partner, Mr. Carson, while Sergeant Hall and Sergeant Adair represented the police. The jury, as sworn in, consisted of Wm. Dunn (foreman), John Page, Frank Gills, Philip Brown, Isaac Wilkinson, Geo. Ratcliffe, Edward Jackson, Joseph Little, John Burgess, Henry Chidley, Henry A. Shaw, Chas. Dunlop, Chas. Tonkin and Michael Hazza.

After being sworn in the jury proceeded to Fellows' house on Avenue-road, a few doors north of Davenport-road, followed by a mob of school children. The body was in the front bedroom, where there were two beds. It was enclosed in a coffin that rested on a table in front of the window. The little face looked quite calm, and the shroud was so arranged that no marks of violence could be seen. An elderly lady took hold of the right arm and lifted it off and showed it to the jurymen. It was quite plain that a knife had been used to sever it from the shoulder, and the marks of teeth were only too horribly apparent in the tender flesh.

Returning to St. Paul's Hall the inquest was proceeded with, the coroner informing the jury that the woman was not present because she was undoubtedly insane. The husband, John Fellows, a man about 30, was the first witness called. He gave his evidence in a half-dazed manner. Mr. Fellows said that he went out to his work at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, and visited the house at 7, 9 and 10.30. He continued: I came in at 10.30 and saw the baby. My wife said she was going to wash and dress it and the other children. I returned to the house again at about 11.50 to dinner. My eldest child, 3 years old, met me at the door and said: "Papa, mama's cut the baby!" as plainly as she could say. I said to my wife: "You haven't hurt the little thing have you?" She shuddered and then laughed at me when I asked her where the baby was. She told that everything was all right and asked me to sit down. I went to look for the baby, and said to her: "You won't hurt the other two, will you?" and she said, "Not if I can help it." I said, "You'd better come with me, then." I again asked her where the baby was. She laughed at me in a silly way, in fact, like a child. Again I asked her where the baby was. I called in Mr. Pears and Mr. Booth, my employers, and then my wife said the baby was under the bed. Mr. Pears took it out wrapped in a blanket. We were married four years ago last August. She was in the Toronto Lunatic Asylum from Feb. 1 to May 14 of this year, and when she came out she seemed to be well. She never tried to hurt the other children. This baby was seven weeks old. When she came home from the asylum it was because the Medical Superintendent sent for me and said that she was fit to leave. He did not say that she required watching.

Leonard Pears said that he was called in by Fellows and found the body wrapped in a blanket under the bed. He thought that perhaps the child was alive, and he feared to hurt it by dragging it out, so he lifted the bed aside and got the body, which was lying close to the wall. The head was severed, and the body and blanket were bloody. The woman was then sitting in the dining-room. The witness was first called out by one of his laborers, who said: "Fellows' wife has killed her baby. Come!" Mrs. Fellows looked very strange and flurried when he went into the house.

Mrs. Caroline Tomsett, of 154 Davenport-road, told of how she heard of the affair from a policeman, who said that the arm was off the body and it had to be found. She went to the house and after searching found the arm on a tin plate in the kitchen cupboard. There was a pile of tin plates and other dishes on top of it. It had been partly boiled and pieces had been cut off it. Some of these were on the plate, and on one piece there were marks of teeth. On the front of a stove in the basement she found a pot with some water in it. She could tell that some flesh had been boiled in the water. She had known Mrs. Fellows for two years and knew she had been in the asylum.

Mrs. Mary Wilkinson, a neighbor, told of how she had called on Mrs. Fellows and found her acting and talking strangely.

Dr. Britton said he knew Mrs. Fellows since Oct. 17, when he delivered her of the child in question. Some months prior he was told by her husband that she was in the asylum. He noticed, while attending her, that she showed marked indifference to her condition. About Oct. 28 or 29 he went to see her and observed quite evident symptoms of puerperal insanity, such as sleeplessness and careless ness about her house, herself and child, and nervousness and a general feeling of gloominess. On Nov. 20 he was called to see the child which had had a convulsion. He advised Fellows to be watchful of his wife.

Dr. Spencer stated that yesterday he made a post mortem examination of the child's body. He found the head severed and the right arm cut off near the shoulder. The arm showed evidence of having been boiled. He considered that the head had first been cut off, and that the child was dead when the arm was removed. He explained to the jury what puerperal insanity was and said that in September, 1886, he attended her and delivered her of a child. Then she became violent and attempted to throw the child out of the window and in doing so cut her hand. He met her shortly after she came out of the asylum and considered that she was not cured.

Coroner Johnson in summing up told the jury that in insanity of this form it was quite usual for the sufferer to wreak her hatred upon those nearest and dearest to them. It did not take the jury over ten minutes to decide that the mother had deliberately killed the child and that she was insane when she did it.

The child will be buried to-day and the unfortunate woman will be placed in the Lunatic Asylum.

THE FISHERY COMMISSION.

Sir Charles Tupper Will Not Accept the Terms the Americans Favor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Post's Washington's despatch says: The negotiations of the Fishery Commission are approaching an end, and there is good authority for the statement that all attempts to secure an agreement upon a treaty have failed. It appears that Chamberlain and Bayard could have come to an understanding, but Sir Charles Tupper, the Canadian commissioner, is not willing to accept the terms to which alone the American Commissioners and Secretary Bayard will agree. In fact, he is classed by his associates as an irreconcilable.

Sir Charles Tupper insisted upon a new reciprocity treaty similar in all its essential details to that of 1854, in consideration of the concessions which Canada is prepared to make as to the fisheries. Those best informed upon the subject are of the opinion that the subject will end by a recommendation by the President to Congress that a joint resolution shall be passed authorizing the Executive to refer all questions as to the interpretation of the treaty of 1818 to arbitration.

A MURDER IN PEORIA.

An Official of the Town Charged With Killing His Father-in-Law.

PEORIA, Dec. 8.—A great sensation was caused here last evening by the arrest of Hartman Plaag, the Marshal of South Peoria. He has been indicted for the murder of his father-in-law, John Colditz, on the evening of Jan. 5, 1880. Plaag was lodged in jail without bail. Colditz was found dead with a bullet through his heart, and the instrument with which the deed was committed was found within three feet of him. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of murder by unknown parties. Plaag's sisters-in-law, Mrs. Becker and Mrs. Weiss, now come forward and swear that Plaag killed his father-in-law, that they witnessed the deed, but were in so much terror of Plaag that they swore falsely at the inquest.

THE LIBERAL UNIONISTS.

Six Hundred Delegates Attend a Conference in Westminster Hall.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Lord Hartington presided at the conference in Westminster Hal to-day of Liberal Unionists. Many leaders of the party were on the platform. Six hundred delegates were present. The Earl of Derby offered a resolution in favor of increased exertion to strengthen the Unionist party.

Lord Hartington, replying to a vote of confidence, denied that the Unionists had deserted Liberal principles, which, he said, did not belong to one man or party. If they had agreed to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule scheme they would have falsified the pledges they had made before the general election. "We were told that the mode of operation in Ireland had been changed owing to the sympathy of Englishmen. But we did not see such a great change. 'Remember Mitchellstown' has been flung forth to animate the passions of the people in their struggle against the law. Every method of open resistance short of rebellion has been resorted to with the tacit consent of Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal leaders. The Unionists had a satisfactory understanding with the Conservatives and would continue to act with them."

Referring to the Fair Trade movement, Lord Hartington said it was not possible to speak in too strong terms of those who spoke of returning to a policy of protection. He hoped the Conservative leaders would weigh well the consequences before they gave their succor and support to a policy which would lead to the disruption of the Unionist party. Those who advocated Fair Trade must be responsible for the consequences.

Lord Hartington presided at a banquet in the evening. There were 750 guests present, including all the leading Unionists.

Mr. Goschen in the course of a speech said that as a member of the Government he would say deliberately that he did not believe there would be advanced a single principle, executive, administrative or fiscal, which would cause any difficulty between the Conservatives and the dissidents.

No Winter Carnival for Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—At a meeting of the House Committee of the Windsor Hotel it was agreed that it was now too late to get up a carnival this year. A large number of names are spoken of in connection with the new management of the hotel. Mr. Southgate of New York, and formerly of the Windsor, offers to take over the hotel from the company.

Mrs. Middleton is at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—Mrs. H. G. Middleton has arrived at Montreal to-day. She informed a reporter who called upon her at the St. Lawrence Hall, where she is stopping, that she had come to see her lawyers.

Wreck on the Northern Pacific.

BRAINARD, Minn., Dec. 8.—A freight train on the Northern Pacific road was wrecked near Kimberly to-day and two brakemen named Kline and Holmes were killed. The steam escaping from the engine fatally scalded the engineer, D. W. Travis.

Pig Iron Going up.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—President Cleveland's message has caused excitement in the Scotch pig iron market and prices are rising.

M. GOBLET'S DIFFICULTY.

HE MEETS WITH OBSTACLES IN FORMING A NEW CABINET.

It Is Said that He Intends to Demand that Gen. Boulanger Shall Be Made Minister of War—A List of a Probable Ministry.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—It is stated that M. Goblet, who has undertaken the task of forming a Ministry, intends to demand that Gen. Boulanger shall be Minister of War.

A Forecast of The Cabinet.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—It is reported that the Cabinet will be composed as follows:

M. Goblet, President of the Council and Minister of the Interior.
M. Ribat, Minister of Justice.
M. Flourens, Minister of Foreign Affairs.
M. Ruiard, Minister of Education.
M. Loubit, Minister of Agriculture.
M. Minard-Dorion, Minister of Public Works.
M. Clamageran, Minister of Finance.
M. Siegfried, Minister of Commerce.
M. Bourgeois, Minister of Marine.
Gen. Fevrier or Gen. Thomassin, Minister o War.

M. Goblet's Difficulty.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—M. Goblet has been foiled by the refusal of M. Ribot to remain in a Cabinet in which two portfolios are given to members of the Extreme Left, M. Sigismond Lacroix and M. Menard Dorion. A prolonged conference was held between President Carnot, M. Goblet and Ribot, the President supporting M. Goblet, but no agreement was arrived at. M. Ricard, who is President of the Union of the Left, joins M. Ribot in refusing to enter the Cabinet. M. Goblet regards M. Ricard's action as the refusal of the Union of the Left to co-operate, and he will probably resign the task of forming a ministry. If M. Goblet does resign the task, M. Rouvier will probably be recalled to head a modified Cabinet. It is reported that the dissension between M. Goblet and M. Ribot is due to other reasons besides the share of the Radicals in the Government, notably to differences in regard to the income tax and the worship budget.

Clemenceau May be Called.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—It is stated that M. Clemenceau is strongly opposed to the return of M. Rouvier to power, and it is thought probable that the President will be obliged to ask M. Clemenceau himself to form a Cabinet.

THE KINGSTON ELECTION.

The Liberals Abandon the Action to Unseat Sir John Macdonald.

KINGSTON, Dec. 8.—The election petition against the return of Sir John A. Macdonald as member for Kingston was abandoned this morning and the Liberals will meet the costs. The judge said that the election was an exceptionally pure one; that both parties acted nobly, and that some disreputable characters had endeavored to sell their franchise, but he did not think they were successful. The County Attorney was advised to prosecute Dougherty and Smith (who claimed to have been bribed and then for reward turned informers) for perjury or obtaining money under false pretences, both of which were made out of their own evidence. It is said that Sir John Macdonald will now resign Carleton and sit for Kingston.

A British Steamer Wrecked.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The British steamer Lorne, plying in Chinese waters, was wrecked on Sunday on the east coast of the Island of Haitan. Of those on board sixty-nine were saved. The fate of the others is unknown. The Lorne was of 1075 tons burden.

A New York Village in Flames.

BINGHAMTON, Dec. 8.—A fire broke out in Great Bend village about 11 o'clock this evening and spreading rapidly is now raging in the business portion of the village. The destruction of the entire business section is threatened.

Flour Inspection in New York.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Board of Flour Trade in the Produce Exchange to-day adopted an amendment to the rule governing the trade. Hereafter flour which has not been inspected or graded may be examined by the inspector as to soundness and uniformity at the option of the buyer. All flour examined must bear the initials of the inspector. Irregular flour must be branded on each package to distinguish the quality.

Killed by a Cave-in.

HALIFAX, Dec. 8.—Clinton Crawford and Thos. Gutro, workmen in the Springhill mines, were killed this morning by a fall of frozen clay. The mass of clay hurled them ten feet down a slope and they died from internal injuries while being carried home. The two men had been warned of the danger and ordered to work at another place.

Suicide of an Anarchist.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Christian Denning, a well-known Anarchist, who has been brooding over the death of Spies and his fellow Anarchists, has committed suicide by hanging.

To Meet in Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Republican National Committee on the third ballot selected Chicago as the place of holding the convention and June 19 as the date.

RUSSIA HOPES FOR PEACE.

The Predictions of a Conflict With Russia Unjustifiable—Russia Sends a Circular to the Foreign Courts.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8.—Well informed persons assert that the Russian Government's intentions are entirely pacific, and that public opinion in Russia is also in favor of peace. The predictions of an approaching conflict between Russia and Austria are the more unjustifiable after the recent Imperial meeting at Berlin, as the rapprochements then effected can but contribute to the general peace by involving Austria in a similar pacific development. The Russian movements on the frontier consist merely of the despatching there of a division of cavalry, not with any aggressive idea, but for the protection of certain localities. The city of Lublin is exposed to attacks by an enemy against which prudence recommends that provision be made in view of the important military preparations now proceeding in Austria.

A Russian Circular.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—The Russian Government has sent a circular to its representatives at foreign courts in relation to the Czar's recent visit to Berlin. The circular draws attention to three points: First, that the Czar's conversation with Prince Bismarck showed that there was not the slightest reason for a breach between Germany and Russia. Second, that Prince Bismarck promised that Germany would remain neutral in Bulgarian affairs, and third, that both Governments should order newspapers to adopt a moderate tone in their comments on Russo-German relations. The forged documents are not mentioned in the circular.

No Immediate Danger.

PESTH, Dec. 8.—In the best informed circles the situation arising from the reinforcement of the Russian troops in Poland is not regarded as portending immediate danger. Nothing more will be done yet beyond the sending of a warning to Russia that Austria is watchful, and will not leave unanswered any further military measures that Russia may take. Austria will not precipitate counter measures, because she does not desire to leave Russia without a loophole, or to give her retreat the appearance of being due to Austrian menace. It is expected that Austria will grant to Russia a brief delay for furnishing a spontaneous explanation of the massing of her troops. Meanwhile the Austrian preparations will quietly continue.

The Defence of Galicia.

VIENNA, Dec. 8.—The War Office is taking measures to permanently increase the facilities by which troops can be mobilized and to place Galicia in a better position for defence. The Przemysl fortress, the most important defence work in the province, is being surrounded by a net work of railroads and a track has been added to the Hungarian Galician Railway. Other fortifications are being erected. These preparations will enable a large force to be thrown into Galicia at the shortest notice. No extra force will be stationed in Galicia.

A Council of War at Vienna.

VIENNA, Dec. 8.—Emperor Francis Joseph presided to-day at a military council. Count Kalnoky, the Imperial Prime Minister, was also present. It was decided not to summon the delegations for the present, as Russia has apparently stopped her menacing movements.

Measures for the mobilization of the troops were arranged, which will be immediately adopted should Russia continue massing troops on the frontier. The public is not unduly excited, but it is resolved to meet any attack that may be made with firmness. In leading circles the idea that Austria intends to give Russia provocation for war is repudiated.

ON A BREAD AND WATER DIET.

Mr. Mandeville Must Conform to the Rules of Tullamore Jail.

DUBLIN, Dec. 8.—Mr. Mandeville, who is a prisoner in Tullamore jail, has been subjected to a bread and water diet for forty-eight hour for refusing to clean his cell.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Mr. Dillon, in a speech at Islington this evening, said that the Nationalists intended to publish an analysis showing that the persons on the platform at the recent meeting in Dublin addressed by Lord Hartington were chiefly Castle officials, Orangemen and lawyers.

One Month for Harrington, M.P.

DUBLIN, Dec. 8.—Edward Harrington, M.P., was tried in the Tralee Court to-day on a charge of publishing in his paper, Kerry Sentinel, the reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the National Land League. He was found guilty and sentenced to one month's imprisonment without hard labor. Notice was given of an appeal.

The court offered to release Mr. Harrington on his own recognizance if he would agree not to publish any more reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the league, but he refused to give such a promise. The court declined to state the case for appeal.

Slowly Moving Towards Protection.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—A meeting to advocate Fair Trade was held in St. James' Hall to-day. Resolutions were adopted favoring moderate import duties and urging a modification of the Free Trade policy.

EFFECTS OF DESCRIMINATION.

It is a peculiar idea some Commercial Unionist have of what the effect of descrimination on the part of Canada against Great Britain would be. Prof. Goldwin Smith voices that idea in a recent letter, in which he argues that the interests of "a limited number of British manufactures" should not weigh with the Canadian people. This serves to show the short sightedness, or wilful blindness, of the Commercial Unionists. Suppose that only a limited number of lines of manufactures would be effected, they would be the most important ones. But would the owners of the factories be the only ones injured? Does Prof. Goldwin Smith, in glancing at the the world beneath him from the lofty height in which lives, even notice that mechanics work in factories? Perhaps the Professor knows that if the number of papers and periodicals were curtailed, there would be less work to do on the press and that wielders of the pen would find themselves out of employment. He may even have noticed that printers set the type and that the same cause would leave a number of them without work. This should have led him to understand that the products of factories are made by men, and that the shutting down of a factory, or the curtailment of its product, would lessen the amount of labour to be done, and deprive a number of men of work. If he applied his well-filled but unstable mind further to the subject he might discover that among the mechanics thus employed farmers and merchants find a large number of their customers, and the state population and taxpayers, which would show that, in discriminating against Great Britain, we would not be injuring simply a limited number of manufacturers, but would be striking at every interest and at the state itself. And the Commercial Unionists ask Canadians to do this—to injure the workmen, farmers, merchants and every interest in Great Britain, to strike a blow at the Mother Country itself—by adopting a policy that would benefit only a foreign country.

The attempt made to make the question one between ourselves and English manufacturers is a device, not too clever, to confuse the issue. The question is, would Commercial Union benefit Canada? In answering it, the effect it would have on the connection with Great Britain must be taken into account, not necessarily with a view to the interests of Great Britain, although that should be considered, but in estimating the results to Canada. Those who believe that the Dominion should remain a part of the British Empire will put the present connection in the scale against Commercial Union, if they see that it would weaken the connection, and it would weigh heavily on that side of the balance.

Commercial Union would not benefit Canada, because the Canadian producers do not now, as a rule, pay the the duty on exports to the United States. President Cleveland in his message to Congress emphasizes the view that they pay no part of the duties, and the Toronto Globe endorses the President's opinion. It would injure Canada because it would open its markets to the combinations of large manufacturers in the United States, who would break down competition here and injure or kill out our manufacturing industries. This would effect the whole country and every interest—manufacturing and farming especially—in it. It would also injure Canada by weakening or severing its connection with the British Empire.

It comes to this, that Canadians are asked to do a thing which will injure the Empire to which they belong, and their own Dominion, and which would be to the advantage only of the United States. It is a cool proposition.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,

Street car driving is not servile labor. So says Judge Johnson, of New-Brunswick. As the Sunday [illegible] province only prohibits servile [illegible] car driving on Sunday is not illegal.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

A freight car labelled "powder," standing at Phillipsburg for two days, created much apprehension and people shunned it. When opened, however, it was seen to contain barrels of apples. The barrels were as full as when they were shipped.

Do tell me? he name of that delightful Perfume you use. With pleasure. It is the "Lotus of the Nile."

FIRE IN A FUR ESTABLISHMENT.

Moses Vineberg of Montreal Suffers to the Extent of $30,000.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—In a fire in Moses Vineberg's wholesale fur establishment this afternoon over 400 valuable furs, besides a great number of caps in process of manufacture, were either totally burnt or rendered almost valueless. Only at 11 o'clock 240 Persian lamb skins were carried up to the factory. Much damage was also done by water to goods stored upon three other flats. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

The insurances are as follows: British American Company, $2500; Caledonian, $5000; Citizens', $2000; City of London, $2500; Guardian, $4000; Northern, $5000; Norwich Union, $3000; National of Ireland, $5000; Scottish Union, $5000; on fixtures and sewing machines $1000 in City of London; total, $35,000.

J. W. Gale & Co. Settle With Their Creditors.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—The adjourned meeting of the creditors of J. W. Gale & Co., Toronto, was held to-day, and was largely attended. A. F. Gault, of Gault Bros. & Co., presided, and there were representatives present of Cantlie, Ewan & Co., Copland, MacLaren & Co., and other firms largely interested. A statement was submitted by Gale & Co., showing directand indirect liabilities of $300,000, and assets about $200,000. The English liabilities amount to about £18,000 sterling. Mr. Gale submitted an offer of 55 cents on the dollar at four, eight and twelve months, which was unanimously accepted by the creditors, the chairman remarking that the offer was a most handsome one, and that Mr. Gale had acted in a most honorable and straightforward manner.

New Year's Calling Cards.

Handsome styles of New Year Calling Cards just received at the REVIEW Stationery Store. Neat, stylish and not expensive.

New House.

Mr. W. H. McElwain has finished building a handsome house for Mr. A. Stewart, of Otonabee. It is 34x36 two stories high, has a verandah and two bay windows. It cost $2,400. Mr. Stewart will move into his new residence soon.

Court of Revision.

His Honor Judge Weller held a Court of Revision in the Council Chamber on Thursday evening. The appeals of Messrs. T. Cahill, T. Farren, T. Giroux, E. H. D. Hall, and Jas. Lattimore were all granted.

Out for Councillor.

Mr. Harry Winch is in the field for Municipal honors in No. One Ward. He will doubtless make a good member and it would not be surprising to see him head the poll. Mr. Bannell Sawyer also offers himself as a Councillor for Ward No. One. His business ability would be useful in the Council.

Important Stock Sale.

Buyers of stock will do well to remember the sale at Dr. Kincaid's farm on Thursday, Dec. 15th. The opportunity to secure fine animals is a good one and should not be lost sight of. The sale begins at 10 o'clock and a lively competition is expected. d137

At Home.

An exceedingly pleasant time was spent by about one hundred people at the residence of the Rev. J. C. Wilson, on Tuesday evening, in "At Home" being given in aid of the Mark Street Church funds. Vocal solos, instrumental music, choral singing were enjoyed during the evening. The proceeds are about $20.

An Offer.

Kid Gloves 4 buttons, 25c. a pair, wonderful value. 5 dozen only all Wool Shirts and Drawers, 50c., the best value in the market. 10 dozens only, 50c. Corsets for 35c. 5 dozens only, Men's Socks 12½c. per pair, all Wool. A job lot of Grey Flannel for 12½c. Look out for big bargains in every department at H. S. Griffin & Co's. 2d137

Preparatory to Moving.

By referring to the large advertisement in to-nights issue it will be seen that Hall, Innes & Co., have decided to hold a "Grand Inaugural Sale," with the object of disposing of a large quantity of stock before moving back to their handsome and commodious premises on Simcoe street. It is hardly necessary to say that the opportunity offered to secure exceedingly good goods for a low figure is one that seldom occurs. Bought for this season's trade the stock is excellent and choice and will well repay an inspection. 157

The Mayoralty.

There is no longer any doubt that Mr James Stevenson is willing to serve the town in the position of Mayor for another year. His address to the electors appears in another column, in which he calls attention to his long business career in the town and to his extended experience in municipal affairs. In the earlier days of the town Mr. Stevenson occupied the position of Mayor, and for two years past has been elected to the office by the unanimous consent of the ratepayers. By acceding to the wishes of his friends that he should again be a candidate he gives the opportunity of retaining his services.

AN IMPERIAL FLEET.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE MARITIME INTERESTS OF THE EMPIRE.

An Improvement on the Costly Cruiser Service—Canada's Chance to Save Money and Get Better Protection.

A regular meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Imperial Federation League was held on Thursday evening, Mr. J. H. Long, the chairman, present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read.

The secretary was given instructions to write to Mr. Dalton McCarthy to see if his services could be secured to give an address during the Christmas holidays and the chairman was instructed to communicate with the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain with a view to bring him to Peterborough to deliver an address. Mr. Long then read a paper on the defences of the Empire. There could be no doubt, he said, that the world was little by little losing its taste for war. It was true that Europe was groaning under the burden of heavy military expenditure, but the fact remained that solving international difficulties by arbitration instead of by the sword, was coming more into vogue. Still, until the millennium, war was a sad necessity that must be faced, and the world found that the best preventive of it was preparation for it. Some could be disarmed altogether without danger to themselves, but in most cases it was the opposite; Britain, for instance, with possessions lying exposed all over the world and having diplomatic relations with every nation beneath the sun. In Britain's case it was in the interests of civilization and Christianity that she should keep up capable armaments. Without them India would revert to its chaotic state. A united, independent India was an impossibility, owing to diverse peoples with different languages inhabiting the country. As with India, so with other semi-savage lands, it needed the presence of a strong power to govern. But, it would be asked, what has this to do with Canada? To which he replied that if it was to our advantage at all to belong to the Empire it must be to our interest to see that the prestige of the Empire is kept up. And, too, looking from a high moral point of view, it was the duty of every British subject to assist in maintaining the vastest moral force, the greatest plan for the spread of Christianity and civilization for all time. Disruption of the Empire meant the division of this great moral force and a consequent weakening of it. Coming from the abstract to the concrete he asked that if it was contended that Canada should contribute to all the petty wars which England should be engaged in. He answered, no. Canada should have no interest in wars which were not of Imperial importance. If Canada contributed at all it would be a voluntary contribution. We should, however, as we did now, maintain a force sufficient to enforce peace within our borders. We should also contribute fairly to the maintenance of the Imperial Navy on a peace footing. The contribution to maintaining an Imperial army was quite another question. He was inclined to think Canadians should not contribute seeing the large volunteer force which was kept up. With the navy the case was different. It was necessarily an armament to protect the maritime interests of the Empire. The need Canada had of such protection all knew from the occurrences which had taken place only last year in the Atlantic and in the Behring Sea. Prohibition, alone, would not keep the American poachers off from the Canadian fisheries or French poachers from the Newfoundland waters. It needed force to carry such prohibition into effect. There was no doubt that the burden of the protection of Canadian waters in the late difficulty was left with Canada, and the American contention was strengthened by the belief that England would not waste a drachm of powder on the business. There was no doubt also that the belief that England would spend her last dollar and man in defence of the colonies had been much weakened. But this was natural. Canada taxed British goods, paid not a cent towards the maintenance of the fleet, received the benefit of all consular service without paying a dollar, and was even now agitating to discriminate against British goods in favor of commercial rival. Why should Britain plunge into an expensive war when Canada pays no share toward keeping up defensive services? The only way to escape this degrading position was to come manfully forward and say that we are willing to stand the fair share of naval expenditure, such share to be computed with due regard to our wealth, population and circumstances, and to the contributions Canada has already made to the defences of the Empire, notably the C. P. R. and Intercolonial Railway. A great cry of alarm would then go up to the effect that Canada would be enormously taxed. He did not think that there was any need for such alarm. In fact it would cost less than the keeping up of the present ineffective cruiser service. We could not keep our cake and eat it. We must be willing to spend our money in defence or confide to the honesty of our neighbors. There should be either no defence or an adequate defence, and to his mind a well organized Imperial service was the most adequate and cheapest. He had no confidence in the honor of the American nation as history proved her unscrupulousness. In the late difficulty the American Congress did not enter into the justice of the fishery matter, but sought to frighten the Canadians by threatening them with a non-intercourse bill—a political thumbscrew—a thing unknown since the Berlin Decrees. This was simply in line with their dealings. The unparalleled confiscation and expulsion acts against the Loyalists of 1776; the invasion of Canada in 1812 before England received or could have received the declaration of war; the continued violations of neutality in the troublous days of '37; the sharp practice on the Ashburton Treaty and the Oregon difficulty—a fit precedent to which was the Treaty terminating the American Revolution, when Canada lost by American cuteness the valley of the Ohio; the undisguised assitance given to the Fenians of 1866 and of 1870, when whole regiments with arms in their hands paraded through the chief streets of great American cities, and under the patronage of government officials, openly proclaimed their intention of making war upon a friendly government; the demand for a modest $60,000,000, the amount demanded for the Alabama damages although claimants have been found for only $8,000,000, the refusal to return the difference between the $15,000,000.00 actually granted and the $8 000,000 00 paid in claims; the grumbling over the payment of the $5½ millions of the Halifax award; the sharp practice by which the Alabama Commission was made to date from a time so recent as to exclude Fenian claims; the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, with the avowed purpose of producing annexation in 1866: the constant refusal to negotiate a satisfactory extradition treaty and copy right law law; the claim that the Behring Sea a "mare clausuim," and the seizures of British vessels as a result of such claims; and the quibbling of Bayard, the very world of honor and frankness, the violation of the treaty of 1818 in reference to fishing, a treaty the validity of which has again and again and again recently been acknowledged by the Americans, the retaliatory bill, one of the most unjust and tyranical measures ever enacted; the avowal that as England will not fight, the American view of the 1818 treaty will be enforced at all hazards:—All these showed clearly that American dealings with Britain and Canada rest not upon fairness and magnaminity but upon selfishness and chicanery. The point, then, is that whether Canada be independent or a part of the British Empire, she can get fair treatment from the United States only by forcible defense of her rights, and the question was, how were effective defense to be obtained? No one could doubt that, contributing for the maintence of a navy equal at least to any too navies in the world combined, and having the protection of it, would be cheaper and better for Canada then building an inefficient navy for herself. We would then have the right to call on the navy for the proper patrol of our waters. The Imperial fleet would not be distinctively English, Scotch, or Irish, but would be manned by competent men from all parts of the Empire.

He made several divergences to instance the advantages of forming part of the British Empire, and concluded with enforcing the following points. (1) that under any form of Government Canada must be well protected; (2) that the cheapest and best way is to enter into an agreement with Great Britain and other parts of the Empire for a system of mutual naval defence; (3) that there need be under such system no additional, or at most, not much additional cost to that paid at present; (4) that if there should be a deficiency it could be met by proceeds from an Imperial customs union; (5) that the various self-governing parts of the Empire maintain local land defences. He closed with an eloquent peroration.

Mr. E. B. Edwards spoke briefly, commending the paper and its purport. There was need of defence under any circumstances, and the mode of defence suggested by the paper was, in his opinion, the best. Mr. Smith, of the Public Schools, also spoke in the same strain.

The discussion then drifted to the trade question. Mr. Long asked if the idea of Inter-Imperial trade was growing in England.

Mr. EDWARDS replied that he had not much time to judge while over the last time, but on his former visit he encountered a strong feeling in favor of it.

MR. LONG asked how the English liked the Commercial Union agitation now going on in Canada.

Mr. EDWARDS replied that so far as he knew the English were opposed to it. They were more in favor of making fair terms with the colonies than ever, but there was no doubt that this friendly spirit would be cooled if Canada favored Commercial Union.

Mr. W. J. Minore, Mr. J. H. Burnham and others took part in further discussion.

The meeting adjourned at about ten o'clock.

—A Winnipeg telegram states that among the names mentioned in connection with the Knox church pastorate in that city are Rev. Mr. Torrance of Peterborough and Rev. Dr. McTarvish of Lindsay.

—On Friday evening last Rev. Mr. Torrance of Peterborough conducted the services preparatory to communion in St. Andrew's church, Lindsay, delivering a very earnest and instructive address.

—Bishop Dowling made a parochial visit at Downeyville this afternoon.

The Lindsay Post jocularly remarks:—"Judge Weller of Peterborough has been appointed to the Trent Valley commission, to succeed Judge Clark. If Mr. Carnegie had been appointed, as The Post suggested, it would have been well; but, it is no desparagement to Mr. C. to say that the premier has done 'weller'."

—This Friday evening is the date of the Social on reopening of the room of Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F.

—An interesting meeting of the committees was held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms last night. A full report will be given to-morrow.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare. If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,
d137tf J. STEVENSON.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE SOUTH WARD,

of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—I beg to offer myself as a candidate for election as Councillor, to represent Ward No. 1, for the ensuing year.

Should you do me the favor to place me in that important position, I will endeavour to faithfully watch after the best interests of the ward and town generally.

I am, gentlemen,
Yours respectfully,
d137 H. C. WINCH.

FOR WARD NO. 1.

To the Electors of Ward No. 1.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—In accordance with the expressed wish of many influential citizens in your ward I have the honor of announcing my intention to stand as a candidate for Councillor at the forthcoming Municipal Elections.

My platform is Justice, Temperance, and Economy, and will if elected do all that is in the power of one man to do for the people who entrust their work to me.

Should a personal canvass be impossible, I trust the people will do all in their power to further it.

Very respectfully,
20d137 BANNELL SAWYER.

A CONTEST IN CARLETON

SIR JOHN TO RESIGN THAT CONSTITUENCY AND SIT FOR KINGSTON.

A Large Number of Aspirants for the Vacancy Already in the Field—Mr. C. H. Mackintosh of Ottawa Likely to be the Government Candidate.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—There is a good deal of satisfaction at the result of the Kingston election trial confirming Sir John in his seat which, it is understood, he will keep and resign Carleton. There is considerable speculation as to who will be the Conservative candidate in Carleton. There is a large number of aspirants, including ex-Sheriff Powell and Mr. John Rochester, both of whom have represented the constituency, but there is an impression that the local men may be induced to retire in favor of a strong outsider. In this connection there is a rumor that no matter what the result of the Russell trial, which is fixed for hearing on Dec. 27, C. H. Mackintosh will not run there again, but will be the Government candidate in Carleton, and that Mr. Dan Macmaster, whose unfortunate allusion to the cattle stealing proclivities of his Highland ancestors has killed his chance of being again elected by the Scotchmen of Glengarry, will endeavor to wrest Russell from the Opposition. There is great probability of the rumor being well founded.

The time for receiving tenders for the ocean mail service expired to-day. It is understood that four tenders were received. They will probably be opened to-morrow and the result made known in a few days.

Mr. F. A. Wise, superintendent of the Rideau Canal, is at present in Perth, where he is making plans for the new basin of the Tay Canal at the town of Perth. Mr. Wise will complete the plans for the works in a few days, and the work of making the excavations will be started as soon as the spring season opens and will be completed, it is expected, in about four months' time.

The directors of the Capital Gas Company visited the scene of the natural gas discovery in Gloucester township yesterday and tried some experiments which were highly satisfactory. The work of sinking a test well will shortly be commenced.

REFORM IN MUNICIPAL LAW.

Commission Appointed to Report on the Present System and Suggest Improvements.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.

The Provincial Government has appointed a Municipal Commission to investigate and report on the system at present in vogue, its work and methods, excellences and defects and suggested improvements. This is a large subject for enquiry, but the commission takes even wider scope. It will inquire into the administration of criminal justice with a view to uniformity of procedure and the rectification of anomalies. The field of the operations of the commission is as wide as its subject is comprehensive. Not only the municipalities of Canada will come within its purview, but also those of the chief cities and districts of the United States, Great Britain and her colonies. The object is to get all the information possible on municipal institutions to carefully summarize and classify this, and to make a comparison between the methods adopted in the Old Country and America with those that obtain in Canada.

For such an important work the Government has appointed three commissioners. The chairman will be Hon. T. W. Anglin, and he will have for colleagues Mr. E. F. B. Johnson, Deputy Attorney-General, and Mr. William Houston, Librarian of the Provincial Legislature. These gentlemen will make a strong trio. The result of the labors of the Commission will be most valuable, and will, it is to be hoped lead to the rectification of abuse, and "a more excellent way" in municipal affairs and the administration of justice. The pruning knife will doubtless be required by the Legislature to remove some objectionable branches on the municipal tree, and the glaring defects of other cities will serve as a beacon to those of the Dominion.

Necessarily the work will be of a protracted nature, but a good deal of it can be satisfactorily accomplished by correspondence. Already steps have been taken to secure the fullest and most trustworthy documentary evidence from many quarters, and as soon as the detailed official instructions are received the commission will publicly enter on its work in one of the rooms of the Parliament Buildings.

Perfection at last is found in that exquisite Perfume, "Lotus of the Nile."

COUNTESS NARONA.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FOURTH PART.

He could hardly believe, when he reflected on it, that he had sent away untasted his excellent breakfast at the hotel.

Returning to Venice, he spent the rest of the day in the picture galleries and the churches. Toward 6 o'clock his gondola took him back, with another fine appetite, to meet some traveling acquaintances with whom he had engaged to dine at the table d'hote.

The dinner was deservedly rewarded with the highest approval by every guest in the hotel but one. To Henry's astonishment the appetite with which he had entered the house mysteriously and completely left him when he sat down to table. He could drink some wine, but he could literally eat nothing. "What in the world is the matter with you?" his traveling acquaintances asked. He could honestly answer, "I know no more than you do."

When night came he gave his comfortable and beautiful bedroom another trial. The result of the second experiment was a repetition of the result of the first. Again he felt the all pervading sense of depression and discomfort. Again he passed a sleepless night. And once more when he tried to eat his breakfast his appetite completely failed him.

This personal experience of the new hotel was too extraordinary to be passed over in silence. Henry mentioned it to his friends in the public room, in the hearing of the manager. The manager, naturally zealous in defense of the hotel, was a little hurt at the implied reflection cast on Number Fourteen. He invited the travelers present to judge for themselves whether Mr. Westwick's bedroom was to blame for Mr. Westwick's sleepless night; and he especially appealed to a gray headed gentleman, a guest at the breakfast table of an English traveler, to take the lead in the investigation. "This is Doctor Bruno, our first physician in Venice," he explained. "I appeal to him to say if there are any unhealthy influences in Mr. Westwick's room."

Introduced to Number Fourteen, the doctor looked round him with a certain appearance of interest which was noticed by every one present. "The last time I was in this room," he said, "was on a melancholy occasion. It was before the palace was changed into an hotel. I was in professional attendance on an English nobleman who died here." One of the persons present inquired the name of the nobleman. Dr. Bruno answered—without the slightest suspicion that he was speaking before a brother of the dead man—"Lord Montbarry."

Henry quietly left the room, without saying a word to anybody.

He was not, in any sense of the term, a superstitious man. But he felt, nevertheless, an insurmountable reluctance to remaining in the hotel. He decided on leaving Venice. To ask for another room would be, as he could plainly see, an offense in the eyes of the manager. To remove to another hotel would be to openly abandon an establishment in the success of which he had a pecuniary interest. Leaving a note for Arthur Barville, on his arrival in Venice, in which he mentioned that he had gone to look at the Italian lakes, and that a line addressed to his hotel at Milan would bring him back again, he took the afternoon train to Padua—and dined with his usual appetite, and slept as well as ever that night.

The next day a gentleman and his wife, returning to England, by way of Venice, arrived at the hotel and occupied Number Fourteen.

Still mindful of the slur that had been cast on one of his best bed chambers, the manager took occasion to ask the travelers the next morning how they liked their room. They left him to judge for himself how well they were satisfied, by remaining a day longer in Venice than they had originally planned to do, solely for the purpose of enjoying the excellent accommodation offered to them by the new hotel. "We have met with nothing like it in Italy," they said; "you may rely on our recommending you to all our friends."

On the day when Number Fourteen was again vacant an English lady, traveling alone with her maid, arrived at the hotel, saw the room, and at once engaged it.

The lady was Mrs. Norbury. She had left Francis Westwick at Milan, occupied in negotiating for the appearance at his theatre of the new dancer at the Scala. Not having heard to the contrary, Mrs. Norbury supposed that Arthur Barville and his wife had arrived at Venice. She was more interested in meeting the young married couple than in waiting the result of the hard bargaining which delayed the engagement of the new dancer; and she volunteered to make her brother's apologies if his theatrical business caused him to be late in keeping his appointment at the honeymoon festival.

Mrs. Norbury's experience of Number Fourteen differed entirely from her brother Henry's experience of the room.

Falling asleep as readily as usual, her repose was disturbed by a succession of frightful dreams; the central figure in every one of them being the figure of her dead brother, the first Lord Montbarry. She saw him starving in a loathsome prison; she saw him pursued by assassins, and dying under their knives; she saw him drowning in immeasurable depths of dark water; she saw him in a bed of fire, burning to death in the flames; she saw him tempted by a shadowy creature to drink, and dying of the poisonous draught. The reiterated horror of these dreams had such an effect on her that she rose with the dawn of day, afraid to trust herself again in bed. In the old times she had been noted in the family as the one member of it who lived on affectionate terms with Montbarry. His other sister and his brothers were constantly quarreling with him. Even his mother owned that her eldest son was, of all her children, the child whom she least liked. Sensible and resolute woman as she was, Mrs. Norbury shuddered with terror as she sat at the window of her room watching the sunrise and thinking of her dreams.

She made the first excuse that occurred to her when her maid came in at the usual hour and noticed how ill she looked. The woman was of so superstitious a temperament that it would have been in the last degree indiscreet to trust her with the truth. Mrs. Norbury merely remarked that she had not found the bed quite to her liking on account of the large size of it. She was accustomed at home, as her maid knew, to sleep in a small bed. Informed of this objection later in the day, the manager regretted that he could only offer the lady the choice of one other bedchamber, numbered Thirty-eight, and situated immediately over the bedchamber which she desired to leave. Mrs. Norbury accepted the proposed change of quarters. She was now about to pass her second night in the room occupied in the old days of the palace by Baron Rivar.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare. If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

d137tf J. STEVENSON.

THE MAYORALTY FOR 1888.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of a large number of ratepayers, who have promised me their support, I am before you as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1888. I ask you to give me your support, therefor, on the following platform:—

ECONOMY!
TEMPERANCE!
MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

If length of public service is deserving of recognition I may modestly claim your consideration. During the eighteen or twenty years which I have sat at your council board I have endeavored to faithfully advance the best interests of the town. I have spared neither time nor work to consistently carry out my pledges to my supporters and have worked to the best of my ability for the general good. If I have erred I have done so unknowingly.

I offer myself as—in particular—the work ingman's candidate. I hope to receive the solid workingmen's support. I consider I am fairly entitled to it. I am a working man myself and if elected—will endeavour to repay the confidence by advancing their interests in every honest way.

I may say that in taking the field I am not actuated by any feeling of rivalry with the present occupant of the Mayor's chair, but I feel that with the many demands on his time and services that the position is not sought for. Should I prove correct in my inference, you cannot fairly overlook the claim that years of service has on your consideration.

I recognize thoroughly what the necessities of the town demand. Thorough economy in all departments of municipal expenditure must be the rule. A liberal policy to encourage the growth and establishment of new and existing industries. In this regard I am opposed to any money bonus being granted, but in favor of exemption from taxes and possibly free sites under proper restrictions. I shall—if elected—give particular attention to matters as outlined above.

Possibly one of the most prominent questions that will come before the ratepayers next year will be in connection with the enforcement of the Scott Act. I will maintain in this regard the position relative to temperance which I have held for the last 25 years. So long as the Scott Act remains in force I will to the extent of my ability and office, see that the law is strictly enforced, and that too through the proper officers of the town.

Such, gentlemen, are the grounds on which I ask your support. I may not have the opportunity of personally soliciting your favor, but venture to hope that the statement of my views will meet your approval.

Trusting that I may have your hearty support on the basis of

ECONOMY!
TEMPERANCE!
MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

I am, gentlemen,

Yours faithfully,

d136-s49 A. RUTHERFORD.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE SOUTH WARD,

of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg to offer myself as a candidate for election as Councillor, to represent Ward No. 1, for the ensuing year.

Should you do me the favor to place me in that important position, I will endeavour to faithfully watch after the best interests of the ward and town generally.

I am, gentlemen,

Yours respectfully,

d137 H. C. WINCH.

FOR WARD NO. 1.

To the Electors of Ward No. 1.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—In accordance with the expressed wish of many influential citizens in your ward I have the honor of announcing my intention to stand as a candidate for Councillor at the forthcoming Municipal Elections.

My platform is Justice, Temperance, and Economy, and will if elected do all that is in the power of one man to do for the people who entrust their work to me.

Should a personal canvass be impossible, I trust the people will do all in their power to further it.

Very respectfully,

20d137 BANNELL SAWYER.

FRENCH CABINET-MAKING.

M. FALLIERES CONSENTS TO TRY HIS HAND AT IT.

His Ministry Will Include, it is Said, Several Members of the Late Government, Including Rouvier, Flourens and Gen. Ferron.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—M. Gobler informed President Carnot that owing to the refusal of several statesmen to join him, he was unable to form a Cabinet. The President therefore made another appeal to M. Fallieres to undertake the task.

It is definitely known that Fallieres will attempt to form a Cabinet. The report is confirmed that his ministry will include several members of the late Government, including Rouvier, Flourens and Gen. Ferron. The Radical groups will meet soon to discuss the attitude to be taken by the party toward the Fallieres Cabinet.

The Paris states that the first act of the new ministry will be the adoption of repressive measures against the Paris Municipal Council. With this object in view a bill will be introduced to modify the mode in which members of the council are elected and also to grant the Government power to dissolve the council.

THE CROWN PRINCE'S CASE.

The Doctors Have Not Changed Their Opinions Regarding It.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—It is stated on what is said to be reliable authority that the doctors attending the German Crown Prince have not changed their opinions as regards his case and that the optimist views recently taken are baseless.

A Letter From the Prince.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Councellor Hentzpeter, formerly tutor of Prince William, has published the following letter received by him from the Crown Prince written on Dec. 4: "I am able to inform you that the treatment which the physicians prescribed after consulting together has entirely removed the inflammation and caused the dangerous symptoms to subside. Meanwhile my bodily health has been excellent. I have never lost strength. My appetite is good and my general appearance is that of perfect health. I purposely communicate these details to you because it appears to me, beyond a doubt, that exaggerated accounts have been circulated of the appearance of a fresh growth of unfavorable character. God will determine the course which the disease shall take. The treatment is entrusted to most eminent experts, who in spite of all attacks levelled against them, possess my full confidence. I am in no way disheartened and I hope one day to be able, though perhaps only after a long period of careful treatment, once more to devote my power to the service of the Fatherland."

MAYOR SULLIVAN IN TULLAMORE.

He Will be Permitted to See His Friends, but Must Issue No Letters.

DUBLIN, Dec. 9.—Lord Mayor Sullivan, who is a prisoner in Tullamore Jail, has been notified that he will be allowed to receive visitors for two hours daily without the presence of a warden, provided he promises that no documents shall pass between himself and the visitors. Mr. Sullivan says he will accept the concession if it does not emanate from Mr. Balfour.

The Scottish Delegates Report.

GLASGOW, Dec. 9.—The delegates of the Scotch Home Rule Union who have been making a tour of Ireland have returned and report that the Irish people are eager for peace, that their demands are moderate, and that the National League is the chief agency for the maintenance of law and order. They say they are convinced that the Irish are Home Rulers and not separatists. No one in Ireland fears religious persecution. The delegates declare that the measures taken by the present Irish Government are ineffective and irritate the mass of the Irish nation.

The Failure of R. W. Cleghorn of London.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—This afternoon a meeting of the creditors of the firm of R. W. Cleghorn & Co., wholesale and retail fruiterers, was held, at which it was announced that the liabilities of the firm were not as small as at first expected, as they would exceed $6000 and the assets would not reach $1000. Inspectors were appointed to act with R. K. Cowan, the assignee, to wind up the business.

A Bishop Appointed.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—A cablegram from Rome announces that Rev. Thos. McGovern, rector of St. Joseph's Church, Danville, Pa., has been appointed to the See of Harrisburg, to succeed the late Bishop Shanahan.

WHAT THE FISHERS WANT,

THE GLOUCESTER MEN ADOPT A FEW RESOLUTIONS.

They Want the Same Freedom Granted in Canadian Ports for Their Vessels as is Accorded to Canadian Vessels in Their Waters.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 9.—A meeting of the American Fishery Union was held to-day and all the representative fishing owners were present. The meeting was called to consider the best course to adopt in the interest of the fisheries. Resolutions were adopted as follows:

Resolved, That in common with other producing industries of the country, we ask of the general Government neither subsidy nor bounty, but simple, equal protection.

Resolved, That we have neither asked nor sought the intervention of any commission, mixed or otherwise, to define our rights on the high seas or in foreign ports, but have appealed to our own Government to maintain the integrity of the treaties and legislation under which our business and rights as American citizens are affected.

Resolved, That we neither have nor desire to use Canada waters for piratical fishing, but simply ask that our commercial rights therein shall be defined by our own Government, and when defined maintained.

Resolved, That the American ocean fisheries are not dependent on any favor to be granted by Canada, but on the contrary the natural resources of our own country, and the high seas afford everything necessary for the prosecution of our business.

Resolved, That we will cheerfully conform to whatever construction our own Government shall place upon existing treaties and legislation, and desire no new treaty that dictates our privileges.

Resolved, That the freedom of our ports and markets afforded Canadian vessels is in marked contrast with that afforded American vessels in Canadian ports, when sailing under papers issued by the United States Government, conferring all commercial rights and privileges upon them, and that a refusal on the part of Canada to recognize such papers bearing the seal of the United States is an act of non-intercourse.

TO BE PUT ON WAR FOOTING.

Russia to Fully Equip Four More Army Corps—The Matter of the Forged Bismarck Letters.

CRACOW, Dec. 9.—Orders have been issued to place the fifth, seventh, eighth and eleventh Russian army corps on a war footing. The Czar on Tuesday received the commanders of these corps. Generals Schachoffeki, Aller, Daneville and Polubotarinof, all of whom were afterwards present at a military council.

Reports of Military Movements Inexact.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—It is semi-officially announced that the reports in the Austrian and German papers regarding the movements of Russian troops are inexact. Since the Czar's return from Copenhagen no order has been given for the reinforcement of the troops on the Galician frontier. The recent movement of troops were made in compliance with an order issued over a year ago including the transfer of the Orenburg division of cavalry, which was recently effected.

The Military Council at Vienna.

VIENNA, Dec. 9.—A semi-official denial is given to the statement that the German Government had recommended that Austria adopt precautionary military measures. The meeting of the Military Council was entirely due to the spontaneous resolutions of the Austrian authorities. The Russian movements, especially the pushing forward of troops by echelons toward the Austrian frontier, continues to excite anxiety in military circles here. The decision of the council yesterday to abstain from further military measures was taken because the Austrian frontier forces are already equal to those of Russia.

The Forged Letters.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The Cologne Gazette says Russia's hesitation justifies the supposition that the publication of the forged letters sent to the Czar concerning the relations between Germany and Russia would lead to the identification and compromise of important personages. "We must assume," says the paper "that personages sheltered by sex or position co-operated to place the forgeries in the Czar's hands. Such instruments could be found in French ladies married into noble Russian families. Besides these there are Russian officials and ex-diplomats and Jesuit and Polish elements who have actively worked to produce a breach between Russia and Germany."

German Imposts on Cereals.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—In the Reichstag to-day the Cereal Committee accepted the proposal of Herr Windthorst that the increase of duty shall not apply to cereals imported prior to March 31, 1888, if the purchase of contracts for such imports were concluded previous to November, 1887.

Safe in Her Father's House.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—Mrs. W. H. Middleton, whose sudden departure from Ottawa caused such a scandal a short time ago, returned to-day. She was met at the station by her solicitor, Mr. J. A. Gemmil, and driven to her father's house. Mr. Gemmil declined to be interviewed with reference to the lady's return.

A MAGISTRATE IN TROUBLE.

An Investigation Into the Charges Against Mr. Partridge of Barrie.

BARRIE, Dec. 9.—The investigation of charges against John Thomas Partridge, Police Magistrate, for malfeasance in office, overcharges in costs and oppression and partiality, was commenced at 1 o'clock yesterday in the Court House before John Winchester, Inspector of Public Offices. The court room was crowded with witnesses and spectators.

All the hotelkeepers in the county, and there were about a hundred of them who had been before the Magistrate, were subpœnaed as witnesses. Mr. Bain, of Messrs. Bain & Laidlaw of Toronto, and Messrs. Dickinson and McWatt of Barrie, pressed the charges, and Mr. C. W. Plaxton, Barrie, appeared for Mr. Partridge.

After the commission had been read the first witness, Robt. Rathbone, the ex-whisky detective, who preferred the charges against the Magistrate, was put in the box and occupied it for over seven hours, barring once when he went out to see a man. He swore that he was employed by Mr. Partridge's brother for two months, on the understanding that the Police Magistrate should have his services when required. On Sept. 17 he left Wm. Partridge's services. He met the P. M. in Barrie, who asked him to work Inspector Clarke's district, then Dinwoodie's and Morrow's, all sellers to be pulled together. Mr. Partridge promised $5 for every conviction, and so see it paid. He went to Beeton with the P.M., who told Clarke to give a list of the hotels. Leaving Clarke's house the P. M. gave him $10. He worked for Clarke a week and then went back to Barrie and met the P. M. at Morrow's. He had got twenty-three convictions. He applied to the P. M. for funds and received $10 through Morrow. He got a list from Morrow and went to Stayner, and in a few days came back to Barrie. He drove to Partridge's house and asked for more money. He got $10. The P. M. said if he ever "gave him away" he (the P. M.) was a ruined man. Witness said there was no fear of that. He went back to Stayner and communicated with the P. M. in writing to make an appointment in Barrie and deliver a collection of forty bottles of whisky. He met him at Morrow's. Mr. Partridge would not pay any more money. He said Mr. Gray, President of the Scott Act Association, would pay. Witness went to Gray's, where the P.M. handed $5 to Gray to give to Alex. Johnson, alias Sutherland. He gave them six bottles labelled whisky, five contained cold tea.

Alex. Johnson gave similar evidence. The only money he received was $5. The cross-examination elicited the fact that Rathbone was an accomplished liar and Commissioner Winchester said no reliance could be placed on the evidence of either of these men.

Mr. Gray, President of the Simcoe Temperance Alliance, admitted having paid Johnson $5 received from Partridge. He swore that it was given in charity on Rathbone's representations.

Inspector Morrow swore that the money paid by him to Rathbone was a loan from Partridge and had been repaid to him.

This closed the case on the first charge. The inquiry into the overcharges came next, but nothing was established, though overcharges in some instances seemed apparent. The charges of oppression and partiality were not concluded when the commission rose.

Emigrants From Cholera Districts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The steamer Elysia has arrived at New Orleans with 614 immigrants from the cholera infected districts of Italy. There is an English surgeon on board. The vessel has a clean bill of health, and there were no cases of sickness on the voyage. She was detained three days at quarantine. Cholera has twice been introduced into this country via New Orleans at this season of the year.

A Hamiltonian Killed.

BUFFALO, Dec. 9.—A man named William Clark, a resident of Hamilton, Ont., while riding on an east bound freight on the Nickel Plate road, fell between the cars when near Angola Station, about 5 o'clock this morning. Both legs were cut off and his injuries proved fatal. He lived about two hours. His remains are in the care of friends at the Nickel Plate Depot at Angola.

For the Benefit of the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—The Anarchists have decided to give five festivals at five different halls for the benefit of the families of the dead or imprisoned Anarchists. One will be held on Saturday, two on Sunday, and two on Tuesday. The burial of the executed Anarchists will take place at Waldheim on Christmas Day.

Killed in Mistake for a Bear.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—A young man named Jacob Balsen, whose father resides about nine miles from Aylmer, P.Q., was accidentally shot in a Michigan lumber camp on Saturday, and his remains reached here to-day. It appears he was starting to work before it was clear daylight and a huntsman taking him for a bear fired and shot him through the head, killing him at once.

He Robbed Poor Children.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Nick Virreto, an Italian blackguard, was to-day sentenced to eighteen years' imprisonment in Sing Sing for having thrice snatched money out of children's hands in the streets.

CONFERENCE OF COMMITTEES.

Work Progressing Well in Y. M. C. A. Affairs.

A meeting of the chairman members of the committees was held in the Y. M. C. A. parlor on Thursday evening. There were about 25 present.

Mr. Geo. M. Roger, President, occupied the chair, and after the usual opening exercises explained that the meeting had been called for the purpose of getting the committees together that they might learn what was being done and confer concerning the work in the future.

Mr. Thos. Tebb then read the report of the Reception Committee, whose special duties were to be on duty at the rooms each evening and assist the Secretary in welcoming strangers and acting as sort of host for the evening. This committee had met twice since the annual meeting, on October 23rd and Nov. 28th, thirteen members were serving, one of whom was on duty at the room seach evening. The average attendance at the rooms in the evenings during October was 18, and for Dec. 22.

A neat card had been issued giving information concerning the attractions of the reading room and parlor, for the use of this committe among young men not particularly acquainted with our work.

Mr. W. Dee had presented the Association with four game tables for the parlor, which would undoubtedly prove of great service. The report of the Invitation Committee read by Mr. Dee showed that there were 14 members acting.

Their particular work had been inviting young men to the religious services of the Association and making known the advantages of membership. Four members had gone on to the streets each Saturday night and Sunday evenings distributing cards of invitation.

Mr. Dee suggested that each member of the Association should consider himself an ex-officio member of this committee and do his best to acquaint the young fellows of the town with the character of our work. He also reported for the Committee on Athletic Sports. A snow shoe club had been organized with a membership of fourteen, and with application for entrance from others, the club turning out every Tuesday night.

After the singing of a hymn Mr. E. R. Wood, Chairman of the Finance Committee, presented their report.

It showed that they had started the year with a deficit of $355.46. Since the anniversary a new finance committee had been formed who had met regularly and had succeeded in meeting the current expenses as they became due up to Dec. 1st and had reduced the liabilities of last year from $355.46 to $282.46.

The Finance Committee felt very grateful for the set of new books that had been opened for the Association, and everything now was in good business shape.

The Finance Committee felt very grateful for the success attained thus far and hoped, with the support of the members and townspeople, to meet the current expenses as they became due, besides wiping off the $282.46 indebtedness.

A vote of thanks was tendered this committee for the way they had handled the Association finances.

Mr. Richardson read the report of the Devotional Committee, which showed a satisfactory increase in the attendance and interest at all the religious meetings. Two new meetings had been instituted, A Workers' Training Class and a Young Men's Bible Class.

The report of the Lecture Committee show a good programme of lectures, etc., for the season. Dr. Harrison had delivered a Health Talk on Dec. 1st which was highly appreciated, and Mr. Bengough was to appear in the Opera House Thursday evening, Dec. 15th, to whose "Local Hits," etc., we were all looking ahead to with considerable pleasure.

After the reports a 15 minutes paper on "Personal Bible Study," was read by Mr. Wm. H. Stevens. A hearty conversation on this topic ensued at its close, in which questions were asked and suggestion made.

It was decided to hold meetings of a similar character bi-monthly.

ENLARGEMENTS.

The Suite of Rooms Occupied by Otonabee Lodge to Be Increased.

The committee appointed by Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F., to make arrangements for increasing the size of the suite of rooms occupied by the lodge did their duty in such a way as will not admit of any objection.

By the efforts of the members of the committee the premises have been made at once cosy and extensive. A fine dining room has been added, which will be brought into service at the visits of distinguished brethren and during the progress of entertainments which Otonabee Lodge always manage so well. The dining room is beautifully decorated, the walls being tinted and dadoed in a manner very pleasing to the eye. On the walls hang large sized photographs (done by Sproule the photographer) of distinguished men in the order in town. Those whose likenesses beam down from the gilt frames are Mayor Stevenson, P.G.; Dr. Bell, Grand Warden; G. B. Sproule, P. G.; J. R. Stratton, D. D. G. M., and D. D. Henderson, P.G. The Past Grands are all, of course, of Otonabee Lodge. Across the hall covered with matting, there is a spacious room with walls elegantly dadoed and tinted which is at present used as a waiting room. It will, however, be turned into a library. A case containing entertaing literary works and books of reference will be placed in it for the pleasure and profit of the members of the Lodge. Back from this waiting room, and opposite from the rear door of the dining room the culinery department is situated. There is an anteroom in which the plates, cups and saucers, and other necessary table ware is kept. Then there is a kitchen with a fine cooking stove, pans and kettles and pots and, and—and even a poker. You see the Oddfellows don't have their wives as members of the Lodge, so they hesitate not in giving the kitchen its full complement of furniture. Its hard to say what the Oddfellows deserve when they sit in secret conclave, trot out the mysterious goat and perpetrate all sorts of dire things on the new members. but certainly on Friday night their conduct was exceptionally good, and their wives could [illegible] of them at the way they entertained their guests.

These additions to the handsomely furnished lodge room make the premises among the finest possessed by the Order in Canada. The rooms now occupying nearly the whole surface of the third flat of the "Clinton" block. The conspicuous letters, I.O.O.F., on the windows fronting on both George and Hunter streets show the size of the place.

It is evidently the intention to make this block a centre for Oddfellows, for the new Encampment is going to have a handsome suit of rooms fitted up in the flat above.

DYNAMITE AT NORWOOD

BURGLARS BLOW THE POST OFFICE SAFE TO PIECES

And Make off with $11,000 Booty—They Escape by Means of a Fast Horse and Rig, But are Seen Before They Depart.

The little town of Norwood was astir with great excitement before the sun rose this morning. The post office had been entered during the dark hours and the burglars had made away with the money found there.

The burglary occurred at about half past three o'clock. Mr. Minaker, the undertaker, lives next door to the post office. At the hour mentioned Mrs. Minaker was startled at hearing a loud report, and both she and her husband hastened to see what caused it. Mr. Minaker went out the back way and Mrs. Minaker went to the front door. Mr. Minaker was not long in finding out that something was wrong in the post office. The smell of burning cloth coupled with the fact that two shoddy looking characters were in a rig up street driving away tended to confirme his suspicions. As they drove off a revolver was fired in the air, apparently for the purpose of scaring pursuers, should there be any.

Mr. Maniker went into the post office and found it filling with smoke. The burglars had wrapped the safe around with some webs of cotton and these were burning. He quickly got the cloth off the safe and conveyed it outside. He found that the safe door had been blown and that the explosion had considerably damaged other portions of it. It is said that dynamite was the explosive used, but that is not definitely agcertained.

Mr. J. B. Pearce, the Post-Master, and Mr. W. H. Mullins, the clerk, were called and apprized of what had occurred. Before long the post office was besieged with a crowd to find out what was the extent of the damage and loss. It was given out that the sum taken was $11,000, in papers and cash.

Mr. Pearce has telegraphed to the Post-Master-General for detectives to ferret out the guilty parties.

WHAT OUR CORRESPONDENT SAYS.

NORWOOD, Dec. 10.—A most daring burglary was accomplished here this morning. Mr. J. B. Pearce's store, and post office adjoining, was entered and safe blown open, blowing out the plate glass in whole front of the building. Explosion was heard and parties were seen running off carrying away money and notes amounting to over $10,000. The registered letters were stolen.

By Telegraph to the Review.

NORWOOD, Dec. 10.—The loss by the burglary last night was cash and stamps to the value of $200 and notes and securities amounting to over ten thousand dollars.

THE NORTHERN DIVISION.

Canoeists Arranging for Next Year's Meet.

Eighteen gentlemen sat about on the furniture in the comfortable room of Mr. J. Carlon—over the express office—on Friday night. This select eighteen had come together to talk over the prospective meet next summer, of the Northern Division of the A.C.A. Strictly speaking the meeting should have been confined to those who are of the executive committee. However, the gentlemen of that committee are not exclusive, and it was agreed that all present were at liberty to join in the discussion, a privilege promptly availed of. Delegates had arrived early in the evening from the Toronto (Ubiques), Orillia and Lindsay Clubs and when business was taken up the roll included Messrs. Murphy and McKinnon, Orillia C.C.; H. McKendrick, Ubique C.C., Toronto; Macgachen, Britton, Hopkins, Edwards and Dobbin, Lindsay C. C., and Messrs. H. C. Rogers, J. Z. Rogers, Edwards, Collins, G. M. Roger, Hatton, Toker, Miller and Dr. Douglas of the local clubs.

Mr. Macgachen, Vice-Commodore of the Northern Division, occupied the chair. The minutes of the previous meetings were read by Mr. J. Britton, Purser of Northern Division.

Mr. H. C. Rogers read a satisfactory report, giving in detail particulars referring to the organizing of the Northern Division, and incidents of the meet held last summer at Stoney Lake. The total receipts for the year were $320.67, while the expenditure reached $295.90, leaving a balance on hand of $24.57. The membership of the division stands at 137 to date. The accounts have been audited by a couple of financiers of the party and certified as correct.

The Purser read communications from the Secretary of the A.C.A. and members of the divison who were unable to attend. Also from the Purser of the Orillia Club enclosing fees for sixteen members of that club who desire to join the Norther Division, (applause from the meeting).

The question of defining the geographical limits of the division was discussed with the understanding arrived at that the territory embraced Ontario as far east as Ottawa, though it was assumed that the inclination of members would be to belong to the division nearest at hand. The Ottawa Club will be urged to join the Northern Division, and to extend an invitation to the nearest American clubs.

Referring to the important question of a site for the 1888 meet, Vice-Commordore Macgachen gave details of a visit paid by the committee to the vicinity of Lake Couchiching, at Orillia. He commended the locality as very suitable.

Mr. Murphy, O.C.C., laid before the meeting a map showing the site of proposed camp on Horse Island, Couchiching Lake, and said he thought the site a favorable one. Mr. McKinnon said they were anxious to have the meet near their town and the people of Orillia would exert themselves in every reasonable way to secure the camp. He was owner of the island proposed to be occupied and would be prepared to make some improvements, erect wharfs and do other things. The steamer owned by himself would be at the disposal of the Association and no doubt prove a convenience. He suggested that $50 would cover the expenses for one of the islands, but the sum stated could be lessened.

Some general discussion ensued in a conversational way, after which Mr. McKinnon generously offered to place the island at the disposal of the Association free of expense. By a vote of the committee the offer was recommended to the committee for acceptance, matters of detail being left in the hands of the executive committee. A resolution of thanks was then formally passed.

With regard to the date of meet it was understood that the time would fall, say about two weeks prior to the general meet at Lake George. Mr. E. R. Edwards communicated to the meeting that Mr. W. Tredwim, of the R.C.C., England, had promised to visit Canada next summer and spend some time at the meet of the Northern Division. By resolution the date was then fixed for from July 25th to Aug. 6th, 1888.

At the close of the general meeting the executive committee met and went over some details in a business way, then all repaired to Welsh's restaurant, where some refreshments was pleasantly disposed of.

Allen's Lung Balsam is warranted to give the most distressing Co

THE FIFTH YEAR.

Since the Otonabee Lodge Received new Life—An old Member's Reminicence.

The cheery light from the gasaliers shone down on a merry, talkative and handsome company of people at eight o'clock on Friday night in the Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F., rooms. Everybody was quite at home. The ushers assigned seats to people who no doubt were unconscious of the dignity they were interested with (in the eyes of Oddfellows). But the large, richly upholstered seats of honor were comfortable and what more could anybody want, who was fortunate enough to get one for the evening. The body of the hall was filled with well filled seats and the easy, crimson covered settees along the sides were also well patronized.

BRO. MOWRY, N.G., of the Lodge, from the platform at the end of the hall, called the attention of the people at a few minutes after eight, to the fact that they were met together to-night to celebrate the 5th anniversary of the resuscitation of Otonabee Lodge No. 13. He hoped all would enjoy themselves and that they would not go away without inspecting the additions made to the hall. He called on an old member to address the meetin-

Mr. WM. CLUXTON was received with applause. He remarked that there was some merit in being old, after all, as well as in being young or middle aged. If he were not the oldest Oddfellow in town, and he believed the oldest in Ontario, he might not have been called on to speak to them. By virtue of his lenghtened connection with the lodge he could claim the right of referring to its early history. He made an amusing allusion to the boistrous animal which they kept in the Lodge at its organization, but stated, much to the relief of his audience, that he succeeded, when he passed through the ordeal, in keeping it in moderate subjection. (Laughter). He recounted incidents in connection with the establishment of the Lodge,—its immediate progress, the excellent concerts held under its auspices, its purchase of a commdious hall, the promient men who were its members, and so forth. "But it progressed to fast," remarked the speaker, "and the horse that travels fast must the sooner come to a standstill." It was so with Lodge No. 13. It became dorment and was not revived till five years ago. Its steady growth in membership they were aware of. It commenced with a membership of 5 and had now 134. They went slow. Though many improvements had been made in their rooms they had still a good balance in the bank. (Applause.)

The musical programme opened with a song, "On the Rolling Wave," by Mr. T. Dunn, sung in excellent voice and encored Miss Aggie McDonald, of Montreal, gave an admirable pianoforte solo, "Semiramis de Rosetni." Mr. R. M. Roy, assisted by Mr. John Miller, gave experiments in "mystery," introducing the celebrated hat trick, and Mr. Miller gave experiments in mind reading. During an intermission refreshments were served in an adjoining room and the audience viewed the splendid rooms of the Lodge. The second part opened with a vocal duet, "Nocturne," by Misses. Vair and Cottingham (Mrs J. H. Roper accompaniste) which was warmly eucored. An instrumental duet, "Wedding March," by Miss F. Stevenson and Miss M. Beck was excellently executed. Mr. R. M. Roy introduced various mysterious performances, which delighted the audience, and showed the famous "Rhodian mystery," or floating head. A vocal quartette, by the Peterborough Harmony Club, was the last and one of the best numbers, the club being recalled. The chairman thanked the audience for their attendance, and the very successful entertainment closed with the National Anthem.

A number remained and enjoyed themselves further for some hours. The celebration of the anniversary was a very fitting one and was admirably carried out, the large audience being entertained in an enjoyable manner.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

At the regular meeting of Ladies' Aid Society of the George Street Methodist Church held on Tuesday last the following resolutions were unamiously adopted.—

RESOLVED—That wheras on account of ill health, Mrs. Thomas Bradburn has tendered her resignation as President of our Society, we feel that we cannot accept it without expressing our deep sorrow for the reason which makes it necessary for her to sever her connection with us. Her unvarying kindness and courtesy towards us during the three years of her Presidency, have endeared her to every member; and our earnest hope is that she may be speedily restored to health and so be soon again able to resume her work amongst us. Our united prayer for her is, "That the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep her heart and mind through Christ Jesus our Lord."

RESOLVED.—That this Society deeply regrets the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, especially at this time when we were looking forward to a busy year of usefulness under their wise direction. We have profited by the encouragement and aid they have given us during their short stay amongst us; and hope that we may be enabled to successfully carry out the work undertaken by their advice and assistance. We would take this opportunity of expressing our thorough appreciation of the interest they have taken in our Society; and our earnest wish and prayer is that they may be long spared for the Master's service, and each at last receive the "Well done, good and faithful servant."

RESOLVED,—that the deepest sympathy of the association is tendered to our sisters, the Mesdames Wilson, who, during the past week have suffered such keen bereavement in the loss of son and husband. We earnestly pray that He who has permitted this mysterious providence, will be near to comfort when earthly consolations fail;—while clouds of sorrow darken their earthly pathway, and lowing hearts lie sore, wounded by this heavy stroke, that upon the soul life, unseen by mortal eyes, the "Son of Righteousness" shall arise afresh, "with healing in his wings."

Messrs. Hawley Bros., tea merchants, have left their stand on Hunter street and have taken a fine, commodious store on George street, next door north of Salisbury Bros' book store. Hawley Bros. have built up a good tea trade since opening out here, principally on account of the free gifts of glassware, crockery, etc., which is given with the tea. This feature in their trade is a drawing card.

A Very Satisfactory Method.

The unsampled success gained by the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, is no doubt directly due to the activity and zeal of its agents, and to the prompt and satisfactory settlement of claims. An example of this very gratifying feature is shown in the card of thanks inserted in another column by Mrs. And. Wilson and Mrs. J. E. Wilson, wife and mother of the late Mr. A. Wilson, referring to the payment of claim for insurance effected in the company above mentioned. It will strike the average person that this is something like what life insurance should be. No delay of sixty or ninety days in which to adjust claim, as is too often the case with some companies. It is worthy of note that when the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company had just organized one of the first resolutions placed on the books by the board of directors was that every claim should be paid immediatly on proof of death. We understand that the Company has already written about $250,000. Wilson & Morrison, Manager's for Eastern Ontario, are certainly deserving in the interests of the company of a large patronage.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Boys' Meeting continues to grow in interest, 72 being present last evening. Next Friday Mr. Frank Dobbin will tell the boys how they run so many railway trains without running one into the other.

The Young Men's meeting is held in the parlor for one hour every Saturday evening. The subject for this evening is "Temptation no excuse for Sinning."

The Sunday afternoon meeting at 3.45, will hereafter take the form of a Young Men's Bible Class, and will be led by the Secretary. To-morrow afternoon a series of lessons on the Life and character of Daniel will be commenced, the subject being "The Captives in Babylon."

The Song Service, Sunday evening, at 8.30, will be held as usual to-morrow.

Strangers in town are cordially invited to attend any of the these meetings. Rooms corner George and Brock streets, over Post office.

PROFESSOR SMITH AT BRIGHTON.

The Commercial Union Meeting There Was Pretty Much of a Fizzle.

BRIGHTON, Dec. 9.—The Commercial Union meeting held here this afternoon was not calculated to gladden the hearts of the originators of the pet scheme. For some time past it was announced by flaming placards, conspicuous on almost every concession line within ten miles of the village, that a monster meeting in furtherance of the doctrine of Commercial Union, to be addressed by Prof. Goldwin Smith, Dr. Platt and other notables in the grand army of political annexationists, would be held this afternoon in the Town Hall. About 300 people assembled at the appointed hour, including a number of ladies.

The ball was started, in the absence of any of the so-called leaders of the movement, by Mr. Jacob Huyck, a farmer, who declared that if Commercial Union was ever adopted the village of Brighton would soon become a barley field. (Laughter and cheers.)

Prof. Goldwin Smith entered at this stage and was called upon to elucidate the Butterworth Union fad. He commenced by apologizing for the absence of Dr. Platt, who was unavoidably absent owing to a professional call. The learned Professor next gave the ladies some soft soap, claiming that they were largely favorable to Commercial Union and consequently were his friends. Proceeding he said Commercial Union meant unrestricted reciprocity with the United States in all trade relation and the settlement of all international troubles between the Republic and the Dominion of Canada. He denied that it was a party question or that he was a party man, although he had voted for the N. P. He contended that Commercial Union was but the outgrowth of the N. P. and was a balm for all the ills at present afflicting the agricultural community. The mineral wealth and the illimitable territory of Canada were dwelt upon at some length and an unfavorable contrast drawn between the financial condition of the United States and Canada. Mr. Butterworth was lauded as a friend of Canada and the Mother Country whose unselfish patriotism alone prompted him to champion the cause of the Canadian farmers. The speaker concluded an address of one hour and a quarter by urging his hearers to adopt Commercial Union as the only salvation for existing ills wrought by partisan politicians.

The speech was simply a rehash of previous orations and failed to create the slightest enthusiasm.

Mr. Caleb Mallory, brother of the unseated candidate for East Northumberland, said his brother was pledged to Commercial Union and upon that plank he was prepared to stand or fall.

A resolution was offered to the meeting in favor of Commercial Union, when half of the audience rose and left the hall.

Mr. Smith was met at the train on his arrival here by Charles B. Kemp and M. P. Ketchum, two prominent Reformers, and was entertained by gentlemen of a similar political faith during his entire stay here. There is no doubt that the meeting was held in the interest of the Reform candidate. The few friends of Commercial Union here are sadly disappointed over the failure of the meeting.

Brockville Condemns C.U.

From The Kingston News.

The Times says that the decision of the first public meeting before which Commercial Union was discussed in Brockville, was decidedly adverse to the fad. Sensible people, those Brockvillians.

The Manchester Martyrs' Memorial.

DUBLIN, Dec. 9.—A memorial to the Manchester martyrs was unveiled at Limerick tonight, advantage being taken of the funeral of a local member of the league to perform the ceremony. Mr. McInerney presided. The proceedings passed off without interference.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FOURTH PART.

Once more she fell asleep as usual. And once more the frightful dreams of the first night terrified her, following each other in the same succession. This time her nerves, already shaken, were not equal to the renewed torture of terror inflicted on them. She threw on her dressing gown and rushed out of her room in the middle of the night. The porter, alarmed by the banging of the door, met her hurrying headlong down the stairs in search of the first human being she could find to keep her company. Considerably surprised at this last manifestation of the famous "English eccentricity," the man looked at the hotel register and led the lady upstairs again to the room occupied by her maid. The maid was not asleep, and more wonderful still, was not even undressed. She received her mistress quietly. When they were alone, and when Mrs. Norbury had, as a matter of necessity, taken her attendant into her confidence, the woman made a very strange reply.

"I have been asking about the noise at the servants' supper to-night," she said. "The valet of one of the gentlemen staying here has heard that the late Lord Montbarry was the last person who lived in the palace before it was made into a hotel. The room he died in, ma'am, was the room you slept in last night. Your room to-night is the room just above it. I said nothing for fear of frightening you. For my own part, I have passed the night as you see, keeping my light in and reading my Bible. In my opinion, no member of your family can hope to be happy or comfortable in this house."

"What do you mean?"

"Please to let me explain myself, ma'am. When Mr. Henry Westwick was here—I have this from the valet, too—he occupied the room his brother died in—without knowing it—like you. For two nights he never closed his eyes. Without any reason for it—the valet heard him tell the gentlemen in the coffee room—he could not sleep: he felt so low and so wretched in himself. And, what is more, when daytime came, he couldn't even eat while he was under this roof. You may laugh at me, ma'am—but even a servant may draw her own conclusions. It's my conclusion that something happened to my lord, which we none of us know about, when he died in this house. His ghost walks in torment until he can tell it! The living persons related to him are the persons who feel he is near them—the persons who may yet see him in the time to come. Don't, pray don't stay any longer in this dreadful place! I wouldn't stay another night here myself—no, not for anything that could be offered me!"

Mrs. Norbury at once set her servant's mind at ease on this last point.

"I don't think about it as you do," she said, gravely. "But I should like to speak to my brother of what has happened. We will go back to Milan."

Some hours necessarily elapsed before they could leave the hotel by the first train in the forenoon.

In that interval Mrs. Norbury's maid found an opportunity of confidentially informing the valet of what had passed between her mistress and herself. The valet had other friends, to whom he related the circumstances in his turn. In due course of time the narrative, passing from mouth to mouth, reached the ears of the manager. He instantly saw the credit of the hotel was in danger unless something was done to retrieve the character of the room numbered Fourteen. English travelers, well acquainted with the peerage of their native country, informed him that Henry Westwick and Mrs. Norbury were by no means the only members of the Montbarry family. Curiosity might bring more of them to the hotel after hearing what had happened. The manager's ingenuity easily hit on the obvious means of misleading them in this case. The numbers of all the rooms were enameled in blue on white china plates, screwed to the doors. He ordered a new plate to be prepared, bearing the number "13A," and he kept the room empty, after its tenant for the time being had gone away, until the plate was ready. He then renumbered the room, placing the removed Number Fourteen on the door of his own room (on the second floor) which, not being to let, had not previously been numbered at all. By this device Number Fourteen disappeared at once and forever from the books of the hotel as the number of a bedroom to let.

Having warned the servants to beware of gossiping with travelers on the subject of the changed numbers, under penalty of being dismissed, the manager composed his mind with the reflection that he had done his duty to his employers. "Now," he thought to himself, with an excusable sense of triumph, "let the whole family come here, if they like! The hotel is a match for them."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Before the end of the week the manager found himself in relations with "the family" once more. A telegram from Milan announced that Mr. Francis Westwick would arrive in Venice on the next day, and would be obliged if Number Fourteen on the first floor could be reserved for him in the event of its being vacant at the time.

The manager paused to consider before he issued his directions.

The renumbered room had been last let to a French gentleman. It would be occupied on the day of Mr. Francis Westwick's arrival, but it would be empty again on the day after. Would it be well to reserve the room for the special occupation of Mr. Francis and when he had passed the night unsuspiciously and comfortably in "No. 13A," to ask him in the presence of witnesses how he liked his bed chamber? In this case, if the reputation of the room happened to be called in question again, the answer would vindicate it on the evidence of a member of the very family which had first given Number Fourteen a bad name. After a little reflection the manager decided on trying the experiment, and directed that "13A" should be reserved accordingly.

On the next day Francis Westwick arrived in excellent spirits.

He had signed agreements with the most popular dancer in Italy; he had transferred the charge of Mrs. Norbury to his brother Henry, who had joined him in Milan, and he was now at full liberty to amuse himself by testing in every possible way the extraordinary influence exercised over his relatives by the new hotel. When his brother and sister first told him what their experience had been, he instantly declared that he would go to Venice in the interest of his theatre. The circumstances related to him contained valuable hints for a ghost drama. The title occurred to him in the railway: "The Haunted Hotel." Post that in red letters six feet high, on a black ground, all over London, and trust the excitable public to crowd into the theatre!

Received with the politest attention by the manager, Francis met with a disappointment on entering the hotel. "Some mistake, sir. No such room on the first floor as Number Fourteen. The room bearing that number is on the second floor, and has been occupied by me from the day when the hotel opened. Perhaps you meant No. 13A, on the first floor? It will be at your service to-morrow—a charming room. In the meantime, we will do the best we can for you to-night."

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a "button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa whether arising from teething or otherwise. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare, If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

JULES FERRY SHOT DOWN.

A RADICAL JOURNALIST WOUNDS HIM THREE TIMES.

The Shots All Take Effect, but None of the Wounds Inflicted are Serious—The Occurrence Causes a Heated Quarrel in the Chamber of Deputies.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—An immense sensation was caused in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. As M. Jules Ferry was passing through the round ante-room leading into the "Salle des Pas Perdus," carrying a portfolio under his arm, he was assaulted by a short man with blonde whiskers, who drew a revolver and fired three shots at him. M. Ferry was wounded in the breast, side and thigh. The portfolio dulled the force of the shots, but Ferry fainted and had to be carried into the adjoining offices of the Questure. His assailant was nearly lynched by the excited crowds. He describes himself as a Radical journalist. His name is Aubertin.

Owing to the fact that M. Ferry fainted the report rapidly spread that he had been seriously, if not fatally, wounded. M. Ferry was able to go to a hospital with the support of some friends. To a query of anxious friends about the severity of the wound M. Ferry replied: "It is nothing."

Aubertin has been placed under arrest. It is now said that the assailant's real name is Berckein. He states that he is one of a band of twenty revolutionists. M. Ferry was able to walk from the hospital to his home after his wounds were dressed.

Berckein Aubertin, M. Ferry's assailant, is a native of Rombach, in Moselle. When he made the attack on M. Ferry he was accompanied by an accomplice who was to have shot M. Goblet, but who funked, giving as his reason that his revolver dropped to the floor When Aubertin was searched by the police a paper was found on him which indicated that he and his confederates had drawn lots yesterday to decide who should do the shooting. The paper ends, "Death to intriguers. Our path is marked out to form an intelligent, disinterested and patriotic ministry. So be it."

In consequence of the attempt upon the life of M. Ferry there were many heated quarrels in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies between Moderates and Radicals. M. Rouvier joined in the discussion, accusing the Radicals of provoking weak-minded persons to deeds of violence. Several scuffles ensued, and it is expected they will lead to duels.

M. Ferry's Condition Not So Favorable.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The doctor's bulletin, regarding the condition of M. Ferry, says that the ecchymosis caused by the bullets striking the chest, is spreading over the regions of the heart and liver, and that the patient is greatly in need of rest.

Aubertin, the Would-be Assassin.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Aubertin, the would-be assassin of M. Ferry, is the author of various pamphlets and the inventor of several machines, the failure of which has reduced him to deep poverty, embittered his life and brought on occasional attacks of insanity. The Radical organs declare that the man is a crank. A political assassination is held to be inexcusable by the Radicals.

The Journal des Debats and La Republique Francaise charge the "demagog press" with inciting Aubertin, and they demand a new press law to modify the act of 1881.

Aubertin promises to reveal the names of his accomplices on Tuesday if the gang does not attempt to assassinate some of the members of the Rouvier Cabinet before that day.

THE AFFLICTED CROWN PRINCE.

Dr. Mackenzie Expresses a Cheerful View of the Case.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Concerning the condition of the Crown Prince Frederick William The British Medical Journal says:

"As to the progress of the disease, quite too much reticence is observed. The Crown Prince is not losing strength and the discomfort his malady subjects him to is very slight indeed. To the much-advertised views of the German doctors, who have never looked into the patient's mouth, Dr. Mackenzie says he pays no attention and attaches no importance whatsoever. When he first examined the patient's throat in Berlin there were, he asserts, no signs of cancer, but there undoubtedly were such indications when the examination was made at San Remo. The reports from the physician in charge at San Remo, Dr. Mackenzie says, are quite favorable and there has not been the slightest enlargement of the growth or any other unfavorable change for several weeks."

Dr. Mackenzie's relations with the paper quoted are close and cordial and the statement may be implicitly relied upon as coming from him.

ANOTHER FAILURE.

M. Fallieres Tells the President That He Cannot Form a Cabinet.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—M. Fallieres went to the Elysee to-day and informed the President that he had found it impossible to form a Cabinet on the basis of a concentration of the Republican groups and had, therefore, abandoned the attempt. M. Lockray and several other statesmen to whom M. Fallieres made overtures declined to take office. The President has charged Senator Tirard to try to form a Cabinet.

M. Wilson Wants a Rest.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—M. Wilson was examined to-day by the commission appointed to inquire into the charges against him. He begged that the commission render a prompt decision in the case in order that the violent and unmerited newspaper attacks on him might cease.

Bismarck Taken Suddenly Ill.

HAMBURG, Dec. 11.—Reliable advices received here from Friederichsruhe say that Prince Bismarck was seized with a sudden illness yesterday. The attack speedily passed off, but his physician advises his abstention from business.

NOT OF REAL IMPORTANCE

THE WAR SCARE SAID TO BE CIRCULATED FOR BOURSE PURPOSES.

It is Believed That the Press Rumors Were Circulated by Bismarck to Assist in the Immediate Passage of the Landsturm Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—In military circles here the Russian movements on the Austrian frontier are not considered of real importance, and the alarming rumors are thought to be circulated for Bourse purposes. Some correspondents at the foreign capitals seem to think it their mission to get up periodical scares, and for ten years past they have been fortelling that "war is imminent," but it has never yet happened. In the present case a glance at a map of the Russian Army positions published for the information of German officials in 1880, shows that the imaginary positions occupied by the Eleventh, Twelfth and Fourteenth Army Corps, as given in the Cologne Gazette, are approximately correct, but these are simply normal peace garrisons continuously there for at least six years past. The same applies to the positions of the cavalry divisions and the Second Rifle Brigade. There is confirmation of this in a work entitled "The Armed Strength of Russia," published by the British Intelligence Department in 1886. The only real movement is the transfer of the Thirteenth Cavalry Division from Moscow to Lublin. This means an addition of four cavalry regiments to the fifty-four already stationed on the frontier. This increased force is equally available against German or Austrian territory. If an aggressive increase was intended it would be enormously greater.

The Scare of a Fictitious Character.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—The whole tone of the preamble of the new German Military Service Bill, which was issued to-night, suggests that the recent outburst of the official press over the massing of Russian troops on the frontier had something of a fictitious character. Prince Bismarck is known to have greatly hurt the chances for the immediate passage of the Landsturm Bill, which the military press now estimates will add 500,000 men to the effective force in the event of a mobilization; so the press campaign, recalling the similar agitation preceding the Septennate vote, was incited, and will be sustained until the bill passes.

Although the Government's motive in fomenting a Russian scare is palpable, there are abundant reasons why the country should be kept on the alert towards Russia. The reports of the concentration of the Russian troops on the frontier at the present time are incorrect, but the movements recorded in these despatches three months ago resulted in placing on the Austro-German frontier 192 infantry battalions, 98 squadrons of cavalry and 64 batteries of artillery. Those movements were part of a long concerted plan of the Russian War Office. While progressing they were not held as an immediate menace to Germany or Austria, but were considered to be necessitated by the special difficulties of Russian mobilizing. This view the German Government is still disposed to admit. At the same time the presence of formidable masses of Russians within striking distance of the frontier will be held by the Reichstag as a justification for the complete reform of the military. No real fear exists in either Berlin or Vienna official circles that Russia will venture upon an aggressive movement. The present alarm, besides assisting the passage of the Military Bill, will restrain the Russian war party. The Czar still oscillates between the party of peace and the Pan-Slavists, and the present agitation will influence him to understand the danger he runs in listening to councillors hostile to Germany and Austria.

THE FORGED LETTERS.

They are Attributed to Catacazy, Formerly Russian Minister at Washington.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—It is stated that Catacazy, the ex-Russian Minister to Washington, is the man, who, from love of intrigue and pleasure in forging, produced the false letters and despatches which have filled the Czar with such hatred for Bismarck. It will be remembered that when in Washington he placed a forged despatch in the hands of certain claimants against the Russian Government, in order to discredit the claimants, whom, as he thought, the American Secretary of State would look upon as the authors of the forgeries. He lives at Paris, and has written the articles in Le Nord, the purpose of which was to excite the French against Germany. He is the principal tool of the Panslavists for driving the French into a war from which Russia is to derive all the advantage—a war whose principal opponent the Czar has until lately been. Accepting the forgeries as an indubitable fact, and considering that diplomats as a rule are not experts in the art of forging, it is easy to fancy that Catacazy is the culprit. Supposing he placed the letters in the hands of Prince Ferdinand of Coburg or of Princess Waldemar of Denmark (daughter of the Duc de Chartres), the latter would be quite innocent of the fraud, and yet would have given Bismarck an opportunity of giving the Orleanists a hit at the moment when they are threatening the existence of a peace-loving republic in France.

A GREAT SCARE AT HALIFAX.

Dynamiters Attempt to Blow up a Gun Cotton Tank on George's Island.

HALIFAX, Dec. 10.—The correspondents called upon the high officials last night for details of the alleged attempt by dynamiters to destroy the fortifications on George's Island by blowing up the tank in which an immense quantity of gun cotton is stored. During the snowstorm Thursday night three unknown men were surprised near the tank, but before the guard could capture them they made their escape in a boat. The Imperial regulations, however, absolutely prohibit Gen. Lord Alexander Russell and his staff from giving any information to the press, but their officials admit the main facts to be true. During the day a two top-mast schooner was notice anchored off the southeast of George's Island, and in a line with the gun-cotton tank. Late in the afternoon two men landed at the island, but as no civilian is allowed under any pretext inside any of the forts or upon the fortifications without special permit from the commanding officer, these men were peremptorily ordered off. They appear to have explained that they were strangers in port, and landed on the island by mistake.

A sentinel is stationed near the pier at which the troops land, but this is some seventy yards from the gun-cotton tank, which is on the eastern side, and a person landing there or being there would not be noticed by the sentry. The sergeant's daughter noticed the three strange men there between 8 and 9 o'clock Thursday night, but paid no particular attention to it until she heard one shout to his companions, "Don't leave me here to do your dirty work." Suspecting something wrong she immediately notified the guard, who rushed to the tank, but the intruders made off in their boat, escaping under cover of darkness and the snowstorm.

The news was immediately signalled to the citadel and communicated to Lord Russell, who ordered double guards to patrol the island all night and officers to search vessels in the harbor for the dynamiters. The crew of the vessel nearest the fort said they knew nothing about it. Meanwhile Detective Power was communicated with by Royal Engineer officers and asked if he knew of any suspicious characters being in the city who would likely make an attempt to operate on the forts by dynamite. The detective knew of no suspicious strangers, but was ordered to keep a thorough watch and report all suspicious characters to the military authorities. At midnight the following message was received at Police Headquarters:

From the Officers in charge of Submarine Mining Division established on George's Island, to the Officers on duty at Police Station

Three men just now were surprised at gun-cotton tank on George's Island. From conversation overheard, they are suspected of serious designs upon the gun-cotton tank. They pulled away for a schooner lying in harbor. Please obtain information of all schooners and be on the alert at all landing places.

CAPT. DAWSON,

But the combined efforts of police and military authorities have failed to find any clue. The most stringent precautions, however, have been taken; extra guards have been placed on the forts and ammunition depots and the greatest care is exercised in regard to persons approaching these places. A reporter went to the gate of the citadel this morning to make inquiries and was inspected and examined by three officers before being allowed to pass the sentry. Col. O'Brien will only give passes to civilians going to George's Island upon urgent business, and as no one can urge that excuse, it is next to impossible for any but the military on duty to reach there.

It is officially explained that, while the cover of a new gun-cotton tank in course of construction was removed, no damage was done to the immense galvanized iron tank in which the gun-cotton is stored. This tank is covered by a sheet of galvanized iron, lined with wood. A person with an ordinary drill or gimlet could bore a hole through it in a very short time. The cut cotton is carefully stowed away in compartments, but if powder was dropped into the hole made through the cover and a burning fuse placed there, which would drop into the tank, the powder would of course explode the gun-cotton. The effect would be appalling, as there is a large supply of this explosive stored there. Not only would the fort have been destroyed, but the island is so near the shore that the whole business portion of the city, the wharves, the shipping and the fashionable residences in the South End must also have been wrecked. Lord Russell is understood to have cabled the minutest details of the affair to the officials of the War Department.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

Fear of the Slayers of Constable Whelehan Sent to Penal Servitude.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—The trial of the seven men indicted for manslaughter for killing Constable Whelehan at Lisdoonvarna, County Clare, was concluded to-day. The jury were unable to agree in the case of the two Murphys, but returned a verdict of guilty against O'Leary and four other prisoners. O'Leary was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and the other four to seven years each.

The Arrest of Mr. Hooper, M.P.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Mr. Hooper, member of Parliament, has been arrested at Cork for publishing reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the National League.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare. If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,

JULES FERRY SHOT DOWN.

A RADICAL JOURNALIST WOUNDS HIM THREE TIMES.

The Shots All Take Effect, but None of the Wounds Inflicted are Serious—The Occurrence Causes a Heated Quarrel in the Chamber of Deputies.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—An immense sensation was caused in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. As M. Jules Ferry was passing through the round ante-room leading into the "Salle des Pas Perdus," carrying a portfolio under his arm, he was assaulted by a short man with blonde whiskers, who drew a revolver and fired three shots at him. M. Ferry was wounded in the breast, side and thigh. The portfolio dulled the force of the shots, but Ferry fainted and had to be carried into the adjoining offices of the Questure. His assailant was nearly lynched by the excited crowds. He describes himself as a Radical journalist. His name is Aubertin.

Owing to the fact that M. Ferry fainted the report rapidly spread that he had been seriously, if not fatally, wounded. M. Ferry was able to go to a hospital with the support of some friends. To a query of anxious friends about the severity of the wound M. Ferry replied: "It is nothing."

Aubertin has been placed under arrest. It is now said that the assailant's real name is Berckein. He states that he is one of a band of twenty revolutionists. M. Ferry was able to walk from the hospital to his home after his wounds were dressed.

Berckein Aubertin, M. Ferry's assailant, is a native of Rombach, in Moselle. When he made the attack on M. Ferry he was accompanied by an accomplice who was to have shot M. Goblet, but who funked, giving as his reason that his revolver dropped to the floor. When Aubertin was searched by the police a paper was found on him which indicated that he and his confederates had drawn lots yesterday to decide who should do the shooting. The paper ends, "Death to intriguers. Our path is marked out to form an intelligent, disinterested and patriotic ministry. So be it."

In consequence of the attempt upon the life of M. Ferry there were many heated quarrels in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies between Moderates and Radicals. M. Rouvier joined in the discussion, accusing the Radicals of provoking weak-minded persons to deeds of violence. Several scuffles ensued, and it is expected they will lead to duels.

M. Ferry's Condition Not So Favorable.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The doctor's bulletin, regarding the condition of M. Ferry, says that the ecchymosis caused by the bullets striking the chest, is spreading over the regions of the heart and liver, and that the patient is greatly in need of rest.

Aubertin, the Would-be Assassin.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Aubertin, the would-be assassin of M. Ferry, is the author of various pamphlets and the inventor of several machines, the failure of which has reduced him to deep poverty, embittered his life and brought on occasional attacks of insanity. The Radical organs declare that the man is a crank. A political assassination is held to be inexcusable by the Radicals.

The Journal des Debats and La Republique Francaise charge the "demagog press" with inciting Aubertin, and they demand a new press law to modify the act of 1881.

Aubertin promises to reveal the names of his accomplices on Tuesday if the gang does not attempt to assassinate some of the members of the Rouvier Cabinet before that day.

THE AFFLICTED CROWN PRINCE.

Dr. Mackenzie Expresses a Cheerful View of the Case.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Concerning the condition of the Crown Prince Frederick William The British Medical Journal says:

"As to the progress of the disease, quite too much reticence is observed. The Crown Prince is not losing strength and the discomfort his malady subjects him to is very slight indeed. To the much-advertised views of the German doctors, who have never looked into the patient's mouth, Dr. Mackenzie says he pays no attention and attaches no importance whatsoever. When he first examined the patient's throat in Berlin there were, he asserts, no signs of cancer, but there undoubtedly were such indications when the examination was made at San Remo. The reports from the physician in charge at San Remo, Dr. Mackenzie says, are quite favorable and there has not been the slightest enlargement of the growth or any other unfavorable change for several weeks."

Dr. Mackenzie's relations with the paper quoted are close and cordial and the statement may be implicitly relied upon as coming from him.

ANOTHER FAILURE.

M. Fallieres Tells the President That He Cannot Form a Cabinet.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—M. Fallieres went to the Elysee to-day and informed the President that he had found it impossible to form a Cabinet on the basis of a concentration of the Republican groups and had, therefore, abandoned the attempt. M. Lockray and several other statesmen to whom M. Fallieres made overtures declined to take office. The President has charged Senator Tirard to try to form a Cabinet.

M. Wilson Wants a Rest.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—M. Wilson was examined to-day by the commission appointed to inquire into the charges against him. He begged that the commission render a prompt decision in the case in order that the violent and unmerited newspaper attacks on him might cease.

Bismarck Taken Suddenly Ill.

HAMBURG, Dec. 11.—Reliable advices received here from Friedrichsruhe say that Prince Bismarck was seized with a sudden illness yesterday. The attack speedily passed off, but his physician advises his abstention from business.

NOT OF REAL IMPORTANCE

THE WAR SCARE SAID TO BE CIRCULATED FOR BOURSE PURPOSES.

It is Believed That the Press Rumors Were Circulated by Bismarck to Assist in the Immediate Passage of the Landsturm Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—In military circles here the Russian movements on the Austrian frontier are not considered of real importance, and the alarming rumors are thought to be circulated for Bourse purposes. Some correspondents at the foreign capitals seem to think it their mission to get up periodical scares, and for ten years past they have been fortelling that "war is imminent," but it has never yet happened. In the present case a glance at a map of the Russian Army positions published for the information of German officials in 1880, shows that the imaginary positions occupied by the Eleventh, Twelfth and Fourteenth Army Corps, as given in the Cologne Gazette, are approximately correct, but these are simply normal peace garrisons continuously there for at least six years past. The same applies to the positions of the cavalry divisions and the Second Rifle Brigade. There is confirmation of this in a work entitled "The Armed Strength of Russia," published by the British Intelligence Department in 1886. The only real movement is the transfer of the Thirteenth Cavalry Division from Moscow to Lublin. This means an addition of four cavalry regiments to the fifty-four already stationed on the frontier. This increased force is equally available against German or Austrian territory. If an aggressive increase was intended it would be enormously greater.

The Scare of a Fictitious Character.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—The whole tone of the preamble of the new German Military Service Bill, which was issued to-night, suggests that the recent outburst of the official press over the massing of Russian troops on the frontier had something of a fictitious character. Prince Bismarck is known to have greatly hurt the chances for the immediate passage of the Landsturm Bill, which the military press now estimates will add 500,000 men to the effective force in the event of a mobilization; so the press campaign, recalling the similar agitation preceding the Septennate vote, was incited, and will be sustained until the bill passes.

Although the Government's motive in fomenting a Russian scare is palpable, there are abundant reasons why the country should be kept on the alert towards Russia. The reports of the concentration of the Russian troops on the frontier at the present time are incorrect, but the movements recorded in these despatches three months ago resulted in placing on the Austro-German frontier 192 infantry battalions, 98 squadrons of cavalry and 64 batteries of artillery. Those movements were part of a long concerted plan of the Russian War Office. While progressing they were not held as an immediate menace to Germany or Austria, but were considered to be necessitated by the special difficulties of Russian mobilizing. This view the German Government is still disposed to admit. At the same time the presence of formidable masses of Russians within striking distance of the frontier will be held by the Reichstag as a justification for the complete reform of the military. No real fear exists in either Berlin or Vienna official circles that Russia will venture upon an aggressive movement. The present alarm, besides assisting the passage of the Military Bill, will restrain the Russian war party. The Czar still oscillates between the party of peace and the Pan-Slavists, and the present agitation will influence him to understand the danger he runs in listening to councillors hostile to Germany and Austria.

THE FORGED LETTERS.

They are Attributed to Cataeazy, Formerly Russian Minister at Washington.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—It is stated that Cataeazy, the ex-Russian Minister to Washington, is the man, who, from love of intrigue and pleasure in forging, produced the false letters and despatches which have filled the Czar with such hatred for Bismarck. It will be remembered that when in Washington he placed a forged despatch in the hands of certain claimants against the Russian Government, in order to discredit the claimants, whom, as he thought, the American Secretary of State would look upon as the authors of the forgeries. He lives at Paris, and has written the articles in Le Nord, the purpose of which was to excite the French against Germany. He is the principal tool of the Panslavists for driving the French into a war from which Russia is to derive all the advantage—a war whose principal opponent the Czar has until lately been. Accepting the forgeries as an indubitable fact, and considering that diplomats as a rule are not experts in the art of forging, it is easy to fancy that Cataeazy is the culprit. Supposing he placed the letters in the hands of Prince Ferdinand of Coburg or of Princess Waldemar of Denmark (daughter of the Duc de Chartres), the latter would be quite innocent of the fraud, and yet would have given Bismarck an opportunity of giving the Orleanists a hit at the moment when they are threatening the existence of a peace-loving republic in France.

A GREAT SCARE AT HALIFAX.

Dynamiters Attempt to Blow up a Gun Cotton Tank on George's Island.

HALIFAX, Dec. 10.—The correspondents called upon the high officials last night for details of the alleged attempt by dynamiters to destroy the fortifications on George's Island by blowing up the tank in which an immense quantity of gun cotton is stored. During the snowstorm Thursday night three unknown men were surprised near the tank, but before the guard could capture them they made their escape in a boat. The Imperial regulations, however, absolutely prohibit Gen. Lord Alexander Russell and his staff from giving any information to the press, but their officials admit the main facts to be true. During the day a two top-mast schooner was notice anchored off the southeast of George's Island, and in a line with the gun-cotton tank. Late in the afternoon two men landed at the island, but as no civilian is allowed under any pretext inside any of the forts or upon the fortifications without special permit from the commanding officer, these men were peremptorily ordered off. They appear to have explained that they were strangers in port, and landed on the island by mistake.

A sentinel is stationed near the pier at which the troops land, but this is some seventy yards from the gun-cotton tank, which is on the eastern side, and a person landing there or being there would not be noticed by the sentry. The sergeant's daughter noticed the three strange men there between 8 and 9 o'clock Thursday night, but paid no particular attention to it until she heard one shout to his companions, "Don't leave me here to do your dirty work." Suspecting something wrong she immediately notified the guard, who rushed to the tank, but the intruders made off in their boat, escaping under cover of darkness and the snowstorm.

The news was immediately signalled to the citadel and communicated to Lord Russell, who ordered double guards to patrol the island all night and officers to search vessels in the harbor for the dynamiters. The crew of the vessel nearest the fort said they knew nothing about it. Meanwhile Detective Power was communicated with by Royal Engineer officers and asked if he knew of any suspicious characters being in the city who would likely make an attempt to operate on the forts by dynamite. The detective knew of no suspicious strangers, but was ordered to keep a thorough watch and report all suspicious characters to the military authorities. At midnight the following message was received at Police Headquarters:

From the Officers in charge of Submarine Mining Division established on George's island, to the Officers on duty at Police Station

Three men just now were surprised at gun-cotton tank on George's Island. From conversation overheard, they are suspected of serious designs upon the gun-cotton tank. They pulled away for a schooner lying in harbor. Please obtain information of all schooners and be on the alert at all landing places.

CAPT. DAWSON.

But the combined efforts of police and military authorities have failed to find any clue. The most stringent precautions, however, have been taken; extra guards have been placed on the forts and ammunition depots and the greatest care is exercised in regard to persons approaching these places. A reporter went to the gate of the citadel this morning to make inquiries and was inspected and examined by three officers before being allowed to pass the sentry. Col. O'Brien will only give passes to civilians going to George's Island upon urgent business, and as no one can urge that excuse, it is next to impossible for any but the military on duty to reach there.

It is officially explained that, while the cover of a new gun-cotton tank in course of construction was removed, no damage was done to the immense galvanized iron tank in which the gun-cotton is stored. This tank is covered by a sheet of galvanized iron, lined with wood. A person with an ordinary drill or gimlet could bore a hole through it in a very short time. The cut cotton is carefully stowed away in compartments, but if powder was dropped into the hole made through the cover and a burning fuse placed there, which would drop into the tank, the powder would of course explode the gun-cotton. The effect would be appalling, as there is a large supply of this explosive stored there. Not only would the fort have been destroyed, but the island is so near the shore that the whole business portion of the city, the wharves, the shipping and the fashionable residences in the South End must also have been wrecked. Lord Russell is understood to have cabled the minutest details of the affair to the officials of the War Department.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

Four of the Slayers of Constable Whelehan Sent to Penal Servitude.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—The trial of the seven men indicted for manslaughter for killing Constable Whelehan at Lisdoonvarna, County Clare, was concluded to-day. The jury were unable to agree in the case of the two Murphys, but returned a verdict of guilty against O'Leary and four other prisoners. O'Leary was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and the other four to seven years each.

The Arrest of Mr. Hooper, M.P.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Mr. Hooper, member of Parliament, has been arrested at Cork for publishing reports of meetings of suppressed branches of the National League.

A NATION'S STRENGTH.

A SERMON TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SONS OF ENGLAND LODGE.

The Rev. Mr. Wallace Preaches on the Permanency of National Greatness—Righteousness the Only Sure Foundation.

The members of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, decorated with the badges of the order, at half past ten o'clock on Sunday left the lodge room and marched to the George Street Methodist Church. The officers of the Lodge wore their handsome regalia and the procession was quite imposing. They occupied the central row of pews.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., who took for his text, Proverbs xiv, 34,—"Righteousness exalteth a nation."

He said: "I address you this morning as sons of England or sons of Englishmen. I address you, therefore, as men who love that dear old land of rolling meadows, of silvery streams, of fragrant hedgerows, of spreading parks, of lordly castles, old in story, of cottages with their clustering flowers, of noble, stately churches and cathedrals, and the greatest, busiest haunts of men the world has seen. I address you as men who love not England alone, but the British Empire—that unparalleled Empire with its dominions on every continent, that Empire on which the sun never sets, on upon whose prosperity God grant the sun may never set. I address you as men who love that Anglo-Saxon race which spreads in habitation and in influence even far beyond the wide limits of the great British Empire. And this morning I ask you with me to consider what are the elements and agencies of true national greatness which it is our duty and privilege to cultivate and cherish, whether in the old land or in this young land, in order that we may repeat the ancient triumphs and successes and conserve the ancient English force of character, which has filled the world with English hearts of oak. What will make and keep a nation great? What are the true ideals? What are the true sources of national greatness?" He asked if it was size. A vast territory might be a desert. The weakness of the Canadian nationality was in the absence of cohesion between Celt and Saxon. Size was not the ideal. A giant might be seen with any travelling show, but the great Napoleon was "the little corporal." The vastness of Persia when moved against Grecian vitality was shattered at Marathon, Thermopylæ and Salamis. The glory of ancient Greece still lived through its great men. So, to-day, the strength of England was not to be found in her vast territories, but in those qualities of mind and body which had won for her those territories, and at the decay of which those vast territories would fall from her grasp.

WAS MILITARY POWER

an ideal source of national greatness? With the advance of civilization war was declining. True, we admired the people who could roll back the tide of invasion, and defend their hearths and homes. But it was, in reality, the courage and endurance lying back of the military power which we honored and which constituted national greatness. Empires founded upon force merely, soon crumbled. It was so with Napoleon's Empire, and unless the old virtues were preserved in purity it would be so with England.

WAS IT COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY?

Busy wheels in thousands of great shops, ships whose sails whiten every sea, a commerce which almost baffles computation and wearies imagination—this was something for England to boast of as an evidence of her people's industry, frugality, enterprise, their power to do and to produce. But commercial prosperity and social misery too often kept pace with each other. The true ideal of national greatness was not realized in England, else the poet laureate would not have been caused to write as he did, but one year ago, of city slime, crime, hunger, poverty, and dreadful vice.

WAS IT CULTURE?

Aesthetic culture was in itself admirable, the joyous appreciation of the beautiful and sublime in nature and in art. But cultured Greece fell beneath the weight of her sensuality. Intellectual culture; the power to think, reason, investigate, to form theories of the laboring universe—this was high and worthy, but was not the highest and worthiest. Intellectuality was not necessarily patriotic, else the great German poet would not have been reproached for his indifference when the French were aggressors. Intellectuality did not form the most solid foundation of national greatness. It might be selfish, cynical, debauched.

RIGHTEOUSNESS!

That was the true ideal of national greatness, the source of national greatness, the true foundation to build on. It summed up all the elements of national greatness, industry, force of character, courage, perserverance, culture of all our powers, the direction of all forces and energies to the highest purposes. Righteousness secured freedom, purity, in public and private life. It made a people great in any age, in any state of civilization, whether low or high, the military, commercial or intellectual. He considered how absolutely the nation depended upon the individuals who comprised it. If the individuals were serfs ,then a few aristocrats might rise upon the waves. They might be great, but the nation would not be great. If the individuals were intemperate, idle and purchasable, they became the toys of unscrupulous politicians, and the nation was not under the tyranny of a king

BUT OF A MOB.

They should frown upon venality, promote temperance, work for the education of the lowest—only by the people's doing so could Canada become permanently prosperous. To put up a lasting structure they must have a sound foundation. The individual was the foundation of the state. How were good citizens to be got? By harmonious working in the home, the school and the church. The good of the commonwealth rested upon the divine relation of authority, obedience, brotherhood, and these relations are first exhibited and cultured in the home. It was the glory of the Teutonic race that their homes were pure. Let them be kept so. Let parents rule in love, children obey in love, and brothers learn to respect each other's rights, and so will

THE CITIZENS TO COME, to be trained for obedience, authority and brotherhood of the larger world. The school came to help the home. Let no one listen to a babbling demagogue who decries education as a costly luxury. Let the sons of poor men have the same privilege of rising to the to the highest place in the state as the rich man's sons. And they should hold fast to the great principle that the moral and religious elements were the paramount elements in education. The best text book was the Bible. In referring to the church as one of the factors in the production of good citizens, he did not refer to any particular church, creed or polity. He referred to the work of all church communions through which the regenerating power of the holy gospel was brought to bear upon humanity. He laid great stress upon the value of public morality as good citizenship always had, and always would, largely depend upon it. It was of incalculably higher importance than any form of government. Public immorality under any form of government would ruin the state. He appealed eloquently for a

PURITY OF ELECTION CAMPAIGNS,

and commented upon the fact that the readiness of a corrupt electorate to be bought, often tempted good men to do, or consent to have done in their behalf, things they were heartily sorry for afterwards. "God give us patriots!" he exclaimed, "God give us more men like that merchant prince of Toronto, whose elevation to our Senate reflects credit upon the Government that appointed him, because in his promotion we see the recognition, not of partisan service, but of philanthropic eminence and of political incorruptibility. God multiply the Christian men who can be just as Christian in the House of Commons as in a prayer meeting; men who will not be overcome with evil, but will overcome evil with good; men who understand that it is of vastly less importance that they should get in or keep in than that they should set an example of truth and honor, men who who would rather be right than be President, Premier or King." He looked back over the history of nations and all told the sad story of early superiority, purity, patriotism and religion, an age of triumphs; the incoming of wealth, luxury and licentiousness, loss of public spirit, decay of morality, and finally the crash. Would it always be the same? Would England fall? It would if the ancient physical and moral strength of her hardy sons and the purity of her lovely women were suffered to be abated. If moral deterioration came the result was inevitable. Christianity, a true, earnest, loving Christianity, was the only hope for modern nations. It alone gave hope that modern society might escape the fate of the ancient. Christianity was not designed to be superseded. Its light would never die in the dawn of some better day, but rather grow brighter into the eternal noon. So far as our civilization was Christian it would be enduring. So far as modern nations were permeated with Christian principles and quickened into Christian life they would flourish in perennial youth. He closed with the following peroration:—"By your own life for God and for humanity do your part to secure the highest interests of the land you love, of the race to which you belong. Visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction. Keep yourselves unspotted from the world. Remember that righteousness alone exalts the individual, exalts the nation."

At very far from largest rate.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Holiday Cards.

The new "Ragged Edge" calling cards are all the go. They can be had for little money at the REVIEW Stationery. Just the thing to use when making your holiday calls.

Fifty Cents on the Dollar.

Everything New and Fresh from the Looms, they have never been unpacked from the cases, and yet they are to be sold at 50cts. on the dollar. Call Out the Dogs of War, Now for GOUGH is going to take a hand in Dry Goods too, and as he bought them at 50 cents on the dollar, something must give. Even though it be the imaginary Clothiers.

We would advise the Ladies of Peterborough not to miss this opportunity as the bargains to be offered will be most startling. The Stock is comprised of General Dry Goods, including

SILKS, SATINS, DRESS GOODS, FLANNELS, COTTONS, TICKING, PRINTS, BLANKETS, CORSETS, GLOVES, HOSIERY, &c.,

And all to be sold without reserve. The reader will bear in mind that this Gigantic Sale will commence at 9 o'clock, a. m., sharp, on SATURDAY, Nov. 26th, at my Store, and I would advise one and all to call early and avoid the rush as we expect a crowded Store. Our Immense Stock of Suits and Overcoats will be removed to the 2nd and 3rd flats, and in these Departments sweeping reductions will also be made. We will sell you a good Overcoat for $2.50 worth $6.00 and Suits will be reduced in accordance. ## THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Sale of Lumber.

Remember the auction sale of lumber and shingles on Tuesday, the 13th inst., at Young's Point, comprising Pine, Oak, Elm, Ash, Baswood, Maple and Hemlock, also a large quantity of dimension timber. Sale to commence at 12 o'clock. 2d138

Manly Men.

Mr. Jos. Gibson, of Ingersoll, the well-known and popular platform speaker, will deliver an address on the subject of "Manly Men" at the Opera House this evening. Mr. Gibson is a pleasing and entertaining speaker, a close reasoner and one who aims to instruct. Admission free; collection. 1d139

Correction.

In the article referring to the success of the Manufacturers Life Insurance company printed in Saturday's issue of the Review, the amount of insurance written by the company was given as $250,000. This was an error which we regret occured. The amount should have appeared as $2,500,000, as it now appears in the paragraph in question.

California Fruits.

are no doubt the finest as the climate is adopted to raising the best fruit. Mr. Elliott purchased in San Francisco, Cal., an assortment of Yellow Peaches, Bartlett Pears, Golden Drop Plums, Apricots, Black Cherries, White Cherries in large tins which have just arrived at the Palace Grocery. For the finest groceries try ELLIOTT & TURNEY.

The Press.

The boom in real estate and building at Lindsay this year is being felt in business matters and one result is to call into existence a third newspaper. It is understood that Mr. Jos. Cooper, formerly proprietor of the Warder, has procured a plant and will issue the new paper. It will be named the "Watchman," and will support Liberal-Conservatives principles. With a liberal support promised from the town and a large and wealthy country in which to seek a circulation the prospects are that the new paper will gain many friends and prove a profitable venture.

A Friend of the Cook.

In this case it is not the policeman who is referred to as the Cook's best friend. It is the well known Baking Powder, so popular with housekeepers. Mr. G. A. McLaren of Montreal has been in town during the last few days arranging to supply local merchants with the Cook's Friend. It is as pure an article as money can buy. It promises more raising strength than any other, and grocers are authorized to guarantee that it is and always has been absolutely pure and free from alums. Housekeepers will recognize these points as of great value and ask for The Cook's Friend.

"C." Troop.

A meeting of the members of C. Troop 3rd Regiment of Cavalry, was held in the drill shed on Saturday afternoon. There were present Lieut.-Col. Harry Rogers, in the chair, Regt. Sergt-Major Johnston, Staff Sergt. Kent, Sergt. Goldie, Sergt. Saunders, Corp. Johnston, Trooper Stewart, Trooper Hunter, and Trooper McWilliams. The object of the meeting was to form a drill class for members of C. Troop for the winter to meet two evenings each week. The class was organized and Lieut-Col. Rogers has kindly offered his services as drill instructor. Staff-Sergt. Kent was appointed Secretary and Treasurer and the non-commissioned officers a committee to carry out all details.

Go direct to TURNBULL'S, The Cheap Dry Goods House, for fine Wool Goods, Heavy Scotch Shawls, Table Linens, &c., &c., for the Christmas trade.

Church Notes.

—Anniversary practice will be held to-night in the George street Church, instead of Tuesday, at 7 p.m. Mr. Miller and members of the band will be present.

—It is understood that Mr. Jacques has resigned his position as organist and choir master of the George Street Methodist Church. The question of engaging a successor will be considered at a meeting of the official board.

Corned Beef.

A town druggist has been besieged by housekeepers for a recipe for corn beef pickle. He has had to get at the end of his quill pen and copy out the names of the ingredients an enormous number of times, and the worst of it is that the more he writes out the recipe the more its fame spreads, and consequently the more penmanship is he called on to perform. To get out of the difficulty he gives the recipe over and above board, and any one who wants him to write it out after reading it here will be well assessed. It is as follows:—Pickle for 100 pounds of beef. Potash, 1½lbs.; Saltpetre, 2lbs.; Salt, 7lbs.; Sugar, 5lbs.; disolve the ingredients in four gallons of water, pack the meat in tub and pour the pickle on it.

A Very Satisfactory Method.

The unexampled success gained by the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, is no doubt directly due to the activity and zeal of its agents, and to the prompt and satisfactory settlement of claims. An example of this very gratifying feature is shown in the card of thanks inserted in another column by Mrs. And. Wilson and Mrs. J. E. Wilson, wife and mother of the late Mr. A. Wilson, referring to the payment of claim for insurance effected in the company above mentioned. It will strike the average person that this is something like what life insurance should be. No delay of sixty or ninety days in which to adjust claim, as is too often the case with some companies. It is worthy of note that when the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company had just organized one of the first resolutions placed on the books by the board of directors was that every claim should be paid immediatly on proof of death. We understand that the Company has already written about $2,500,000. Wilson & Morrison, Manager's for Eastern Ontario, are certainly deserving in the interests of the company of a large patronage.

THE loveliest felt slippers that you ever saw, at KIDD'S, the booter.

Farmers Institute.

A meeting of the Directors of the West Peterborough Farmers Institute was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Fitzgerald occupied the chair, and in the absence of Mr. Bell, Mr. Stratton, M.P.P., was elected secretary pro tem. Mr. Stratton read a letter from Prof. Mills of the Agricultural College, stating that he could let the Institute have the services of two men for lectures at any time they would be needed. He read one from Mr. Shaw of the Central Farmers Institute, of Hamilton, thanking Mr. Stratton for the interest he had taken in organizing the Institute and wishing the Institute success. The business before the meeting was the arranging for the holding of a public meeting. Messrs. Bennett, Simpson, Bell, Kennedy and Fitzgerald, were appointed as a committee to procure the services of local talent. It is proposed to have several practical farmers prepare papers on different subjects and to have them read at the public meeting. The meeting which will be held at about Jan. 20th, will also be addressed by a Professor from the Agricultural College. Votes of thanks were tendered to Mr. Stratton for the interest he had taken in having the Institute organized and to Mr. Stevenson for his consent to allow them to use the music hall for meetings.

Sunday School Examination.

On Saturday evening December the 10th, a local examination for Sunday School Teachers and Scholars, in connection with the Church of England, was held in St. Luke's school room, Ashburnham, under the auspices of the Toronto Sunday School Committee. A number of candidates had entered for the examination both from St. John's and St. Luke's Sunday Schools, only 12 however actually sat for the examination and those all belonged to the latter school. Their names are as follows:—Mrs. Jackson, Misses Alice Hiam, Clara Shuter, Polly Denne, Nellie Macdonald, Juliet Orde, Katie Calcutt, Hettie Bennett, Elizabeth Price, Mary J. McAnearn, Louisa Friend and Mr. F. G. Saunders. The subjects for examination were the Church Catechism and the wanderings of Israel in Egypt and the wilderness, last year's Sunday lessons. Eight questions were set on each paper, of which only six were to be answered. Candidates who obtained 50 marks on each subject are placed in the first class. Prizes ranging in value from $5 to $15 are offered to the teacher and scholar ranking highest on the scripture or catechism paper. The questions were prepared in Toronto and the answers forwarded there. It is not of course known who has succeeded from this district, nor can it be until probably after Christmas. Some citizens may perhaps be interested in reading the catechism paper, which was as follows:—

1. "I will make a New Covenant."
   (1) What is this New Covenant?
   (2) On what conditions were you admitted into it?
   (3) What are its blessings and privileges?
2. "We have a great High Priest."
   Who is our High Priest? How does He fulfil His office?
3. What is the work of the Holy Spirit as expressed
   (a) In the Catechism,
   (b) In the Bible?
4. What are the several reasons for observing the Lord's Day, and how should it be observed?
5. "Do this in remembrance of Me." Give an account of the circumstances under which these words were spoken. What do they mean, and how are we to obey them?
6. How are the many and great benefits of the Holy Communion expressed
   (a) In the Catechism, and
   (b) In the Communion Office?
7. What reasons can can you give for
   (a) Infant Baptism:
   (c) The Three Orders of Ministers in Christ's Church?
8. Give an account of the Church in England prior to the Reformation.

THE NORWOOD BURGLARY.

How the Midnight Mechanics Escaped—Where the Tools Were Procured.

The burglars who rifled Mr. Pearce's safe in the Norwood post office on Saturday morning, did not carry their tools with them. They first entered Mr. J. McNicholl's blacksmith shop, which is on the same street and south of the post office, where they procured a chisel, drill and other tools. These they left behind them after the explosion, when they made their hurried flight.

The tools gave a clue to the manner in which they carried out their designs. A hole was drilled in the safe, and a funnell made of paper was used to run the powder into the hole. A closer examination points to powder as being the explosive used, and not dynamite, as was at first supposed. A large pen handle belonging to the post office was shaved down and looked as if it had been used as a sort of ramrod to force the powder in.

Mr. Pearce's general store is in the same building as the post office and a door gives communication between them. The thieves entered the store, where they appropriated $25, and took cloth to wind around the safe to deaden the noise. The safe stood near the window and behind the partition in which the boxes and drawers are placed. The window was a large one, the premises having formerly been used for a store, and there was a drop-box for letters in the window and in the partition. A large quantity of powder must have been used, for the door was blown off, the front window blown right out and the inside drop-box shattered.

A confederate waited at Roxburg's corner—the main business corner of the village a short distance from Mr. Pearse's—with a horse and buggy. Mr. Brennan, whose hotel is directly opposite, came out, as did also Mr. Minaker. The men were than making for the buggy, and, being unable to do anything else, Mr. Minaker set his dog on them. One of the men fired a revolver and the bullet whistled close to Mr. Minaker. Jumping into the buggy, the burglars drove east rapidly. Traces of paper indicated that they went out on the Belmont road about half a mile, and then returned into the east part of the village—which is semi-detached by a hill, mill pond and the Ouse—passing around by Mr. Buck's mill and the Messrs. Finlay's factory to the south or Hastings road.

The papers taken—in addition to the cash and stamps—was principally promissory notes. Mr. F. W. Wilkins, D. L. S., left a number of notes in Mr. Pearse's safe when he went on surveying business to the Northwest last summer and they were taken, but fortunately Mr. Wilkins has a list of them. Mr. Pearse's notes and other securities were taken. The thieves will not be able to realize on all the paper, but they will cause loss and trouble to Mr. Pearse. Mr. H. Davis, who returned from the old country a couple of months ago, placed $1,500 in Mr. Pearse's safe, but he had luckily taken it out a few days before the burglars made the raid. Five registered letters were taken. One of them was sent from Peterborough to Mr. J. P. Brown and another was for the Collector of Belmont Township.

The Public to be Fed.

Groceries, provisions, flour, feed and vegetables are the articles which Mr. John McKee proposes to sell to the public at his new store, (Warde's old stand) George street. Mr. McKee has fitted up the premises in a convenient way and will hold himself in readiness to afford good service to all comers. Goods purchased will be delivered to any part of the town and Ashburnham. After perusal of this item it will be well to note the address next to Wainwright's butcher shop. Give McKee a call.

To Dry Goods Buyers.

If Dry Goods are sold at cost H. S. Griffin & Co. will sell at cost. If Dry Goods are sold under cost H. S. Griffin & Co. will sell under cost. They are wide awake to the state of trade, yet their business has increased every month. Why? because they sell goods as cheap as they can be sold and make an honest living, and because they never put into print what they do not carry out. This week they will put their mantles down to cost price, and winter goods will be sold regardless of profit. No surrender is their motto. 3d139-1w50

WAR! WAR!

AT

THOS. KELLY'S

for the Next Two Months.

After considering the matter over carefully he has decided to force the sale of his large and well assorted stock of Dry Goods. This means a loss but, rather than carry goods over until another season he feels justified in taking this course. It is not his practic to make random statements misleading to customers, therefore when he says the prices will be cut down you will find that the prices will be cut down. Remember that price alone is no criterion of cheapness. You should see the goods and judge of their values. What we say we do, and more than that we reduce seasonable goods, not old goods lying around the shelves from season to season. A few quotations will serve as a guide and possibly startle you into the advisability of calling.

DETECTIVES LOCKED UP.

MONTREAL'S LATEST SENSATION OF THE CRIMINAL ANNALS.

Private and Confidential Officers Accused of Robbing the Safes of the Grand Trunk Railway—Three of Them "Implicated" in the Job.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—The city was greatly excited this morning when it became known that Private Detective John Fahey, ex-Detective Louis Naegele, and Constable Bureau (late of the Grand Trunk force) were in the hands of the authorities, charged with having, a little over a month ago, robbed the Grand Trunk Company's safe at Bonaventure Station of about $1200.

During the past summer a house at No. 1 Drolet-street, owned by Mr. Hy. Phillips, the well-known shooting man, was broken into, and goods to a considerable amount were carried off. As the key was in the possession of Detective Fahey, the owner, for some reason or other, suspected that the guilty party was that officer himself. He therefore, communicated with a New York detective, Frank Wilson, who came to this city nearly three months ago for the express purpose of "shadowing Fahey" and the men who were supposed to be his accomplices. The American officer not only succeeded in making the acquaintance of his Montreal confrere, but impressed him with the idea that he was a pretty big scoundrel himself, and quite ready to carry out the wholesale plan of robbery which (this is Wilson's statement under oath) Detective Fahey and others were about to undertake. Louis Naegele and Constable Bureau also appeared on the scene, and as the latter was a Grand Trunk officer it was decided to make a "grand haul" from that corporation. Fahey wanted to begin with the paymaster, and alleged that the sum of $160,000 could be bagged at one fell swoop from that aged official when the next pay-day would come round. As there was a question of knocking down the employe, Wilson, to better secure the ends of justice, advised that the safe be undertaken first.

This was carried out successfully by Bureau, Fahey, Naegele, Wilson and another party who was quite innocent of what was going on. The time chosen was not Sunday night, as at first supposed, but between 12 and 1 on Sunday afternoon, while fifty people or more were standing round.

Bureau, Wilson says, had taken the key of the safe and passed it over to Naegele, who in turn gave it to Fahey, and a false key was made from it to be used at the proper time. Four days after the burglary was accomplished, Wilson notified the Grand Trunk what had been done, and also that a great scheme of robbery was contemplated throughout the city and country. The Grand Trunk authorities then gave Wilson full power to go ahead and see how far Fahey and Naegele would go. Detective Thomas Flynn of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, was also brought to the city, and in a few days Wilson and his comrade left for Boston, where two letters were exchanged between Wilson and Fahey—the latter asking that a full kit of tools be sent here, as they had some good things on hand. These letters are not signed, but it is alleged that they can be proved to be in Fahey's handwriting. Wilson returned from Boston, and at the same time ordered another detective from Chicago, who arrived here a week ago to-day, registering as "Mr. Craig," his real name being Maxwell. He, too, entered into the operations of the gang, which were now to be opened up on an extensive scale.

It being thought that the time had come to pounce upon the thieves, warrants were issued last evening for the three arrests, and High Constable Bissonnette and his deputy executed them between 9 and 10 o'clock. Fahey was taken into custody at the Richelieu Hotel, Naegele's arrest was made at No. 1 Drolet-street, which house has been principally used as a rendezvous by the gang, and Bureau (who was taken on to the city police force when discharged by the Grand Trunk after the robbery) was apprehended on his beat near St. Ann's market. The three prisoners were locked up for the night.

This morning they were brought before Judges Desnoyers and Dugas, and remanded, while the several startling depositions were being taken. Louis Naegele had given the reporters a great many stories, but when he was asked to tell his own this morning, he winced. "It makes me sick; I am not guilty," was about all he said as he stopped before a throng of newspaper men. John Fahey was simply "crushed," and acted like a man under the influence of liquor—which quite probably correctly describes the [illegible] in which he presented himself before the magistrate. At the investigation, Mr. Kerr, Q. C., appeared for the Grand Trunk.

Nothing that has taken place in police circles for a great number of years has caused half the interest and excitement which was manifest around the offices and corridors of the Court House all day. The American detectives, Flynn, Wilson and Maxwell, are burly yet intelligent looking men.

Mr. Wilson explains that the robbery at the station only occupied a few minutes, and that the plan was that if the onlookers perceived any wrong doing Fahey and Naegele (being well known to the crowd) were to seize upon the strangers, conduct them a short distance away, and allow them to escape.

John Fahey was once a member of the city police force, and Naegele is a son of Deputy-Chief of Police Naegele.

More Revelations.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—Still another projected burglary in connection with Detectives Fahey, Naegele and Constable Bureau has come to light, namely, that of the robbery of Sir Donald A. Smith's celebrated picture, "The Communicants," now on exhibition in Toronto, which cost about $40,000, having been bought over a year ago at auction in New York. They intended to make a haul when the picture was sent back to Montreal, and expected to get $5000 for its return.

A rumor was flying around to-night that Fahey had attempted to commit suicide in jail, but it proved on inquiry to be without foundation. The preliminary investigation has been adjourned until Tuesday.

ADJOURNED UNTIL JANUARY 4.

The Commissioners Will not Sit Until After The Holidays—Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Will Spend the Christmas Season in Canada.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The fisheries negotiators, after a few hours' session to-day, adjourned till Wednesday, Jan. 4, 1888. Sir Charles Tupper will leave Washington to-morrow, en route for Winnipeg, where he will meet Lady Tupper, and the two will proceed thence to Ottawa, and Mr. Chamberlain will leave Washington on Monday, Dec. 19, for Ottawa, where he will visit Lord Lansdowne during the holiday recess. On Monday next the gentlemen connected with the fisheries negotiations will visit Mt. Vernon on one of the Government vessels as the guests of Secretary Bayard.

Mr. Chamberlain Entertained.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Secretary and Mrs. Whitney gave a handsome dinner last evening to Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. There were present Speaker and Mrs. Carlisle, Secretary and Mrs. Fairchild, Secretary Endicott, Mr. and Mrs. Angell, Mr. and Mrs. Putnam Secretary Bayard, Mrs. Macalister Laughton, Admiral and Mrs. Franklin, Sir Lionel West and Sir Charles Tupper.

OPPOSED TO ARBITRATION.

A Meeting in Philadelphia Opposes the Proposals of the Peace Commissioners.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—A large meeting was held last night to hear speeches opposing the arguments in favor of a treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain. The sentiments of the people were decidedly against the peace mission of the Englishmen who recently came to this country with the big memorial, and the independent patriotism was vigorous, while the eloquent references to Ireland's plea for justice were cheered to the echo.

Robert Thompson, of the University of Pennsylvania, made an attack on the British peace commissioners, and said they were prompted to come here by the fishery troubles. He referred to the Halifax tribunal of 1871, and spoke of its unjust decisions. He said we could not judge of the quality of arbitration with England by the Geneva tribunal's work, because the British Empire went before the body with a confession of its guilt.

A Texas Tragedy.

EAST BERNARD, Tex., Dec. 10.—On Thursday night two masked men went to the house where Mrs. Kingston Brown and her son, about 18 years of age, resided, dragged them out about half a mile from the house and murdered them. The sheriff and a posse found the remains late last evening. The boy was shot three times and had his skull crushed, and Mrs. Brown was shot once and her throat cut. Several parties are under arrest. There is great excitement here over the affair.

For forty years, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been demonstrated to be the most reliable remedy in use, for colds, coughs, and lung diseases. Slight colds should not be neglected. The Pectoral will prevent their becoming chronic.

GENERAL.

There is one thing to be said for the brass band. It never hangs back and blushes and protests incompetency when it is asked to play.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

At a recent entertainment in Philadelphia admission was not by ticket, but by vegetable, each person being required to hand over to the doorkeeper a potato or some other vegetable product. The net proceeds were distributed among the poor.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

A prominent Ohio farmer gives oats and clear water as a sure cure for hog cholera, and says he has never known it to fail to effect a cure when the animals are not too far gone to eat. When the pigs were too small to eat oats he had it ground and fed them the meal.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The New York Sun discusses the important question of masticating oysters, without arriving at a conclusion. You do as you choose about an oyster. Remember this, however. An oyster digests itself when broken by the teeth. Cooked, it requires digestion in the stomach.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

How He Praised Him.

"What's the matter with your eye, Tom?"

"A case of black ingratitude."

"Yes, it does look rather black."

"No puns, please; this is a serious matter. I wrote a note of the play that Moggiesfield appeared in, you know. His character was that of a low villain. He did it splendidly, and I praised him highly for his fine work."

"What did you say?"

"Why something like this: Mr. Moggiesfield was especially happy in his delineation of the character of the villain Spitly. Indeed, he does not enact a blackguard; he is a blackguard."

"Well?"

"Well, I met Moggiesfield to-day."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Tone up the system and imppove the appetite by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will make you feel like a new person. Thousands have found health, and relief from suffering, by the use of this great blood purifier, when all other means failed.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Ma. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare. If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

d137tf J. STEVENSON.

THE MAYORALTY FOR 1888.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of a large number of ratepayers, who have promised me their support, I am before you as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1888. I ask you to give me your support, therefor, on the following platform:—

ECONOMY!

TEMPERANCE!

MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

If length of public service is deserving of recognition I may modestly claim your consideration. During the eighteen or twenty years which I have sat at your council board I have endeavored to faithfully advance the best interests of the town. I have spared neither time nor work to consistently carry out my pledges to my supporters and have worked to the best of my ability for the general good. If I have erred I have done so unknowingly.

I offer myself as—in particular—the workingman's candidate. I hope to receive the solid workingmen's support. I consider I am fairly entitled to it. I am a working man myself and if elected—will endeavour to repay the confidence by advancing their interests in every honest way.

I may say that in taking the field I am not actuated by any feeling of rivalry with the present occupant of the Mayor's chair, but I feel that with the many demands on his time and services that the position is not sought for. Should I prove correct in my inference, you cannot fairly overlook the claim that years of service has on your consideration.

I recognize thoroughly what the necessities of the town demand. Thorough economy in all departments of municipal expenditure must be the rule. A liberal policy to encourage the growth and establishment of new and existing industries. In this regard I am opposed to any money bonus being granted, but in favor of exemption from taxes and possibly free sites under proper restrictions. I shall—if elected—give particular attention to matters as outlined above.

Possibly one of the most prominent questions that will come before the ratepayers next year will be in connection with the enforcement of the Scott Act. I will maintain in this regard the position relative to temperance which I have held for the last 25 years. So long as the Scott Act remains in force I will to the extent of my ability and office, see that the law is strictly enforced, and that too through the proper officers of the town.

Such, gentlemen, are the grounds on which I ask your support. I may not have the opportunity of personally soliciting your favor, but venture to hope that the statement of my views will meet your approval.

Trusting that I may have your hearty support on the basis of

ECONOMY!

TEMPERANCE!

MUNICIPAL PROGRESS!

I am, gentlemen,

Yours faithfully,

d136-w49 A. RUTHERFORD.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE SOUTH WARD,

of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN.—I beg to offer myself as a candidate for election as Councillor, to represent Ward No. 1, for the ensuing year.

Should you do me the favor to place me in that important position, I will endeavour to faithfully watch after the best interests of the ward and town generally.

I am, gentlemen,

Yours respectfully,

d137 H. C. WINCH.

FOR WARD NO. 1.

To the Electors of Ward No. 1.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—In accordance with the expressed wish of many influential citizens in your ward I have the honor of announcing my intention to stand as a candidate for Councillor at the forthcoming Municipal Elections.

My platform is Justice, Temperance, and Economy, and will if elected do all that is in the power of one man to do for the people who entrust their work to me.

Should a personal canvass be impossible, I trust the people will do all in their power to further it.

Very respectfully,

20d137 BANNELL SAWYER.

ALLEGED POLICE CROOKS.

ANOTHER MEMBER OF THE MONTREAL POLICE FORCE IN CUSTODY.

The Preliminary Enquiry in the Cases of Fahey, Naegele and Bureau—Evidence Taken of the Grand Trunk Robbery—The Accused Are Unusually Grave.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—Detectives Fahey and Naegele and Constable Bureau were brought before Police Magistrate Desnoyers to-day, when the preliminary enquete into the charges against them was opened. Large crowds assembled outside of the court house to see the prisoners as they passed in. Upon the application of counsel for prosecution, Mr. Kerr, Q.C., it was decided to hold the enquete with closed doors.

It was afterwards learned, however, that the evidence was of a purely formal character, Station Agent Stone and another officer of the company giving details of the robbery at Bonaventure depot. The men were then taken back to jail. They all appeared to realise their position and were unusually grave.

Later in the day Constable Plante, a member of the city police force, was arrested. Plante states that he cannot account for his arrest, and denies that he is guilty of any wrong doing.

After Bureau had confessed to his part in the Grand Trunk robbery, he was confronted by Detective Fahey, when he exclaimed: "I retract all I have said."

J. M. Dufresne of Dufresne & Mongenais, grocers, to-day swore out a deposition against Naegele for stealing a valuable ring at Back River last month. Naegele admits that the ring was stolen, but says it was taken by another party. Mrs. Naegele and Mrs. Bureau visited their husbands to-day, but Mrs. Fahey is confined to her room by paralysis.

At the City Council to-day the Chairman of the Police Committee expressed the opinion that all special constables should be discharged, while another alderman said the whole police force should be discharged. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of others.

THE MONTREAL SENSATION.

The American Detectives Tell How They Entrapped Fahey and His Pals.

From The Montreal Gazette.

A reporter spent a couple of hours with Detectives Flynn, Wilson and Maxwell on Saturday evening. The three men occupy comfortable rooms at the Balmoral Hotel. Wilson and Maxwell, or Craig, as he was known in Montreal, having left the Richelieu Hotel and taken up their quarters with Detective Flynn.

Flynn is about 45 years of age, and is at present general claim agent of the Grand Trunk at Detroit, in which position he enjoys the confidence of his employers. He stands about six feet two inches in his stocking feet. For many years he was a conductor on the railway and is well known in Montreal. He became chief detective and was succeeded in this position by Maxwell, who had his headquarters at Chicago. Maxwell looks more like a ticket agent at a country depot than a detective or a cracksman. To see him walking about the office of the hotel one would take him for a well-to-do habitant. Wilson is the dude of the party. He dresses well and wears a chimney pot hat with a ponderous quantity of jewelry. He is one of Pinkerton's smartest men, and the style in which it is alleged he took in smart detectives like Fahey and Naegele will score another good point in his favor.

Detective Maxwell's Story.

I arrived in Montreal last Saturday week with a note to Wilson from Detective Flynn that I was the "good safe blower" which Fahey asked him to get to put up some jobs. That night I met Fahey in Wilson's room, No. 14 Richelieu Hotel, and was introduced to him as "Craig of Boston." We talked awhile on general matters and finally Wilson said to Fahey "the kid, Craig, is a good listener and not much of a talker." Fahey then unravelled his schemes and we got talking about the Grand Trunk robbery. He said it was a bad job, for instead of getting only $1200 they should have got $7000 or $8000.

"Frank, you weakened," said Fahey to Wilson, and I turned round and said, "Frank, what was the matter with you? I never placed you for a chicken, God d—— you." Wilson said, "I got scared of Bureau. He was drunk, and the fellow at the news stand gave us a lot of trouble. He was trying to light the fire and was fumbling around all the time so that it did not look a safe job. You know, Fahey, that Bureau was kicking too much at the door and telling us to keep still in too loud a voice.'

"I hope the job will be better done next time," said Fahey, "and that Craig here is not such a 'softy' as you."

Finally the three of us had a walk.

We met Naegele with Fahey in the Richelieu next night and Naegele went over to the City Hall and brought Bureau across. I was introduced to him. He gave Frank Wilson hell, and said in a French accent, "God d—— you. There was $8000 there, and you might as well have taken it as not."

Fahey's Big Scheme.

Fahey then said in our presence: "Look here, the biggest thing yet is to go for Sir Donald Smith's picture. It is as easy done as to walk across the street. It is up in Toronto now at the exhibition. We can get it when it comes back. Smith paid $68,000 for it, and the old fellow will give $5000 more to get it back. I will return the picture to him and divide the money." We then walked out and Fahey and Naegele pointed me out Lefort and Bissette's store on Notre Dame-street. I went inside and enquired for some furs at the same time. I took a look at the safe. They told me that they had disposed of the furs last Friday, and I came out and told Fahey. We went into the Bodega and the restaurant next door (Walker's), and I sized up the safes at the request of Fahey, and he then asked me if I thought I could get through the doors. The next place he took me was to the City Passenger Railway office. He said he had been in there in the morning for change of a $10, and that the safe was in the corner room. "I want you to go in and get everything right." He gave me a $10 bill, and I went in and got it changed, taking the location of the house, safe and every other particular I could. We then walked down Craig street and went to St. Ann's Market, where he pointed out a wholesale grocery store, and said it could easily be got into, as Bureau was on that beat and he would take the watchman away while the job was being done. During all those interviews Fahey and Naegele told us that they would guarantee me against arrest, and that if the worst came to the worst and I got pulled that he had the key of the jail door, and he assured me that he would get me out. They told me to have courage. The next night Naegele pointed out a jewelry store on St. Lawrence Main-street. They sent me in there, and Wilson and they were looking in the window until I came out. He pointed out a saloon and showed how it could be entered from the gate, in an alley-way, which was broken. Wilson then asked him what about the policeman who was on the beat, and Naegele said: "It is all right, I have fixed him." Naegele also told me it would be be better not to go at the jewelry store until near New Year's, when they would have in a new stock of holiday goods, and the job would pay better. Wilson was present with me at all those interviews.

M. TIRARD FORMS A CABINET.

The President Meets the Ministry and Reads His Message.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—The Journal Officiel tomorrow will publish the list of the new Cabinet as follows:

M. TIRARD, President of the Council, Minister of Finance and Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.

M. FALLIERES, Minister of Justice.

M. FLOURENS, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

M. BARRIEN, Minister of the Interior.

M. DOUTRESE, Minister of Commerce.

M. LOUBET, Minister of Public Works.

M. DE MAHY, Minister of Marine.

M. VIETTE, Minister of Agriculture.

M. FAYE, Minister of Public Instruction.

The Ministry of War has not been filled. The portfolio has been offered to General Logerot.

Gen. Logerot has accepted the war portfolio. Of the new Cabinet M. M. Tirard, Falliores, Faye, Demahy, Loubet and Dautreme belong to the Union of the Left, and Minister Barrien and Viette belong to the more advanced group. M. Flourens and Gen. Logerot are not members of the Chamber of Deputies.

The new Cabinet held a meeting at the Elysee Palace this evening, when President Carnot read his message to Parliament. The message is lengthy and refers to political questions, pointing out the path which the President would like to see Parliament enter. The passage relating to France's foreign policy is couched in the most pacific terms.

The Cabinet's reply to the message will declare that the Government's desire is to commence the exhibition year with peace abroad and concord at home. They will demand as a question of confidence three provisional credits.

Gen. Logerot is the commander of the Eighth Army corps, with headquarters at Bourges. He distinguished himself in the Tunisian campaign.

CHINESE EMIGRATION.

A Resolution in the U.S. Senate to Put a Stop to It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—In the Senate a joint resolution was introduced by Mr. Mitchell, abrogating all treaties with the Chinese Empire so far as they permit the coming of Chinese into the United States, and absolutely prohibiting the same, except as to diplomatic, consular and other officials. Also to prohibit objectionable foreign immigration, encourage desirable immigration, defend American institutions and protect American labor.

Mr. Beck offered a resolution directing the Postoffice Committee to enquire into the advisability of making the rate of letter postage one cent when letters do not exceed one ounce in weight, and asked that it be laid on the table, saying he might introduce a bill to that effect. So ordered.

Mr. Butler offered a resolution, which was adopted, for the appointment of a select committee of five to enquire into the advisability and practicability of establishing and maintaining a postal telegraph.

Valuable Relics Burned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—Fire last evening destroyed St. Mary's chapel and the parochial building. Many valuable relics were burned, among them is supposed to be the only genuine Gobelin tapestry in America.

Doherty Will Probably Hang.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Recorder at the Old Bailey has advised the grand jury to find a true bill for murder against the American, Daniel Doherty, who killed George Graham of Rochester, N.Y.

Ten Years for Mr. Harper.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 12.—Harper, the wrecker of the Fidelity Bank, has been found guilty and sentenced to 10 years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

The Canadian Club's Banquet.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The Canadian Club's banquet to the British Fisheries Commissioners has been postponed until a date to be fixed after the new year. This has been rendered necessary by the slow progress of the negotiations and the unsatisfactory state of the question as it stands.

The Growth of a Cancerous Nature.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—A. Standard's San Remo special says: "The growth in the German Crown Prince's throat is undoubtedly of a cancerous nature, but it is so small that the doctors are hopeful that it will be a long time, perhaps years, before it will impede the Prince's breathing."

Where England Will Come In.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—The Kreuz Zeitung asserts on authority that England in the event of war will send a fleet to operate on the Baltic, and will protect the coasts of Italy. The consent of Parliament, says the paper, will not be asked until the moment comes for putting the agreement into effect.

HENRY TAYLOR ARRESTED

HE DECLINES TO INTIMATE WHAT HIS DEFENCE WILL BE.

Mr. N. P. Graydon, a Heavy Loser by the Failure of the Ontario Investment Association, is the Complainant Against the ex-President.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 12.—This afternoon Police Magistrate E. J. Parke issued a warrant for the arrest of Henry Taylor, late President of the Bank of London, and President and Manager of the Ontario Investment Association. The warrant was executed by Chief Williams, who arrested Taylor while he was smoking in bed in the debtors' cell of London Jail. N. P. Graydon, the complainant, laid two charges, one for the embezzlement of $1630 on July 1, 1887, the other for fraudulently appropriating to his own use $1465 on July 31, 1887, both sums belonging to the Ontario Investment Association.

When formally arrested Taylor evinced no surprise, having been warned of what would occur. The ex-president declines to intimate what course of defence his counsel will pursue and refuses to express an opinion.

AUBERTIN EVIDENTLY INSANE.

General Satisfaction That M. Ferry Escaped Death.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Aubertin, the man who shot M. Ferry on Saturday, was before a Judge today. He showed symptoms of lunacy. His examination was postponed.

M. Antoine, the well-known representative from Metz in the German Reichstag, has telegraphed to M. Ferry that the attempt upon his life has aroused the indignation of all sections.

M. Ferry has received over 10,000 cards, letters and telegrams. All the foreign diplomatic representatives have sent congratulatory notes to him. Many telegrams have been received from Alsace-Lorraine.

CALLAN AND HARKINS.

They Stand a Good Chance of Spending the Remainder of Their Lives in Prison.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Callan and Harkins, the suspected dynamiters, were up for examination in the Bow-street Court to-day. The evidence proved that drafts on New York were paid in London in favor of Melville amounting to £535. Part of them were cashed at the Bank of England. Notes were afterwards cashed signed by Cohen and Callan.

Mr. Majendie, inspector of explosives, declared that the dynamite found in Callan's lodgings was of American make. Others testified that Melville, Harkins and Cohen were associates. The prisoners were remanded.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

A Parkdale Man Taken to Guelph Last Night to Stand His Trial.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.

About ten days ago the Commercial Hotel in Guelph was almost totally destroyed by fire, one man lost his life, and several other people narrowly escaped death by jumping from the windows. There was an inquest on the body of the man, and the Coroner's jury found that the man's death and the fire that caused it were due to the criminal carelessness of the agent of the Dome Insurance Company of London, who lately superintended the putting into the hotel of one of that company's furnaces, and they charged this man with manslaughter. The name of the superintendent, who was the Toronto agent, J. W. Roots, living in Parkdale, was mentioned at the time, but the jury, it is understood, contented themselves with returning a blank verdict of manslaughter.

Chief of Police Randall of Guelph was not satisfied, and last Saturday he swore out a warrant before Guelph's Police Magistrate, charging Mr. Roots with manslaughter. He brought the warrant to Toronto, and he and Detective Davis started to hunt for their man. They found him last night at his Parkdale home, and at 11 o'clock Chief Randall took him to Guelph to stand his trial.

The Huron Petition Withdrawn.

GODERICH, Dec. 12.—The trial of the petition against the sitting member of West Huron was held here to-day before His Hon. Justice Falconbridge. Mr. Garrow appeared for the petitioner, and Mr. Campion for the respondent. No witnesses were examined, and on the suggestion of the counsel for the petitioner His Lordship decided to allow the withdrawal of the petition. In the cross petition against Mr. Cameron, Mr. Holt appeared for the respondent and the petitioner was not represented by counsel. Judgment for respondent with costs.

Sir Charles Tupper at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Sir Charles Tupper, Canada's representative on the Fishery Commission, remained over here to-day en route from Washington to Winnipeg. Regarding the fisheries question he said he believed there was little left now of the irritation that inspired the non-intercourse and retaliation movements of last winter. He was confident that the commissioners would bring their labors to a satisfactory conclusion.

A Great Fire in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—About 7.30 to-night fire broke out in the wholesale boot and shoe establishment of Phelps, Dodge & Palmer. The building was entirely gutted and the adjoining premises of Marshal, Field & Co. and the offices of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway were badly scorched. The loss is estimated at from $500,000 to $750,000.

Death of Mrs. Astor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Mrs. John Jacob Astor died this evening at 8.05 o'clock.

Bismarck is Better.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—Prince Bismarck is much better.

MUNICIPAL ASSESSMENT.

There are always more or less complaints about the assessment of property. Some persons think they pay too much taxes in comparison with some other persons. The complaints are not confined to any municipality. When appeals are entered and the facts presented to the Court of Revision it sometimes happens that the court agrees with the assessed and makes a change. It does not matter practically whether property is assessed above or below its value, so long as the valuation is uniform, except in so far as the aggregate presentation of the valuation gives a wrong impression of the wealth of the municipality. The principal thing required for fair taxation is uniform valuation.

The people have a right to know that the assessment is thus made. We do not say that it is not. But it is not taken for granted that other officers do their work properly, and there is no reason why individual tax payers should not know that the assessment is properly made. It would be an endless task for each one to go an examine the roll all through. There is a much better way in which it could be done, and that is to have particulars of the assessment printed and distributed.

This is done in some places. Hamilton, an enterprising city, has its assessment rolls printed, and Lindsay—a town progressive in some things but not generally supposed to be more enterprising than Peterborough—does the same. Lindsay's printed roll for 1887 is a pamphlet of twenty-seven pages, and is a correct copy of the original roll as far as the discription and valuation of property is concerned. This affords the ratepayers and opportunity of examining the valuation of property over the whole town without much trouble and ensures a fair assessment.

The present time is a good one for candidates for seats in the Council to discuss the matter with the ratepayers and obtain their views on this as well as other matters.

The crisis in France was not allowed to pass without bloodshed, though at one time something worse than the isolated murderous action of a crank was feared. It is the times of excitement that arouses the weak minded of the Guiteau turn. The President's election did not end the trouble, for, owing to the multiplicity of political parties, it is not so easy to form a Ministry in France as it is in other countries having responsible government.

The chief Reform organ has arrived at the opinion that a "combine" is not necessarily a public evil and may sometimes do good by keeping out of the market inferior goods.

ENNISMORE.

Correspondence of the Review.

Weather Notes.—Roby Burns, in the dirge "Man was Made to Mourn," says:—"When chill November's surly blast made fields and forests bare." In the present year of grace October turned the cards on its successor, leaving scarcely a leaf on tree or bush to quiver and sing to chill November. The month commenced with a low temperature, which it almost carried out; only on 7 days did the thermometer rise above the freezing point, the highest being 45 degrees on the morning of the 7th, and the lowest on the 29th, being only 10 degrees above zero, leaving the mean temperature of the month 32-8.30 degrees. Rain fell on 9 days, along with wet snow melted, to the depth of 3 inches and 22-100 of an inch. Snow fell on 11 days to the depth of 9¾ inches. The rain fall is fully up to the average of November; the snow fall may seem large, but taking into consideration the number of times it fell it will seem different. Our first sleighing was on the 20th, when the merry sleigh bells gingling along reminded us of approaching jollity. We had auroral lights on two nights, fog on two mornings, two severe gales and a bright meteor on the evening of the 15th passed over here. Altogether it has been a peculiar month, coming after such a hot, dry summer. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise during the month, namely:—West, 2 days; south-west, 8 days; northwest, 5 days; north, 7 days; east, 3 days; south-east, 1 day, and south, days.

A LECTURE.

"Manly Men" and What Their Duties Are.

Mr. Joseph Gibson, Ex-Mayor of Ingersol, delivered a lecture in Bradburn's Opera House on the subject of "Manly Men" on Monday evening. The hall was about half filled with people.

Dr. Fife occupied the chair and in introducing the lecturer said that they were here for the purpose of inciting manly men to manly acts. He spoke of the municipal election and stated that Mayor Stevenson should be replaced by one more fitted for the position.

Mr. Gibson spoke of the foundation of two political parties as being the recognition of the right of honest difference of opinion. One man might hold to one idea and his neighbor believe the opposite. The recognition of this, together with the fact that there was a free platform, a free press, and an intelligent people was the strength of the Government of the country. If there were any laws on the statute book which should not be there it was the people's own fault. He defined the responsibilities and duties of a citizen. The citizen voluntarily gave up a great deal which was termed "personal liberty" that he might enjoy the aggregate wisdom of the people, such as law, order, education, and so forth. The privilege of citizenship was that of being a law maker, and it was their duty to be law observers. The men chosen to represent them in the council should carry out the wishes of his constituents and if he did not there was no such thing as representative government. Moreover the men in the council who did not see that the laws of the land were enforced were false to their oath of office. If a farmer was about to try a new reaper would he get the agent of a rival machine to give it a fair trial? Would he do it knowing that that agent would take away some vital part of the machine? It was so with the Scott Act. Men were chosen by the people to represent them who were hostile to the law of the land. The town of Peterborough even if giving a majority against a law were bound to observe it when it was carried in this constituency, as a Reform constituency was bound to obey laws enacted by Conservatives. The majority ruled. People said "its unpopular to support that Scott Act," "it will injure business," "it will create discord," but it was better for a man to be unpopular and stand up for what he thought was right than sneak into an office; it would not injure business as the record of Ingersol showed, and as far as discord was concerned liquor created more discord than the Scott Act. He was surprised at the good account shown by the Scott Act. About one half of the population of Ontario was under the Scott Act and the other half under the License Law. Among the half under the License Law there was committed 7,023 crimes in 1886, while among the half with the Scott Act there were 1,950. The city of Toronto was, however, under the License Law, and there a great many crimes were committed. Some said the Scott Act was a farce. In his county there were six people in gaol for violating the Scott Act, and in Wellington there were eight. These men in their cells did not think it a farce. Those who thought it a farce should change places with these men. He rehearsed the advances, constitutional and otherwise, which temperance had made during the ninety-five years and closed with advising the electors to do their duty on polling day.

The Recipe.

The recipe for corned beef pickle published in the REVIEW last night was not right. The engredients should have been measured by the ounce instead of by the pound. The recipe correct is as follows:—Pickle for 100 pounds of beef. Potash, 1¼ ounces; Saltpetre, 2 ounces; salt, 7 pounds; sugar, 5 pounds. Dissolve ingredients in four gallons of water, pack meat in tub an pour on the pickle.

Real Estate Transfer.

On Saturday last Denis Hurley, of Asphodel, completed the purchase of that two story white brick store with dwelling and outbuildings situated on the corner of Aylmer and McDonnel streets, making the fourth property which this enterprising farmer has purchased in town within a few years, although he lives twenty miles distant. His purchases are paying him by rents and increased values from ten to fifteen per cent. interest. Farmers, this is better than money in the bank at three or four per cent. especially when the money is invested in Peterborough property. The property was purchased through Mr. T. Hurley's real estate agency.

LIGHT BUSINESS.

Only two Cases Before His Honor for Trial.

A session of the County Court was opened at the Court House at half past one o'clock this afternoon, His Honor Judge Weller presiding.

GRAND JURY.

The names of the Grand Jurors are as follows:—

Geo. Munro, Foreman,

|---|---|
| F. Armstrong | R. Bonner |
| J. Buck | W. Boyce |
| P. P. Cope, | R. Clifford, |
| R. Deyell, | R. Dunlop, |
| Robt. Darling, | W. S. Deacon, |
| Wm. Foster, | A. Graham, |
| P. H. Green, | W. Thompson, |
| Wm. Hudson, | W. J. Johnston, |
| D. J. Lundy, | Jas. Lindsay, |
| A. McMillan, | Jas. Masson, |
| S. Payne, | J. J. Richardson, |
| | J. Smith, Jr. |

The local bar was represented by Messrs. J. Burnham, E. B. Edwards, R. E. Wood and E. B. Stone.

His Honor addressed the Grand Jury. He said that there were no persons confined in the gaol for committing crime which they would be called on to investigate. There were several persons confined, but not for the commision of such crime as they should look into. They should not regret this, inasmuch as it indicated that the county was completely free from crime. There were, however, other courts which criminals were brought before—the Assize Court, the Police Magistrate Court, and the County Judge's Court. So far as he was concerned there was only one criminal case brought before him during the year to be tried without the jury, and he learned the number of criminals tried by other courts was small. Some people said: "Well, if there is nothing for the Grand Jury to do what does it exist for?" But though this was frequently said there was no means yet suggested of adequately filling the Grand Jury's place. It was very important that when there was serious matters brought before the court that they should get a fair, careful hearing, and in these cases the Grand Jurors were of great service. Then in other counties there was much crime and the presence of a Grand Jury was imperative. It would hardly do to have one system for one place and another for another. He regretted the imprisonment of insane persons in the gaol, for want of a more suitable place to take them to. The most important matter occurring during the year in which the county was interested was the closing of the litigation between the County and the Grand Junction Railway Co. He congratulated the County, through the Grand Jurors, upon the happy issue obtained. It showed that those who advised the opposing of the demand of the Railway company were right, as the County, by the decision of the Privy Council, had both law and equity on its side. He then dismissed the Grand Jury to inspect the County property.

The case, Rose vs. Linn, was taken up. There are only two on the docket.

A SPUR.

The Canadian Pacific RailWay Want to Build One up the River.

The Canadian Pacific Railway men are endeavoring to have a spur line run along the edge of the Otonabee river from the main line as far north as the Dickson Mills. Mr. W. M. Wells, Solicitor for the Company, and Mr. Hertzneil, Engineer, were in town on Monday on that business. A number of the Council members, including the Mayor, were requested to talk the matter over, and this was done at the Oriental Hotel, where the C. P. R. men were stopping. The proposition of the visitors was that they be allowed to continue the present branch which runs up nearly to Sherbrooke treet, and that after crossing Sherbrooke street they be permitted to build a cribwork in the Otonabee, the filling to be taken from one of the islands. They promise to deepen the channel of the river so as to cause the water to flow more down the central channel. The proposed cribwork will lead to an island and after running the length of the island cribwork will be again resorted to till the arm of the river, bending in a little below the Hunter street bridge, is crossed. The proposed line will then run up Mill street, by the factories on this street and across the river to the Dickson lumber yard. The meeting also discussed the station matter. Wolfe street is practically blocked by the railway tracks and the railway's freight sheds occupies a little of the space of the street. The railway men propose to divert Wolfe street across their own property in return for the advantages they now have. This would be much better than opening Wolfe street again and having the public liable to accidents from trains on eight or ten tracks. The diversion of the street will give a clear open way, free from any railway tracks, to the public.

It was decided that in both matters the company should address a communication to the council setting forth in writing what they desired, and that the Mayor should call a public meeting to consider them.

THE SONS OF ENGLAND

CELEBRATE AN ANNIVERSARY WITH A BANQUET.

An Excellent Spread at the Grand Central—An Evening of Feastings, Songs and Speeches.

A good humored company of about one hundred, members of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, and friends, surrounded the tables in the Grand Central Hotel banqueting hall on Monday evening. A large Union Jack was suspended at one end of the hall, and at the other a fine banner with a portrait of the Queen. The spread did credit to the host, Mr. Daly, and to the culinary department of the hotel. After the (metaphorical) removal of the cloth, the toast list was taken up, Mr. Isaac Richardson, President, being in the chair, and Mr. R. Tivey, Vice-President, in the vice-chair.

The CHAIRMAN remarked on the growth and prosperity of the Society and its benevolent work. The Lodge was in a good position financially and numerically. He proposed the toast of "the Queen," which was honored and the National Anthem sung.

The PRESIDENT next proposed "The Prince and Princess of Wales and Royal Family," which was drunk with honors.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers," was followed by "Rule Brittania" by the company.

Mr. C. FORBES responded briefly, as did also Sergt. Johnston, who related experiences of the Crimean war and of the Indian Mutiny.

"The Governor-General and Lieutenant-Governor" was honored and followed by "Joly Good Fellows."

Mr. JAS. STEVENSON, M.P., on rising to respond, was received with loud cheers. He believed Lord Lansdowne had performed his duties satisfactorily to all parties.

On his resuming his seat, three cheers for Mr. Stevenson were called for and given with vigor.

"The Grand Lodge" was next honored.

Mr. R. SKIPPEN, of Toronto, M. W. Grand President, was warmly received. He was pleased to be present and complimented the members on their appearance. The order was formed thirteen years ago that night, and Albion Lodge was then celebrating that event in Toronto, and since it had been organized it had been very successful. He thanked them for the way they drank the toast. The Grand Officers had hard work along with the pleasures of office. The Order would be a strong one, for since the Grand Lodge meeting they had inaugurated twelve new Lodges and he had eleven on the list to open. This was the most prosperous year of the Order in its history. He referred to the origin of the Order. Thirteen years ago an English family was destitute in Toronto and they were assisted, which suggested the formation of the Order, though those who organized it did not know to what it would grow. He pointed out the social advantages of membership in the Society. It was the duty of every Englishmen to join the Order, for social and philanthropic reasons. He showed the value of the benevolent work of the Order and the manner in which the afflicted and bereaved were assisted and comforted. From small proportion it had grown, like the oak, to majestic proportions, covering the whole Dominion, and even spreading beyond it, for they had three lodges in South Africa. While they were English, they did not forget their duty to Canada. Turning again to the success of the Order, he said in Toronto they owned Shaftesbury Hall and had purchased land for another $35,000 building in the west end. He wished Lansdowne Lodge success, which it would have if they worked harmoniously together. The Grand President spoke eloquently, was frequently applauded and was loudly cheered on resuming his seat.

The President proposed "the Mayor and Corporation," which was duly honored.

Mr. STEVENSON, Mayor, thanked them heartily for the way they had received the toast. He commended the objects of the Society, which were the grandest they could aim at. He referred to the noble characteristics of Englishmen. He was loyal and hoped to live and die under the flag hanging above him (the Union Jack). Referring to the toast, he said the town was in a good position, with a light debt and low taxes, and he hoped the taxes would be down to 10 mills on the dollar next year. The Council was, he believed, working well, and the business men of Peterborough were as prosperous as any in the Dominion. He dwelt on other advantages of the town.

Councillor R. S. DAVIDSON dwelt on the prosperous financial position of the town. He also said that the Lodge, by their benevolent work, had lightened the work of the Council.

Councillor JOHN MCNAUGHTON said he honored the benevolent societies. He spoke with warmth of the privileges of poor men in Canada and made a stirring speech in a patriotic strain. He said the Town Council had done careful work, and eulogized Mr. McNeil's management of the fire department.

Councillor A. MCNEIL also responded. The objects of the Sons of England Society were all laudable ones. The Lodge had already done much good in Peterborough—no other Society, so far as he knew, had done so much in so short a time—and he believed it would do more good. Referring to Mr. McNaughton's remarks, he said he did take a little credit for the present state of the fire department. It was not accomplished without trouble, but the result was that they saved in insurance premiums between $2,000 and $3,000 a year. He reminded them that the Mayor joined the Society in benevolent work, and dispensed largely from his own funds in charity.

"The Members of Parliament" was the next toast.

Mr. J. STEVENSON, M.P., returned thanks briefly.

Mr. J. R. STRATTON, M. P. P., referred to the prominent position of Ontario in the confederation. He then dwelt upon the characteristics of Englishmen, and to the glory of English arms and the vastness of English commerce.

The President then proposed "The Learned Professions."

Dr. PIGEON referred briefly for the medical profession.

Mr. W. A. STRATTON dwelt on the benefits of education and to the labors of lawyers on behalf of liberty.

"The Ashburnham Council" was next honored.

Councillor WAND spoke of the prosperity of Ashburnham and repudiated annexation.

Councillor CALCUTT also responded. The interests of the village and town were identical and the village would be ready to join the town when the time came for them to unite and form a city.

"The Press" was then proposed.

It was responded to by Mr. J. R. Stratton and Mr. C. H. Allison, of the Examiner and Mr. S. B. Armstrong, of the REVIEW.

The GRAND PRESIDENT proposed "The President, Officers and Members of Lansdowne Lodge."

Mr. I. RICHARDSON, President, returned thanks on behalf of the Lodge.

Mr. W. BRUNDRETTE, Past President, also responded. Lansdowne Lodge, he said, was growing in members and in financial strength. He pointed out that loyalty was one of the essential principles of the Order.

Mr. THOS. GUNN, Past President, also responded. He referred to special features of the Lodge's history during the year, and closed by singing "Pulling Hard Against the Stream."

Mr. E. W. ELCOMBE, also a Past President, responded briefly.

"Our Manufacturing Industries" was proposed by the President.

Mr. A. RUTHERFORD was called on to respond. He considered the interests they had just honored the most important in the town, as with their growth the town extended. He had watched the progress of Peterborough for thirty-six years and was proud of it. Its prosperity was largely owing to its good municipal management, with which he had something to do as a Councillor for eighteen years. He dwelt for a time on the work of the Sons of England Society. They had heard of Englishmen sticking together, and he hoped they would do so on January 2nd and elect an Englishman as Mayor, a position which had been held for two years by an Irishman.

Mr. CHARLES PORTER also returned thanks for the manufacturing interests.

Mr. W. WHITTAKER sang "A Rolling Stone Gathers no Moss," and in response to an encore, "That Girl that I Call Mine."

The GRAND PRESIDENT said that there was room for two or three more lodges in Peterborough and he urged them to get all Englishmen united with the Order.

Mr. W. Barlow sang "The Englishman," Mr. Bowman "Happy as a King" and "Paving the way," and the Grand President "The White Squall." Mr. George Hardy gave "The Sailor's Amen."

"The Ladies" were toasted and found an eloquent champion in Mr. J. Carlon.

"The Host and Hostess" was received with cheers. Mr. F. J. Daly responded and bore testimony to the honor of Englishmen.

Mr. Hooper recited "The Curfew Bell" in an impressive manner.

The company dispersed, after singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen," with cheers for the Queen and the Grand President.

Personal.

Mr. T. B. Braden left town four and a half years ago, graduating from the office of school teacher to that of newspaper man. He was then fat and merry. His condition is now ditto. He is one of the proprietors of the Calgary Tribune and has been for several years. His large proportions and good nature should entitle him to aldermanic honors, though, he tells his friends he has not yet reached that dignity.

Complimentary.

At the regular meeting of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, held on Monday evening, the 12th inst., a resolution was unanimously passed, couched in very complimentary terms, expressing the sincere regret of the officers and members of the Lodge, in the loss they will sustain by the departure from Peterborough of Mr. E. J. Toker, a gentleman who has won the respect and esteem of the members generally. Mr. Toker's removal from active participation in the work of the Lodge will be keenly felt by the members of "Otonabee." The genuine expression of regret was demonstrated freely when the members of the Lodge surrounded Mr. Toker to bid him farewell. The reply of Mr. Toker was an exceedingly appropriate one.

You will miss a good deal if you do not hear MRS. YOUMANS Wednesday night in the Opera House. 2d140

BRIBERY BY AN AGENT.

The Election of Dr. Willoughby, M.P.P. for East Northumberland, Declared Void.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.

Mr. Chancellor Boyd and Mr. Justice Osler yesterday gave judgment in the matter of the petition asking that the election of Dr. Willoughby to represent East Northumberland in the Ontario Legislature be declared void on the grounds of corrupt practices.

In reading his judgment the Chancellor said that it had been decided to unseat Dr. Willoughby because of bribery by an agent. Bribery had clearly been committed, and the chief and in fact the only agent proved to have done so is Dr. Nicholas Richards, who had bribed John Noonan and Michael Shaughnessy. The chief question that was considered was whether or not Dr. Richards was an agent, and it was found that he was, for he was at the convention which nominated Dr. Willoughby, who urged his nominators to work for him. And Dr. Richards did work. Besides, he had been in personal contact with the respondent and had been seen driving about with him. The Chancellor said:

No better agency for securing voters at all times and in various directions can be devised than the utilization of a country physician's opportunities as he drives to and fro in visitation of his patients. This consideration probably explains why the medical element has cropped up so strongly in many of the recent election trials.

The Chancellor thought that perhaps Dr. Richards was guilty of more bribery than had been proven. No other agents were guilty of bribery, but many other corrupt practices had been proven, such as the bribery done by Richard Philp, although he was not proven to be an agent. The Chancellor thought that in the case of Willett Palmateer there was evidence of bribery, but from this opinion Mr. Justice Osler dissented. The incident of the spy-glass, where a certain voter was to hold his ballot up to a window, so that how he had voted could be seen by a spy-glass from a house half a mile away, was also evidence of corruption. There was also the case of Spence Ventriss who, on election day, paid Joseph Robinson $2 and then sought to prove that it was in payment of a debt due Robinson's son.

The report to the Speaker of the Legislature will certify that the election is voided because of bribery by an agent without Dr. Willoughby's consent; that Dr. Nicholas Richards, John Noonan, Michael Shaughnessy, John Calberry, Spence Ventriss, Joseph Robinson and Richard Philp, are proved guilty of corrupt practices; that there is no reason to believe that these practices extensively prevailed; and that there was none by either candidate.

THE FAT STOCK SHOW.

Opening To-Day at Grand's Repository—"The Roast Beef of Old England."

TORONTO, Dec. 13.

To-day the Fat Stock Show opens in Toronto, and as the matter has been taken up in the right quarter it is hoped that it will become an annual event in the city. Acting Mayor Frankland is sparing no exertions to make the show as great a success as possible considering the limited space at the disposal of those in charge. Grand's Repository, Adelaide-street west, is no doubt as good a place as is available, but by next year it is contemplated to have perfected some arrangements by which the fat stock show will be but one feature in a grand agricultural display. The show will be attended to-day by the students of the Veterinary College. They have also been invited to the City Hall, where Ald. Frankland will address them, and no doubt arouse an interest in a subject which is so closely connected with their profession.

To-morrow the show will be formally opened by the City Council, and in the evening the exhibitors, judges, city fathers, and prominent citizens will dine together at the Albion Hotel. The portly alderman from St. Lawrence Ward will "boss" the job, and a feature of the occasion will be a procession of waiters carrying, in old English custom, a baron of beef around the festive hall, to the music of "The Roast Beef of Old England," the ceremony being calculated to have an appetizing effect.

A Commercial Traveler on C. U.

Mr. Patterson, a Montreal commercial traveler, who spoke so effectively against Commercial Union at the Ridgetown meeting recently, stated yesterday to The World that everywhere in his travels throughout Ontario merchants and manufacturers, and farmers as soon as they understood the question, were dead against the Commercial Union fad. As far as he could take in the situation the scheme was already dead, notwithstanding the bombastic language of the Wim

Insurance Men Arrested.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 12.—Robert E. Beecher, secretary, and J. W. Hakes, chief clerk of Continental Life Insurance Company, were arrested to-day for making false returns to the Insurance Commissioner.

Twenty Rounds at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 12.—The Weir-Warren twenty-round glove fight drew about four thousand persons to the Washington rink to-night. The fight was highly exciting throughout and was declared a draw.

COUNTESS NARONA.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

THE FOURTH PART.

A man who is the successful manager of a theatre is probably the last man in the civilised universe who is capable of being impressed with favorable opinions of his fellow creatures. Francis privately set the manager down as a humbug, and the story about the numbering of the room as a lie.

On the day of his arrival he dined by himself in the restaurant, before the hour of the table d'hote, for the express purpose of questioning the waiter without being overheard by anybody. The answer led him to the conclusion that "13A" occupied the situation in the hotel which had been described by his brother as the situation of "14." He asked next for the visitors' list, and found that the French gentleman who then occupied "13A" was the proprietor of a theatre in Paris, personally well known to him. Was the gentleman then in the hotel? He had gone out, but would certainly return for the table d'hote. When the public dinner was over, Francis entered the room, and was welcomed by his Parisian colleague literally with open arms. "Come and have a cigar in my room," said the friendly Frenchman. "I want to hear whether you have really engaged that woman at Milan or not." In this easy way Francis found his opportunity of comparing the interior of the room with the description which he had heard of it at Milan.

Arriving at the door, the Frenchman bethought himself of his traveling companion. 'My scene painter is here with me," he said, "on the lookout for materials. An excellent fellow, who will take it as a kindness if we ask him to join us. I'll tell the porter to send him up when he comes in." He handed the key of his room to Francis. "I will be back in a minute. It's at the end of the corridor—13A."

Francis entered the room alone. There were the decorations on the walls and the ceiling, exactly as they had been described to him! He had just time to perceive this at a glance, before his attention was diverted to himself and his own sensations by a grotesquely disagreeable occurrence which took him completely by surprise.

He became conscious of a mysteriously offensive odor in the room, entirely new in his experience of revolting smells. It was composed (if such a thing could be) of two mingling exhalations, which were separately discoverable exhalations, nevertheless. This strange blending of odors consisted of something faintly and unpleasantly aromatic, mixed with another underlying smell, so unutterably sickening that he threw open the window and put his head out into the fresh air, unable to endure the horribly infected atmosphere for a moment longer.

The French proprietor joined his English friend with his cigar already lit. He started back in dismay at a sight terrible to his countrymen in general—the sight of an open window. "You English people are perfectly mad on the subject of fresh air!" he exclaimed. "We shall catch our deaths of cold."

Francis turned and looked at him in astonishment. "Are you really not aware of the smell there is in the room?" he asked.

"Smell!" repeated his brother manager. "I smell my own good cigar. Try one yourself. And for heaven's sake shut the window!"

Francis declined the cigar by a sign. "Forgive me," he said. "I will leave you to close the window. I feel faint and giddy—I had better go out." He put his handkerchief over his nose and mouth and crossed the room to the door.

The Frenchman followed the movements of Francis in such a state of bewilderment that he actually forgot to seize the opportunity of shutting out the fresh air. "Is it so nasty as that?" he asked, with a broad stare of amazement.

"Horrible!" Francis muttered behind his handkerchief. "I never smelled anything like it in my life!"

There was a knock at the door. The scene painter appeared. His employer instantly asked him if he smelled anything.

"I smell your cigar. Delicious! Give me one directly!"

"Wait a minute. Besides my cigar, do you smell anything else—vile, abominable, overpowering, indescribable, never-never-never smelled before!"

The scene painter appeared to be puzzled by the vehement energy of the language addressed to him. "The room is as fresh and sweet as a room can be," he answered. As he spoke he looked back with astonishment at Francis Westwick, standing outside in the corridor, and eyeing the interior of the bedchamber with an expression of undisguised disgust.

The Parisian director approached his English colleague and looked at him with grave and anxious scrutiny.

"You see, my friend, here are two of us, with as good noses as yours, who smell nothing. If you want evidence from more noses, look there!" He pointed to two little English girls at play in the corridor. "The door of my room is wide open—and you know how fast a smell can travel. Now listen, while I appeal to those innocent noses, in the language of their own dismal island. My little loves, do you sniff a nasty smell here—ha?" The children burst out laughing, and answered, emphatically, "No." "My good Westwick," the Frenchman resumed, in his own language, "the conclusion is surely plain. There is something wrong, very wrong, with your own nose. I recommend you to see a medical man."

Having given that advice, he returned to his room, and shut out the horrid fresh air with a loud exclamation of relief. Francis left the hotel by the lanes that led to the Square of St. Mark. The night breeze soon revived him. He was able to light a cigar, and to think quietly over what had happened.

CHAPTER XIX.

Avoiding the crowd under the colonnades, Francis walked slowly up and down the noble open space of the square, bathed in the light of the rising moon.

Without being aware of it himself, he was a thorough materialist. The strange effect produced on him by the room—following on the other strange effects produced on the other relatives of his dead brother—exercised no perplexing influence over the mind of this sensible man. "Perhaps," he reflected, "my temperament is more imaginative than I supposed it to be, and this is a trick played on me by my own fancy. Or, perhaps, my friend is right; something is physically amiss with me. I don't feel ill, certainly; but that is no safe criterion sometimes. I am not going to sleep in that abominable room to-night; I can well wait till to-morrow to decide whether I shall speak to a doctor or not. In the meantime, the hotel doesn't seem likely to supply me with the subject of a piece. A terrible smell from an invisible ghost is a perfectly new idea. But it has one drawback. If I realize it on the stage I shall drive the audience out of the theatre."

For forty years, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been demonstrated to be the most reliable remedy in use, for colds, coughs, and lung diseases. Slight colds should not be neglected. The Pectoral will prevent their becoming chronic.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Cott, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 434 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—Contrary to my own wishes and interests, and at the solicitation of a number of ratepayers, I again offer myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor for the year 1888, and respectfully solicit your support.

I have been associated with the interests and progress of the town for the past thirty years and during that period I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to develop the material interests of the town and to promote its welfare. If I have in these endeavours met with any degree of success worthy of recognition by the ratepayers of the town, or if I have in my capacity as Mayor for half a dozen terms looked after the interests of the town to the satisfaction of the public, I can with confidence claim a renewal of your support at the coming election.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

d137tf J. STEVENSON.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

SOUTH WARD,

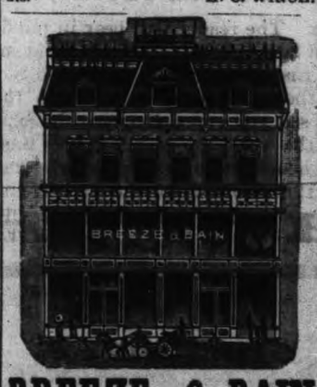
of the Town of Peterborough.



GENTLEMEN,—I beg to offer myself as a candidate for election as Councillor, to represent Ward No. 1, for the ensuing year.

Should you do me the favor to place me in that important position, I will endeavour to faithfully watch after the best interests of the ward and town generally.

I am, gentlemen,

Yours respectfully,

THE LANDLORDS CONFER.

THE DUKE OF ABERCORN IN AN ADDRESS CONDEMNS ABSENTEEISM.

A Delegation Appointed to Submit to the Government that Irish Land Owners are Entitled to Compensation for the Losses Due to Reduced Rents.

DUBLIN, Dec. 13.—The Duke of Abercorn presided at a conference of landlords held here to-day and made a speech in which he condemned absenteeism. A delegation was appointed to submit to the Government that the land owners of Ireland are entitled to compensation for the losses sustained through the action of the Government in reducing rents to a greater extent than was justified by economic causes, in depriving land owners of a reversionary interest in the occupancy of the soil, in lessening the saleable and receivable value of judicial rents and in depriving land owners of the right to obtain the best rent a solvent tenant was able to pay in the open market. The delegation will claim that the land owners are entitled to a direct pecuniary grant to compensate them for the losses, and to indirect relief in the shape of a grant to them of advances within limits which would involve no risk to the Government. Compulsory reduction of the interest on mortgages, they will insist, is unjust and impolitic, as it is impossible to distinguish between mortgages and family charges.

THE MONTREAL SENSATION.

Continuation of the Investigation Into the Charges Against the Detectives.

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—Before Judge Desnoyers to-day the investigation into the charges against Fahey, Naegele and Bureau was continued with closed doors. Mr. Elliott of the Grand Trunk Railway and Detective Maxwell were examined, the latter giving the details as to admissions made by Fahey and Naegele, and as to visits made by him to different places in his capacity as the kid who was to crack the different safes.

Some doubt is expressed as to who Detective Wilson really is. Fahey says he is not the man he represents himself to be and his record will not bear investigation. Fahey still claims that he is being persecuted.

A NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL ROUTE.

The Great International Bridge Between Canada and the States.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Dec. 13.—Within twenty days there will be completed what are known as the "Soo" Ste. Marie bridges, a series of structures of international importance, which connect Ontario with the northern peninsula of Michigan. Beginning on the American side, the first of these structures is an iron swing bridge, 400 feet long, crossing the present and the proposed Sault Ste. Marie canals. The principal bridge is that crossing St. Mary's River, 2630 feet between the abutments, and composed of ten spans, 260 feet each in length, resting on stone piers in the channel of the river. The next bridge, which is also of iron, is a drawbridge, 220 feet long, over the proposed Canadian canal along the rapids. The last of this series of bridges is a lattice-girder bridge, 106 feet long, crossing what is called the North Channel, on the Canadian side. The total length of these bridges is 3144 feet. The entire cost is placed at $1,000,000. The chief engineer is P. A. Peterson of Montreal.

The owners of the bridge are the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Company and the Minneapolis, Sault Ste. Marie and Atlantic Railway. The bridge will prove convenient and profitable to the people of the United States. It completes the connection of the Northern Pacific Railway and its extension, the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway, with the Canadian Pacific system by way of Algoma Mills and Sudbury, and with the whole eastern seaboard. Not only Ottawa, Montreal, Halifax, St. John, Portland and Boston are brought nearer the great Northwest, including St. Paul and Minneapolis, the Red River and Yellowstone regions, but New York itself is brought about 200 miles nearer by this route across the St. Lawrence, and by the south shore of Lake Superior to the places named, than by way of Chicago. That this new trans-continental route over this international bridge will become the most popular route, as it can be proven to be the shortest route from Liverpool to Japan, is among the possibilities of the future.

American Methods Won't Work There.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—A true bill for murder has been found against Dan Doherty for killing George E. Graham. This virtually seals Doherty's fate. He will undoubtedly be sentenced to be hanged at Newgate, and the execution will occur the second Monday after sentence. Doherty was arraigned to-day. He will be formally tried early in January.

They Do Not Keep a Bucket Shop.

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—A. M. Hanrahan and Frank Bond have instituted an action for libel against the proprietors of The Witness for $50,000 and $75,000 respectively. The alleged libels were contained in articles reflecting on the business conducted by the above parties and which is commonly known as bucket shop trading.

German Duty on Wheat and Rye.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The Reichstag, after a debate which lasted seven hours, rejected the proposal of the Government to raise the tax on wheat and rye to 6 marks. The vote was 238 against and 108 in favor of the measure. A proposal to make the duty 5 marks was adopted by a vote of 213 to 128.

Convicted of Embezzlement.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Pall Mall Gazette says Gen. Willoughby, until recently the Ambassador of Madagascar in London, was convicted on his return to Madagascar of the embezzlement of £42,000 and sentenced to imprisonment for an indefinite period.

High License in Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 13.—The City Council today fixed $1,500 as the cost of a retail liquor seller's license.

THE WEST MIDDLESEX ELECTION.

The Beginning of the Trial to Unseat Dr. Roome, the Conservative Member.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Strathroy Town Hall was packed to-day by an audience eager to hear the proceeding in the trial of the petition to unseat Dr. Wm. F. Roome, M.P. for West Middlesex. Mr. Justice Falconbridge presided. Messrs. S. H. Blake, Q.C., and Mr. Holman of Toronto, and Alex. Stuart of Glencoe, appeared for John McNeil, the petitioner, while H. Becher, Q.C., and W. R. Meredith of London represented Dr. Roome. There are forty-eight charges in the case, No. 37 being the first dealt with, in which it was attempted to show that W. J. Johnston, a Strathroy merchant, had promised Samuel Carroll of Adelaide money or a valuable consideration if he would vote for the respondent, and that Carroll or his wife did get $5 on that account.

Carroll was subjected to a close examination. He denied being paid any money for his vote, but stated that he received a promise from D. M. Cameron for $2.50 for his vote on the Morgan election. Cameron, however, did not keep his word and witness complained to Dr. Roome, who said he would pay witness the $2.50.

Other witnesses examined on this charge were Mrs. Carroll and John McIntosh.

The defence of this charge comes on to-morrow, when the respondent will give evidence that Carroll is a perjurer and went about trying to sell his vote.

Charge 34 was then taken up, which alleges that James Henry Marsh of Ekfrid paid Gustave Helm $5 for his vote.

Helm testified that Marsh never solicited his vote, but gave him $5 with which to bet.

W. D. McGregor and Mr. Swaist, both of the West Middlesex Conservative Association, testified that no money was given out by them and that James H. Marsh was not even a member of a committee.

In defence of charge 34, Angus Campbell testified that Marsh was not a member of the Conservative committee.

Dr. Roome's evidence clearly stated that Marsh was not authorized to work for respondent and was connected in no way with the organization of the riding.

Further evidence was submitted that no money for bribery, betting or anything illegal was either raised or spent by any of the agents or committees.

The court adjourned until to-morrow.

SIR A. P. CARON ON C.U.

The Minister of Militia Speaks at Victoria, B.C., Against the Fad.

In the course of his speech at the banquet given him in Victoria, B.C., the subject of Commercial Union was taken up by Sir Adolphe Caron. The Mayor's remarks had forced this course upon him. He said that he believed in our own institutions. Those of the Province of Quebec were peculiar ones, and guaranteed to the people there by the treaties made many years ago between the two nations, Great Britain and France. The question was a theoretical one. If to-day the connection which exists between Canada and England should be severed, he thought it would be replaced by the annexation of Canada to the United States. Whatever our future may be, he believed that if left to the people of Canada they never could go in for annexation. From all he was able to judge the Americans did not desire Commercial Union; such was his opinion from reading the leading journals of the United States, which were exponents of public opinion. He believed that if Commercial Union means anything, it means annexation with the United States, and he was prepared to say that, in his province at least, it would be impossible to get a vote of the people to disturb any arrangements which have been proved to have been so satisfactory in the interests of Canada. Canada does not want it, and England would not consent to it. Our connection with the Mother Country gave us many advantages, such as the protection of her flag and her arms, and her admirable consular system throughout the world. So far as form of government was concerned, we were the freest of people, for we had it within ourselves to put out any government believed not to be acting for the best interests of the country.

The Charter of the Board of Trade.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.—Mr. Ince, President of the Toronto Board of Trade, had an interview with Mr. A. Power, Acting Deputy Minister of Justice, to-day with reference to some amendments to its charter desired by the board. The board desires to have the power of its arbitrators enlarged, so that they can take sworn testimony and their decisions have equal force to a rule of court.

Mr. Power suggested that the wishes of the board should be submitted in writing, and promised that the matter should then be brought under the notice of the Minister of Justice.

A Chinese Industry.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—Wong Ah Hung, who is said to be a wealthy Chinese merchant, was convicted in the United States District Court to-day on a charge of importing two Chinese women for immoral purposes. A number of similar cases have been brought to the attention of the Federal courts recently. From records seized among the baggage of the women and from testimony given in court it was disclosed that there was a regular traffic in young women and that they were purchased in China for from $200 to $600 each.

Municipal Elections in Boston.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—The vote polled in the municipal election here to-day aggregated 51,487, which is larger than any municipal vote since 1883. Of this number for Mayor, O'Brien (Dem.), the present incumbent, received 26,623; Hart (Rep. and Ind.), 24,864. The labor vote failed to materialize. The city has undoubtedly been carried for license.

Emergency Men Acquitted.

DUBLIN, Dec. 13.—The seven emergency men charged with manslaughter in killing John Kinsella near Coolgranay, on Sept. 23, have been acquitted.

SUPREME COURT AFFAIRS.

JUDGMENTS DELIVERED IN SEVERAL CASES RECENTLY ARGUED.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Expects to Get a Big Share of the Grain Carrying Business of the West When the Bridge at Sault Ste. Marie is Built.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.—The Supreme Court today delivered judgments in some of the cases recently argued. The most important was that of the Attorney-General of British Columbia v. the Attorney-General of Canada, involving the right of the Dominion Government to the precious metals in the railway lands ceded by the Provincial Government at the time the province entered confederation. Judgment was in favor of the Dominion Government, Chief Justice Ritchie, Judges Strong and Gwynne agreeing, and Judges Henry and Fournier dissenting. It is understood that the case will be taken to the Privy Council. Judgment was also given in the case of McQueen v. The Crown, an appeal made by a Mr. McQueen of this city for a return of some eighty acres of land, including Cartier-square, appropriated by the Government for the Rideau Canal at the time of the building but not used. The appeal was dismissed. The Dominion Government has therefore won two important suits to-day. In the case of Bender v. Carver the appeal was dismissed without costs.

Mr. T. G. Shaughnessy, Assistant General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated to-day that supply trains are already running over the new section between Algoma Mills and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. A regular passenger and freight service will be inaugurated in about a month, when the International Bridge at the "Soo" will be completed. Mr. Shaughnessy expects the C.P.R. will get a big share of the grain carrying business from the Western States. Sault Ste. Marie, he thinks, has a great future before it owing to the splendid water power there.

The arbitration case of Mr. A. P. Macdonald for $240,000 extras in connection with the Tay Canal contract was commenced to-day before Mr. John Page, Chief Engineer of Government canals.

On Thursday next the Christmas vacation in the Supreme and Exchequer courts commences, when the offices will be open from 11 to 12 in the morning only. The vacation terminates on Jan. 3.

A BAD MAN'S GRATITUDE.

He Assaults the Man who Befriended Him and Tries to Murder Him.

MONTREAL, Dec. 13.—In the Court of Special Sessions this morning, before Judge Dugas, Joseph Chapleau, aged 21, was arraigned on a charge of attempting murder. It appears that the accused had been a member of the 65th Regiment and had been in active service in the Northwest. He deserted from the regiment and joined the American navy. He again deserted and came to Montreal. An old friend of his, Francois Vernette, a grocer in a large way of business, took compassion on him and boarded him. Knowing that Mr. Vernette had a considerable amount of money in his safe he resolved to burglarize it. Accordingly he procured a revolver and dagger and entered the premises on Nov. 23. Mr. Vernette was aroused and came into the shop to see what was the matter when the prisoner closed with him and gave him seventeen stabs with the dagger. The police were called in, and after a struggle the prisoner was arrested. In court he pleaded that his father was in debt and that he merely wanted to get the money to pay off his parent's obligations. He only gave his friend Vernette a few dabs with the dagger to frighten him and make him quiet. He never intended to kill him. His Honor said he would find him guilty and would give sentence on Thursday.

FERRY SHOT INTO POPULARITY.

President Carnot Presents His First Message to the Deputies.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The Times' Paris special says Ferry seems not to have been seriously wounded, despite the pessimistic bulletins. The attempt on his life has made him, for the moment, a far bigger figure than Carnot, the new President. People are saying that it is a great pity if he had to be shot at that the thing was not done a day or two before Congress, when his election would have been certain. Although The Republique Francaise and all the reactionary papers talked about the necessity of suspending the press laws, muzzling The Lanterne, Intransigeant and the rest of the Anarchist sheets, no such thing is likely to be seriously proposed. It is said Tirard's Ministry will not last out the week.

President Carnot's Message.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—President Carnot's message was submitted to the Chambers to-day. In it he advocates a policy of concord and appeasement, and urges the adoption of practical reforms for the improvement of the finances. The Chambers, he says, in assisting the Government to execute this program will give Europe a precious pledge of France's ardent desire to contribute to the consolidation of a general peace and to facilitate the development of good foreign relations.

Powderly Seriously Ill.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—General Master Workman Powderly had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs yesterday at Scranton. He is better today and resting quietly.

This evening Mr. Powderly's physician reports that he is greatly improved with fair prospects of ultimate recovery. He is now able to sit up for an hour or so at a time and converses with intimate friends who call to see him.

For forty years, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been demonstrated to be the most reliable remedy in use, for colds, coughs, and lung diseases. Slight colds should not be neglected. The Pectoral will prevent their becoming chronic.

THE DOMINION SENATE.

One of the proposals of the recent conference at Quebec that has not met with the unanimous approval of the friends of its members is the scheme for altering the constitution of the Senate. The plan proposed by the conference is, in brief, that half of the members be appointed as they are now, that the other half be selected by the Provinces, and that the terms be limited.

A complaint against the Senators, from Reform sources, have been that they were subservient to the Government. If this were true, limiting their terms of office would not make them more independent of the Government, which would then have the power of depriving them of their seats when their terms expired. As it is now, the Senators are as independent of the Government as are the judges on the bench. At the same time it is not certain that a good legislator will always retain his aptitude for legislative work or remain a good representative. A judge who becomes unable to properly perform his duties may be superannuated, while if he were a Senator, though not capable of serving the people to advantage, he would still hold his seat. While there is not a pressing need for the change, the suggestion is one that might reasonably be taken into consideration.

The other part of the scheme—regarding the selection of members—is more complicated, and it is not so easy to ascertain how it would work in practice. The selection of Dominion legislators being in the hands of the Legislatures would tend to confuse Dominion and Provincial politics and to distract attention from purely Provincial affairs, while the fact is that the people, of Ontario at any rate, do not give any too much attention to the business of the Province. Besides, there would be a danger of a feeling arising that the nominated and elected members were separate bodies representing different interests, which would not tend to promote harmony in the Senate or in the country. It might even afford further opportunities for mischief for those who now try to promote discord and to arouse a sectional feeling in opposition to a national sentiment.

Experience seems to teach that no perfect system of government by two houses of parliament has been devised, and it does not appear that the Quebec conference has accomplished the work of devising such a system.

Sound principles have made an immense advance when a president of the United States tells Congress that the price to consumers of imported articles is increased by precisely the amount paid as import duty on such articles.—Toronto Globe.

So? Then the Canadian farmers, fishmen and lumbermen do not pay the duty on the grain, cattle, fish and lumber they send to the United States, and the effect of Commercial Union on these articles would simply be to cheapen them to the United States consumers. If this is sound principles, and the Globe has said it is, what becomes of all the arguments of Mr. Wiman, Mr. Fuller, Prof. Smith and the other advocates of the Union? They are trying to mislead the farmers of Canada, but the President and the Globe have ruthlessly exposed the deception.

English cottons, prints, woollen goods, porcelain and hardware, would come in without being subjected to the customs taxes. Is this what the friends of the national policy demand?—London Advertiser.

We have not heard of that demand from friends of the National Policy. We have heard, though, of discussions in Canada and in England, of a scheme of Imperial reciprocity, by which Canada would discriminate in favor of English or British goods, England and other parts of the Empire giving Canadian goods the same favourable treatment.
